NEW LAW'S EFFECT

Mayor's Instructions are That Policemen and Firemen in Uniform Ride Free.

BUT COPS PAY THEIR FARE.

Passengers Cannot Take Big Packages On Trolley Cars, Which Makes It a Hardship For Many.

The public utilities law went into effect today. Notwithstanding the fact that Mayor G. W. V. Moy instructed Chief of Police Kiely to allow the policemen to ride on the local trolley cars when in full uniform, consistent with the letter the Mayor received from President Thomas N. McCarter, of the P. S. C., last week, the policemen, it is said, were given orders by Chief Kiely at headquarters this morning not to ride on the trolley cars without paying carfare.

Mayor Moy called up Chief Kiely on the telephone at headquarters and inquired into the matter and the latter stated, it is said, that following a talk with Superintendent Gettings, of the P. S. C., and Councilman C. C. Randolph, yesterday, he, the chief, thought it best to instruct the men that they had better pay their carfare, both Mr. Gettings and Mr. Randolph believing that to be the best course to pursue pending a settlement of the matter.

The Mayor, it is said, told the chief that he understood he was taking his orders from some one else, and that was all he cared to know. Subsequently, it is said, Chief Kiely explained the situation to Mr. Moy, adding that he took his orders from the chief executive and that if he said the men should ride he would instruct them accordingly. It is said, however, that the men were instructed this morning not to ride on the cars without paying their fare.

Mayor Moy tried to get a ruling from the attorney-general today, but the latter was away from his office and the necessary information was not obtainable. Chief Doane of the fire department received similar instructions from Mayor Moy and expects to follow the orders, that is of allowing the firemen in full uniform to ride.

Other persons affected by the new law received word today from the P. S. C. that they nor anyone else would be permitted to carry anything with them on a trolley car that could not be held on their lap or placed on a seat. This will prevent the carrying of any large bundles on the rear platforms. Street Commissioner Gavett and his men will be prevented from carrying transits or other implements used by surveyors on trolley cars and it is said that in many instances the law will work a hardship. The cars will not be permitted to carry newspapers between towns, as heretofore, and other methods will have to be adopted.

Mayor Moy in speaking of the new law today, said that he believed that the whole matter in dispute would be taken to the courts for a decision to clear up many points.

All passes issued by the company became void today.

STILLMAN SCHOOL'S PUPILS AS THESPIANS

The presentation of "Ali Baba or the Forty Thieves" presented by the pupils of Stillman School in the High School auditorium on Saturday night was witnessed by a capacity audience. The play was in three acts and was handsomely staged. Between the acts Miss Elmina Eason, one of the teachers, and who coached the players, was presented with a gift of appreciation by the members of the cast, all of whose names were printed in Saturday's Daily Press.

The play was well acted and heartily applauded. The pupils who took the leading characters in the play made a specially good impression. A solo dance by Rebecca Meyers and a duet dance by Dorothy Butler and Morris VanBuren pleased the large number of people present. Irving Manley sang delightfully two solos and the chorus work was especially pleasing.

Miss Eason deserved great credit for the manner in which she conducted the training which brought such good results.

CHARITY SOCIETY'S REPORT FOR APRIL

The executive secretaries of the Charity Organization Society report a busy month in April, when 127 families claimed the services or attention of the society. In relief work $218.22 was expended among these applicants for clothing, provisions, rent and so forth. One item, alone, being $50.80 for milk. Two hundred and eighty-three persons consulted the secretaries on questions of relief, and the secretaries made 405 calls, and wrote 231 letters, receiving 134.

If the Charity Organization Society were allowed to preach a sermon on the basis of the above statistics, its text would be the single word "co-operation." It is with genuine gratification, that it finds its new rooms in the Babcock building are becoming a veritable center for the relief work of the community. Nearly every day, some organization or committee uses the directors' room for a meeting. And such "getting-together" cannot fail to bear fruit they say for the poorer suffering. One particular instance of co-operation, in this case of the police, may be cited for the past month: A blind man, a woman whom he called his wife, and a boy whom he called his son were referred to the society as worthy of assistance. He declared that he could not afford to buy a license to play his hand organ and so could not earn any money to live here or go upon his way. The Charity Organization soon learned from other cities that all the man's claims were false, the woman was not his wife, and the boy was not his son. The couple gave up the boy and were allowed to go away from town.

Another agency with which the Charity Organization constantly co-operates, is the Anti-Tuberculosis League. This society and the Charity Organization have contributed a sufficient sum so that one family in which two of the three members have tuberculosis, is enabled to take a small shack on the mountain side, and there the patients are steadily improving.

The society has continued to co-operate with the city in all cases where public relief is possible. In the handling of cases where children are neglected some difficulty has been experienced by both the society and the city on account of inadequate legislation. In cases of tuberculosis, however, the city has been able to provide relief at the societies' request, in a number of instances thereby not only relieving the person's distress, but safe-guarding the community from infection. Several meetings have been held between the Charity Organization Society, the poor and alms committee and the overseer-of-the-poor, to consider several problems for the treatment of tuberculosis and of charity cases, and a basis of cooperation has been established for future work, along broader lines than heretofore.

BARN NEAR THEATRE AFIRE, DRAWS CROWD

A barn on the George Voehl property and located in Pruden's alley thirty feet from the stage entrance to the Plainfield theatre, caught fire in some unknown way, Saturday night. The streets in the business section were filled with smoke nearly fifteen minutes before the source was discovered by a citizen. An alarm from box 12 brought all the downtown apparatus to the scene and one of the biggest crowds of rubbernecks that ever bossed a blaze. The streets were alive with the usual week-end throng and it seemed to center at the Front and Second street entrances to the alley. The firemen were hampered in their work until the police drove the sightseers out of the way.

The barn is leased by L. Kornfield, who is the present proprietor of the Voehl bakery, and all his delivery horses were in the structure. These were gotten out safely with one exception. The animal was directly under an opening to the loft from which blazing hay dropped upon its head, inflicting severe burns The fire was on the second floor and was held there. It contained about two tons of hay, all of which had to be turned over and saturated to kill the last sparks. Four streams of water were kept going for over an hour.

The barn is of brick, otherwise a bad fire might have resulted. It is in close proximity to Trinity church, the Endress Company's barn and other structures. As it was, the flames did not get outside at all or even to the first floor to amount to anything. The loss on the structure is about $300 and on contents $100, both covered by insurance.

The first act of "A Stubborn Cinderella" was in progress at the Plainfield theatre at the time the alarm was turned in. When the fire apparatus dashed through the alley with its accompanying jargon of bells and shouts there was a perceptible stir in the audience. The orchestra leader quickly rapped for a lively match number and a good part of the noise was drowned out. About half the gallery patrons scampered out but practically all the people in the lower part of the house remained.

Chief Doane made a thorough investigation yesterday, but was unable to secure any definite information as to what might have started the blaze.

SOCIAL CLUB PRESENTS PLAY

Society women of Westfield scored a hit in the presentation of "Mrs. Bagg's Bargain Day," a two-act farce-comedy, at the Washington High School assembly hall, Westfield, Friday evening.

The star of the cast was Mrs. P. D Collins as Mrs. Bagg. She was supported by W. P. Eastman, of Mountainside, as Mr. Bagg, and Harry Lee King, of New York, as Mr. Talkhard, and a cast of thirteen characters, including cashboys, clerks, maids and porters.

The two acts of the play were laid in a department store and at Mrs. Bagg's living rooms. The many amusing incidents of the comedy were greatly enjoyed by the large audience, which was liberal in its applause.

The cast of characters was as follows: Madeline Bagg, Miss Katherine Dietz, Julie Bagg, Miss Jocelyn Watts; Benny Bagg, Master Allen Bunce; Billy Bagg, Lindemann Collins; Mrs. Belmont, Mrs. Eastman; Mrs. Pankhurst, Mrs. E. H. Faulkner; Mrs, Pettit, Mrs. J. A. Worth, Mrs. Short, Mrs. C. C. Beard; Mrs. Fraud, Mrs. E. B. Proudfit; Mrs. De Leigh, Mrs. F. B. Sanborn; Mrs. Lingre, Mrs. M. E. Newcomb; Mrs. Waite, Mrs. Charles Hinchman; Mrs. Sloboy, Mrs. F. W. Smith; Mr. Talkhard, Harry Lee King; Mr. Bagg, W. P. Eastman; Mrs. Bagg, Mrs. P. D. Collins; cashboys, clerks, maids, porters, etc.

The music was furnished by the Symfunny Orchestra, of which Councilman Mosher was leader, assisted by Alfred M. Best. The play was given under the direction of the Woman's Club and the proceeds deposited as the first instalment of a fund for the erection of a building by the club at a future date as its home.

The committee in charge of the play comprised Mrs. J. E. Cutler, chairman; Mrs. T. D. Bunce, stage manager; Mrs. Robert I. Richardson, Mrs. F. F. McClintock, Mrs. W. R. Davis and Mrs. Alfred A. Watt.

MASONS ON STRIKE

The Hod Carriers, Too, Quit Work Today Asking for Higher Wages.

BOSSES REFUSE THE DEMANDS.

Only About Eighty Men Are Affected—Bosses Threaten to Declare "Open Shop" If Journeymen Don't Return to Work.

According to the announcement made several weeks ago, all the union masons and hod-carriers in the city went on strike for higher pay today. The number of men affected is about eighty in all. There are no large building contracts underway at the present time so that the bosses are not hampered as bad as they might be.

The strikers ask for an increase of forty cents a day for the masons, making their pay $5.20 for eight hours, and twenty cents a day for hod-carriers, raising their day rate from $2.80 to $3. The men claim that the scale is what is being given elsewhere and only squares the pay of other trades in the course of a year because of the limited season they have to work.

Captain W. C. Smith, one of the bosses, declared today that the demands of the men would not be granted. The contractors, he said, would declare an "open shop' and secure union men from other places. He asserted that the present rate of $4.80 is higher than is paid in New Brunswick, where the masons received $4.40. Mr. Smith is building the new county record building at the latter place and has been employing Plainfield men on the job. He also had a few New Brunswick masons. The Plainfielders quit today but the others remained. The latter have asked for $4.80 a day and the matter has been referred to the international union and the men have agreed to work until its decision is rendered.

Another contractor said today that all the union men needed for local work can be secured from Philadelphia at $4.80 a day.

One important job affected by the strike is the new St. Joseph's church in the borough, while the re-building of the Iroquois Hotel is another. Both are held by Cuniff Brothers, who figured on the $4.80 rate in bidding for the work. The payment of $5.20 would mean quite a loss to them. It is reported that several of the smaller bosses who hire only two or three men and do repair work mostly have agreed to the forty cent increase.

TWO WOMEN HURT IN AN AUTO ACCIDENT

While passing through Bound Brook in Mr. Townsend's car, which was running slowly, Mrs. W. R. Townsend and Mrs. Peter V. Martin were thrown out yesterday afternoon when Mr. Townsend steered the machine into a ditch and crossing in his effort to avoid striking a quartette of motorcyclists coming in the posite direction.

The machine, as Mr. Townsend applied the brakes, instead of stopping jumped clean over the ditch, ran through a barbed wire fence and crossing a brook, landed up against a stone wall, precipitating Mrs. Townsend and Mrs. Martin over the side of the car onto the ground.

Today both women are nursing badly bruised bodies and Mrs. Martin is suffering from a severe scalp wound in the forehead and Mrs. Townsend is bruised considerably about the limbs. Mr. Townsend escaped with a shaking up. The car was somewhat damaged, but was in good enough condition to be brought to Plainfield under its own power.

Mr. Townsend said this morning that if it had not been that he did not take the jump from the roadway just as he did to avoid two other motorcyclists he and his party would never have lived to tell the tale. He blamed the first of the quartet for having turned his motorcycle directly in front of the automobile, thus taking all the road and preventing him from making the proper turn at the right time.

When the car jumped the ditch Mr. Townsend steered it against the posts of the barbed wired fence, taking six of the posts of the fence with him. A stone abutment of the bridge confronted him and in order to prevent the death of all his party he turned the machine into the dry creek. When the car stopped he looked back and saw his wife and Mrs. Martin lying side by side in the dry bed of the creek. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Saunders, of Rahway, who passed at the moment, helped him to put the injured women in Mr. Saunders' machine and they were hurried to the office of Dr. Chas. Halstead, in Somerville, where the wounds of Mrs. Martin were dressed and first aid was given to both.

Mr. Hand will divide it into three lots, two of sixty-five feet each and one of fifty-five. The two houses will be built on the larger ones. They will be colonial in architecture, but on widely divergent designs. One has been designed by Oakley and Son, of Elizabeth, and is to cost $12,000. The other is from plans furnished by W. H. Clum, of this city, and is to be worth $10,-600. Each is to have three bath rooms, parquet floors and other improvements. They are to be completed by August 15.

The residence costing the lesser amount is to be built especially for Mr. Hand's daughter, Mrs. J. W. Drayton. Mr. and Mrs. Drayton will occupy it as soon as completed. The other house will be either sold or leased.

Braider, the retiring organist, with a costly cut-glass silver mounted water pitcher, as an evidence of the appreciation of his services for ten years as organist of the church. Rev. Dr. C. E. Commencing next Sunday, Mr. Braider will be the organist at the First M. E. church, and he will be succeeded by H. J. Harold. Mr. Braider's quartet at the First M. ROBERT PATTERSON DIES AT PORTCHESTER

Robert Patterson, a former resident of West Dunellen and widely known in this city, died yesterday at his home in East Portchester, N. Y. Word of the demise came to Plainfield this morning, but no details were given. The funeral will be held at his late residence, Belle Haven avenue, East Portchester, Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. Burial will be at the convenience of the family.

Mr. Patterson was in his fifty-fourth year and is survived by his wife. He resided on the Martin Dunn farm at West Dunellen at the time of the Westfield wreck in 1903. His son, Harvey L. Patterson was a victim of the disaster and the parents were so affected they moved to their old home at Porchester to evoid continual reminders of their bereavement. The son was a member of Perseverance lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and through a delegation the body to the cemetery at Rye, N. Y., a warm friendship sprung up between the local lodge men and the Portchester Pythians, the elder Mr. Patterson belonging to the latter. Fraternal visits were exchanged for many years. The Plainfielders were always entertained at the Patterson home when they were in Portchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Patterson, as a memorial to their son, gave the baptismal founts now in use at Hope chapel, in which they were interested.

It is possible that a delegation of local Pythians and other friends will attend the funeral.

CRACKED LAMP GIVES FIREMEN AN EARLY RUN

An alarm was turned in from box 23 at 5:32 yesterday morning, for a slight fire in the home of Salvator Toletto, 334 East Fourth street. The family claims a lamp "exploded" and spread blazing oil about the room. The flames were noticed by a neighbor who pulled the box. There was nothing much for the firemen to do on their arrival but the Tolettos were busy dumping all their furniture out of the second story windows. They refused to let up until positive assurance was given that there was no danger.

Chief Doane explained the "explosion" by saying that the bowl of the lamp had gotten over-heated and cracked apart. The damage will probably reach $25.

CARD GAME FIGHT

EMILIO BURGAZIO A FUGITIVE.

Quarrel Over Card Game Gives Police a Fruitless Hunt—Victim Shot Thrice—Much Excitement in the East End.

As a result of a card game in the cellar at 821 George street yesterday afternoon Andrew Alexander, 19 years old, is in Muhlenberg hospital suffering from three pistol wounds, and Emilio Burgazio, at whose home the fracas took place is a fugitive from justice. The affray occurred shortly after 5 o'clock and it is believed beer or other liquor was responsible for the trouble.

As far as can be ascertained by the police six men were engaged in playing cards in the cellar of Burgazio's home, having started the game early in the afternoon. A dispute arose over a play and there was a general mixup in which Frank Stralio, a half brother of the assailant wanted by the police, was struck on the head and face by Alexander. In the midst of the fight it is alleged that Burgazio went upstairs and securing his revolver threatened to shoot the whole bunch, either singly or two at a time.

Alexander becoming frightened at the warlike attitude of Burgazio made his escape from the house and started toward a nearby field. Burgazio by this time was furious. He followed the fleeing man to the corner of the street and fired one shot which took effect in Alexander's left leg. As he reeled and fell two more shots rang out and both bullets found their way into Alexander's anatomy, both lodging in his groin.

There was an immediate cry to capture the shooter and although more than a hundred residents of the neighborhood rushed to their front doors and thence to the scene none offered to intercept Burgazio, who made a quick getaway through the adjoining woods. Since then no trace of him has been found. It is believed that he made his way over toward Sterling and a search is being made in that direction as well as over other parts of the State.

Chief Kiely, who conducted the search for Burgazio in person, managed to get two of the men who were engaged in the card game and Frank Stralio, of George street, is being detained at headquarters as a material witness. Andrew Mango, who it was alleged was playing in the game of cards, was questioned by the chief and a description of the fugitive was obtained.

Burgazio has a wife and three children and it appears has always borne a good reputation. The injured man is not married.

Immediately after the shooting police headquarters was notified and the patrol wagon sent on the run to the scene. Chief Kiely was accompanied by a platoon of patrolmen and he at once sperad his men over the surrounding territory in an endeavor to catch Burgazio. In the darkness the latter got away. A thorough search of the Italian colony was instituted including the place known as the "Spite House" on Johnson avenue, but without result.

It was said this afternoon at the hospital that Alexander would recover. The bullets had been extracted and the chances of septic poisoning had become practically nil.

TO SELL 2,000 TICKETS FOR "THE HENRIETTA"

An outside advance sale of tickets, to be exchanged for seats, is now going on for "The Henrietta,' the benefit play to be given by the Park Comedy Club at the Plainfield theatre, May 18-19, by a committee of women from the Anti-Tuberculosis League. These women have undertaken the disposal of 2,000 tickets and reports that have come in show that these will all be disposed of by Monday, May 8, when the regular sale and exchange for reserved seats of these tickets sold will begin. The time is 4 o'clock and the place, at the box-office of the theatre.

William N. Runyon will act as chairman of a committee of three who will be present at the opening sale of seats and bear witness to the rule of no advance reservations and first come first served. It is said that the play of "The Henrietta" is full of contrasts and those who have attended the more recent rehearsals say that the fun makers in the cast are many and excellent, while the more serious roles are taken with all the skill of more experienced players.

The scene in the third act between DeWitt P. Brokaw, Charles H. Lyman and William Flanders will, it is said, show a dramatic situation, difficult in the extreme, handled in a wonderful manner.

WESTFIELD.

Westfield Board of Trade has practically decided not to hold a dinner this year. The president of the board, Congressman Tuttle, is out of town most of the time, and it is not definitely known how long his business at Washington will keep him.

Special exercises have been arranged at all of the public schools for Arbor Day. There will be tree planting at each of the schools.

PUBLIC UTILITY LAW IN EFFECT TODAY

Admitted by friend and foe to be the most advanced legislation of its kind in the country, the new public utility law of New Jersey will go into effect today.

Already interpretations have been put upon various sections of the act by the public utility interests, but these are unofficial. It remains for the official action of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners before the full results of the enforcement of the law shall be made apparent.

Two provisions stand out above all the others. One of these gives to the commissioners general supervision over all the utility concerns in the State, including power to fix rates; the other fixes upon the officers and directors of these companies not only corporate but personal and individual responsibility and liability for any violation of the many sections of the law.

The incorporation of the personal liability provision in the law was insisted upon by Governor Wilson. The enactment of it carries out in statutory form the doctrine that the Governor preached in his campaign. It is perhaps the most striking feature of the law. Only in the Interstate Commerce act is a similar provision to be found. There, however, the section is so loosely drawn that it is generally regarded as inoperative and ineffective. In this law there is no such weakness. The provision is blunt and plain.

What the new act in its entirety really means is something that is not generally understood. Its significance and effect depend a good deal upon the point from which it is viewed.

This has been made apparent in the last few days in the announcement by the Public Service Corporation of its interpretation with reference to free transportation, holding that it cannot issue passes to any persons, except its own officers and employes; not even to policemen and firemen for use in the discharge of their duties.

The Public Service has also taken a definite stand, barring from its cars bundles of newspapers. Besides affecting the newspaper publications to a more or less degree, this ruling will apply much more to newsdealers, many of whom have been in the habit of obtaining their papers direct from the newspaper offices and taking the bundles with them on the cars. This practise the Public Service declares it cannot permit, beginning today, according to the way it interprets the law.

Under the act a "public utility" is so defined as to include every individual, co-partnership, association, corporation, or joint stock company that now or hereafter owns, operates, manages, or controls within the State any steam railroad, street railway, traction railway, canal, express, subway, pipe-line, gas, electric light, heat, power, water, oil, sewer, telephone telegraph system, plant or equipment for public use.

Over all these concerns section 15 gives the commissioners general supervision. In the same section they are also given jurisdiction and control over the property, property rights, equipment, facilities and franchises of these companies so far as may be necessary for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the law.

Of interest to consumers, particularly gas and electric light consumers, is the section which provides the means for them to have tested any appliances of a public utility concern for measuring its product or service. It is required that the consumer, in making his complaint, must pay the fee fixed by the Board of Public Utility Commissioners, but if the appliance tested is found defective the fee will be repaid.

Inferentially, if the complaint proves to be unfounded the consumer must lose the fee that he paid. Where this fee is returned to the complainant it must be paid by the utility concern whose appliances are found at fault.

To facilitate the making of these examinations and tests the law provides that the commissioners by their agents, experts or examiners may enter upon the premises of any utility concern for the purpose of conducting these investigation and that in doing the latter work they may set up and use such apparatus as may be necessary.

The Mission Study Class of the First M. E. church will have charge of the meeting at the Plainfield Rescue Mission on Thursday night.

Our Annual May Sale of Undermuslins

INCLUDING FRENCH, AUSTRIAN, MADERIA AND AMERICAN MADE GARMENTS.

To dwell in extended manner upon the many merits and advantages of these important annual trade events is really superfluous—as the public has become so familiar with them and their legions of extraordinary presentations that merely the citation of the bare price facts alone would be sufficient in itself to crowd our muslin underwear department.

In no previous May Sale have we had assortments quite so gigantic, or such a broad variety of splendid styles, while the values are unquestionably sufficiently tempting to impel every woman to lay in a full season's supply.

Finds Historic Flag in Attic.

Bound Brook, May 1.—Hidden for more than forty years in an old trunk in his attic, an old homespun American flag, which family legend declared was carried in the War of the Revolution, was brought to light Friday by Joseph L. Morris Du Four, a sergeant in the Union army during the Civil War, now living here. The flag was originally the property of Captain Thomas Morris, of Smyrna, Del., and is of the pattern adopted by resolution of the Continental Congress June 14, 1777, decreeing that the flag of the United States be of thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, with a union of thirteen white stars on a blue field. The official type of that flag has the thirteen stars in a circle. Mr. Du Four's relic was home made. Rebecca Morris Bacon, daughter of Captain Morris, gave it to the present owner in 1869.

—Alexander D. Galloway, formerly connected with the Plainfield Business College, has resigned that position to accept one as private secretary to Frederick R. Phillips, general superintendent of the Quincey-Manchester-Sargeant Company and the Saurer Motor Company. Hugh B. The preparatory service will be held at the Crescent Avenue church Wednesday evening. Rev. Dr. Samuel T. Carter, of this city, will be in charge.

BESLER CRITICIZES THE UTILITIES ACT

Proprietors and editors of newspapers published along the lines of the Central Railroad of New Jersey in Pennsylvania and this State, were the Asbury Park guests of the Central Railroad Saturday, which by the way will probably be the last affair of the kind owing to the new Public Utilities Act in effect today, and the annual outing arranged for the newspaper men each year by the company.

There were about 200 newspaper men and their families in the party, and they spent an enjoyable day. The special train conveying the party at the park arrived shortly before noon, and after a ride around the city on five special trolley cars, dinner was had at the Coleman House. An exhibition drill by the Asbury Park fire department served to amuse the guests, before dinner, and an automoblie trip through one or two neighboring towns, wound up the day.

W. C. Hope, general passenger agent of the Central, was toastmaster at the luncheon. The speakers were Mayor T. Frank Appleby, who extended to the newspapermen a hearty welcome; J. L. Lyle Kinmouth, editor of the Asbury Park Evening Press, who made the response, and W. G. Bessler, vice-president of the Central, who made a long address in which he alluded in strong terms to what he styled the "Injustice of the Pass System in this State."

"Concerning the matter of free transportation furnished to officers of this State and which the railroad companies are requested under the law to provide," Mr. Besler said, "we have forwarded on official request from the secretary of State of New Jersey 233 passes. Yet the very stockholders who own the property are prohibited from receiving and traveling on passes.

"I have not been able to convince myself that railroads should be called upon to furnish this free transportation to the Legislature and to other public officials of the State of New Jersey. If these passes which are issued were used exclusively and conscientiously in the serving of the State there might be a better excuse for them, but the fact of the matter is that the passes are used for commercial purposes, commutation and every time the holder wants to travel. One of the first questions asked by a certain politician who had just been elected was 'When do I get my pass?'

"I do not believe that it is fair or just that the State of New Jersey should call upon the railroads, which pay the bulk of the taxes within the State, for free transportation for its officials, any more than a manufacturing concern should be asked to distribute its products gratis. The State is well able to pay for the tranportation of its officials and there is no good reason why it should not do so. Because of the enactment of the Public Utilities bill, the Central Railroad will not be able to give the newspaper men these outings in the future."

The automobile trip was in the nature of a surprise and was arranged by the business men of Asbury Park. It was the first time that the editors had received any attentions from the municipalities to which the railroad people have taken them on these annual outings, and the ride was appreciated. Forty-two cars lined up at the curb on Ocean avenue, by the Casino, and led by President George W. Pittinger, of the Asbury Park Board of Trade, the cars strung out in a long line and made a rapid run as far west as Nordicas bungalow, back of Deal, and through Deal and Allenhurst. Each car bore a pennant.

Only one mishap occurred. The car owned by Charles E. Schanck had a punctured fire on Rosedale avenue, Deal, and his passengers had to be transferred to another car. The delay came near causing the party to miss the special train, which left at 3:55, but the station was made just in time. Those from this city in the party were Charles H. Frost and daughters, Marion and Dorothy Frost; Mlle. St. Marie, Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins and daughter, Emma G. Dobbins.

No one on the American stage commands more attention than Grace George. In "Sauce For the Goose" she plays the role of a young wife neglected by her husband. The young wife—keen of wit, clever, coquettish and yet with a charming assumption of childlike innocence—pretends to start a flirtation with a mutual friend and finally brings her recalcitrant husband to terms by convincing him that what is sauce for the goose is also sauce for the gander. The engagement at the Plainfield theatre will be for one night only, with a matinee, on Saturday, May 6.

FELL FROM 2ND FLOOR, BABE ESCAPES INJURY

When the fire was being confined to the Kornfield stable, on Pruden's alley, Saturday night Matilda Hallard, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Hallard, of 223 West Front street, became excited as she was trying to learn what was going on and fell headforemost out of the second story window of her home over The Leader store. How it happened that Matilda did not break her neck or some of the other bones in her little body may never be explained. One of the bystanders who saw the child fall said afterwards that he thought it had struck the sign over the store, but, he said, she fell so fast that it was impossible to say whether she struck the sign or anything else. However, it is remarkable that she received no injury and today was as lively as ever.

Immediately after the incident someone hurried to Frank Linke's store, directly across the street and telephoned for City Physician C. F. Lufburrow, who hastened to render his services to the baby. He found nothing alarming about the child's condition and declared that she had sustained no great injury. A 2 o'clock today the child was brought to the office of Dr. Lufburrow and the only injury shown was a scratched finger and a little scratch back of one ear and appear to be absolutely happy.

ACKERMAN GOVERNOR WHILE WILSON'S AWAY

Ernest R. Ackeman, of this city, as president of the Senate, will be acting Governor of New Jersey from next Wednesday until May 29, during which time Governor Wilson will be making a tour of the West. A good deal of significance is attached to the Governor's Western trip, in view of the fact that he is looming up strongly as the probable Democratic candidate for President next year. In political circles the trip is regarded as the opening of his campaign to secure the nomination, as the cities he will visit and speak in includes the larger ones on the other side of the Mississippi.

The Governor will leave New York on Wednesday night at 6:30 o'clock, and will not return until May 29. Before going away he will speak in New York on Tuesday night at the dinner to Senator O'Gorman.

Governor Wilson's itinerary includes visits to and speeches at Kansas City, Denver, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Pasadena, San Francisco, Portland, Ore., Seattle, Minneapolis, Lincoln and Chicago. The Governor's friends say that the Southern States are already lined up for him and the end of this tour will find, it is predicted, many of the Western States in the Wilson column as well.

Randolph—Linbarger.

Mrs. Clinton F. Randolph and David L. Linbarger, both of this city, were married Saturday evening at 6 o'clock at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James Craig, on West Front street, in the presence of just the immediate relatives. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated. The only attendant was Walter C. Linbarger, brother of the groom. An informal reception followed, during which a wedding supper was served. The couple are now enjoying a trip and upon their return will reside in New York.

NEW REAL ESTATE OFFICE—Will open up my new office on Monday morning at No. 193 North avenue, ground floor. Have already purchased a good size book for the purpose of listing every property in Plainfield. My object is to fill it full of the conditions of your property, including the size of mortgage on same; then to leave the book to my grandchildren to read. I am the man who has been working in a four-dollar capacity to fight nervous prostration for the last four years and in those conditions have earned the title of selling and exchanging more property than any two agents in Plainfield. Now I am better and am ready for business. If you are coming to see me let me tell you something. Don't come near me if you expect me to handle your house, if it is sprinkled with signs or one sign which reads for sale by any broker, unless you want to sell out for 50 cents on the $1.00, for I want you to known that my feeling for you is the same as yours is for me, where you want to include me under any old broker. And let me tell you that these old signs are what make Plainfield real estate sell for less money than it does in any city or town along the Central, notwithstanding it has the name of "City Beautiful." Your any old broker means that some of them should be selling peanuts, instead of offering your property or spoiling the sale of it. Have sold seven properties in the last two weeks. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on the plan "that my time is yours." My office is not as it will be when the store front is changed, but will answer the purpose for a short time. 4 29 12

THEY SCRUB EACH OTHER.

Daily Bath of the Pupils In Copenhagen's Public Schools.

Denmark is one of the cleanest little countries imaginable. In a Copenhagen public school one may see an interesting sight. Mounting the spotless stone staircase to the first flight, every morning you may see at 8 o'clock the children assemble and answer to their names and then march to a dressing room. Here they undress, and each child neatly folds its clothes and puts the tidy little bundle on the floor. Then the children go into a small square room with shelves all around, and on these shelves are innumerable wooden tubs, such as we use in America for washing, with two iron bands around them. Everything is in immaculate order. The teacher gives each child a tub, and he or she takes it into an immense and well lighted wash room.

Of course the girls and boys are washed separately, and they perform their ablutions by grades, the tiniest ones coming first. The floor of this wash room is of cement, and in the center is a latticed wooden floor. All around the top of the walls runs a nickel shower pipe, the water of which is regulated by the teacher. Under these showers at the height where the small fingers can reach are little nickel stands with soap and the stiffest hog bristle brushes, which make one shiver. Near by is also a faucet.

Each child puts his or her tub under the faucet and lets the necessary amount of water into it and proceeds to scrub, not himself or herself, but the child in front—a novel sight and a pretty one for a lover of children. But one could not help thinking what an instrument of torture that innocent brush could be if the small fingers that manipulated it did their duty viciously, paying off some grudge or fancied slight.

When all are clean the teacher turns on the showers, and they are all thoroughly rinsed with first hot and then cold water. Each child is obliged to empty its own tub. Then the clean, rosy little bodies dry themselves with rough towels, standing on the wooden latticed floor. Each tub has to be carefully put away, the children dress themselves, and they file in for prayers, and the business of recitation begins. —Youth's Companion.

Willing to Divide.

An American newspaper correspondent who followed the government army in a revolution in a Latin American country tells a story about an experience that he had with the general commanding the division. The correspondent observed that in every town that the troops invaded they would help themselves to everything that was not nailed, screwed or anchored down. This did not appeal to the American's ideas of the rules of war, and he reported the misdoings of the soldiers to the commander.

"That is selfish," said the latter indignantly. "I will see to it that when we reach the next town you will have the first chance."

Complied With the Conditions.

The monotony of the London postal official's daily routine is frequently broken by the peculiar whims and caprices of eccentric members of the public with whom he is from time to time brought in contact.

A lady once sent to her son a pair of trousers by book post, which is cheaper than parcel post. The postal officials wrote to her: "Clothes cannot be sent by book post. If you will refer to the Postoffice Guide you will see under what conditions articles may be sent by book post." After a few days the lady replied, "I have looked in the Postoffice Guide and find that articles which are open at both ends may be sent by book post, and if trousers are not open at both ends I should like to know what is."—London Answers.

Fear of the Tree.

The first experiments at tree planting in London were sternly discouraged. A. D. Webster tells us in Town Planting that when Loudon built his house in Porchester terrace, Bayswater—this was in the thirties—he planted a sumac by the side of the path opposite. The action was met by prompt and triumphant opposition on the part of the district surveyor, whose complaint was that it was "likely to shade the pathway and keep it damp." In the end the tree had to go.

Proper Chills.

"I've had cold chills running over me all day," the thin man complained.

"You ought to be glad of that," said his heartless friend.

"I don't think I understand you. Why should I be glad?"

"Oh, well, you know, it is quite an ordinary thing to have cold chills. There's no cause for alarm. Just think what an extraordinary thing it would be if you should have hot chills running over you."—New York Press.

Not a Success.

Sawyer—Twistler has invented a combination broom that can be used for a cane, a trapeze, a rolling pin, a billiard cue, a lawn mower handle and a wooden leg. Gearing—He ought to make money with a broom like that. Sawyer—He could if he only knew how to adjust the blamed thing so it would sweep.—Chicago News.

As It Impressed Him.

"How about the Nile? Great, eh?"

"Yes. As I remember it took up several pages in the guidebook."—Washington Herald.

CREATING A VIOLIN.

No Hard and Fast Rules to Guide the Artist Mechanic.

Violins are the most delicate and uncertain of musical instruments to make. There are no hard and fast rules to follow. It is like making a human voice. The quality differs according to the wood, the seasoning and the construction of the few parts in it.

The violin contains the fewest parts of any musical instrument invented, and it seems like the simplest of them all to make. But, alas, it defies the expert, the practical mechanic and the musician! Anybody can make a violin, but few can make a good one. So, with the exception of comparatively few factory violins, most of them are produced by individual instrument makers, who spend more loving care over them than a mother does over her first child.

A violin maker is an artist mechanic, a sort of anomaly in this age of machinery. With a pot of glue, a few sharp tools, a cabinetmaker's bench and a few sticks of wood he will labor diligently in the creation of an instrument that may give forth the sweetest, the wildest, the weirdest and the strangest musical notes. He will glue his instrument together and then take it apart twenty times to adjust, the fraction of an inch, the bass bar or the sounding post. A creator of a violin may spend weeks on a single instrument and then find, to his disgust, that it does not satisfy. The exact point where the sounding post—a stick of wood only a little larger than a match—should be placed can never be determined in advance. It is a mystery that ever recurs in each new violin.

Then the wood is of so much importance to the violin maker—none of your fresh timber nor kiln dried stuff! It must be seasoned by years, even by decades and centuries. Every time a century old house is demolished some musical maker is likely to appear on the scene and make a quiet bid for some of the thin old rafters. To the novice they may seem worthless, but the violin maker may find in this century old timber just the wood for his beloved instruments.—Chicago Record-Herald.

PATRICK HENRY.

Thomas Jefferson's Opinion of the Orator and Patriot.

When William Wirt was engaged in writing the memoirs of Patrick Henry he turned for information to Thomas Jefferson, who had been associated with the orator for many years, asking his aid in furnishing biographical material for the work. The correspondence between Wirt and Jefferson, published in the Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography, from the manuscript collection of John Gribbel, has a decidedly interesting passage showing the opinion Jefferson held about his famous colleague. In answer to Wirt's first request Jefferson replies with an assent and adds a general and unfavorable summary of Henry's character:

"He was certainly the man who gave the first impulse to the ball of revolution. were I to give his character in general terms, it would be of mixed aspect. I think he was the best humored man in society I almost ever knew, and the greatest orator that ever lived. he had a consumate knowledge of the human heart, which directing the efforts of his eloquence enabled him to attain a degree of popularity with the people at large never perhaps equalled. his judgment in other matters was inaccurate. in matters of law it was not worth a copper: he was avaricious & rotten hearted. his two great passions were the love of money & of fame; but when these came into competition the former predominated. If the work you propose is not destined to come out speedily I will endeavor to recollect what may be of use to it."

Modern Kitchens at Sea.

The term "son of a sea cook" is no longer a title of reproach. The highly paid specialist who presides over the kitchens is a chef with an international reputation. The menu at the end of the longest sea voyage gives no indication that the ship has not been supplied from land. Immense stores of fresh meats, vegetables, fruits and even flowers must be carried. The kitchens are incredibly clean, with their tiled floors, glass tables and shelves, as are also the cold storage rooms. To keep a kitchen in order is a far more difficult problem at sea than on land.—Cassier's Magazine.

Located It Exactly.

With his jaw swollen so as to nearly close his eye, a sailor rushed into a dentist's office and told the dentist to extract an aching tooth as soon as possible. After getting the man seated in the chair the doctor asked which tooth he wished pulled, and the sailor, nearly crazed by pain, lost no time in saying, "Upper deck, second one from aft, port side."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune

The House of the Whispering Pines

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910, by Anna Katharine Rohlfs

"I am an innocent man so far as the attack made upon Miss Cumberland goes. I had no hand in her murder, if murder it is found out to be. My story which you have read in the papers and which I felt forced to give out, possibly to my own shame and that of another whom I would fain have saved, is an absolutely true one. I did not arrive at the Whispering Pines until after Miss Cumberland was dead. To this I am ready to swear, and it is upon this fact you must rely in any defense you may hereafter be called upon to make in my regard."

But I saw that I had made no impression on his convictions. He regarded me as a guilty man and, what was more to the point no doubt, as one for whom no plea could be made or any rational defense undertaken.

"You don't believe me," I went on, still without any great bitterness. "I am not surprised at it after what the man Clarke has said of seeing me with my hands on her throat. But, Charles, to you I will confess that I did this out of a wild desire to see if those marks were really the marks of strangling fingers. You shall believe me—you must," I insisted as I perceived his hard gaze remain unsoftened. "I don't ask it of the rest of the world. But you, if you are to act as my counsel, must take this denial from me as gospel truth. She was dead before I touched her. Had the police spy whose testimony is likely to hang me climbed the tree a moment sooner than he did he would have seen that. Are you ready to take my case?"

Clifton is a fair fellow, and I knew if he once accepted the fact I thus urged upon him he would work for me with all the skill and ability my desperate situation demanded. I was conscious of a great leap of heart as the set expression of his features relaxed and he responded almost warmly:

"I will take your case. Ranelagh God help me to make it good against all odds."

I was conscious of few hopes, but some of the oppression under which I labored lifted at those words. I had assured one man of my innocence! He was ready to speak before I was.

"Then you had not been long on the scene of crime when the police arrived?"

"I had been in the room but a few minutes. I do not know how long I was searching the house."

"The police say that fully twenty minutes elapsed between the time they received Miss Cumberland's appeal for help and their arrival at the clubhouse. If you were there that long"—

"I cannot say. Moments are hours at such a crisis. I"—

My emotions were too much for me, and I confusedly stopped. He was surveying me with the old distrust. In a moment I saw why.

"You are not open with me," he protested. "Why should moments be hours to you previous to the instant when you stripped those pillows from the couch?"

This was a poser. I had laid myself open to suspicion by one thoughtless admission, and, what was worse, it was but the beginning in all probability of many other possible mistakes. I had never taken the trouble to measure my words, and, the whole truth being impossible, I necessarily must make a slip now and then. He had better be warned of this. I did not wish him to undertake my cause blindfolded. He must understand its difficulties while believing in my innocence. Then if he chose to draw back well and good. I should have to face the situation alone.

"Charles," said I as soon as I could perfectly control my speech, "you are quite just in your remark. I am not and cannot be perfectly open with you. I shall tell you no lies, but beyond that I cannot promise. I am caught in a net not altogether of my own weaving. So far I will be frank with you. A common question may trip me up. Others find me free and ready with my defense. You have chanced upon one of the former. I was in a turmoil of mind from the moment of my entrance into that fatal house, but I can give no reason for it."

"You say you cannot be open with me. That means you have certain memories connected with that night which you cannot divulge."

"Right, Charles, but not memories of guilt—of active guilt, I mean. I am perfectly innocent so far as Adelaide's death is concerned. You may proceed on that basis without fear—that is, if you continue to take an interest in my case."

"I have accepted the case, and I shall continue to interest myself in it," he assured me, with a dogged rather than genial persistence. "But I should like to know what I am to work upon if it cannot be shown that her call for help came before you entered the building."

"That would be the best defense possible, of course," I replied, "but neither from your standpoint nor mine is it a feasible one. I have no proof of my assertion. All I know and can swear to about the length of time I was in that building prior to the arrival of the police is that it could not have been very long, since she was not only dead and buried under those accumulated cushions, but in a room some little distance from the telephone."

"That will do for me," said he, "but scarcely for those who are prejudiced against you. Everything points so indisputably to your guilt. The note which you say you wrote to Carmel to meet you at the station looks very much more like one to Miss Cumberland to meet you at the clubhouse."

It was thus I first learned which part of this letter had been burned off. It was the top portion, leaving the rest to read:

Come, come, my darling, my life! She will forgive when all is done. Hesitation will only undo us. Tonight at 10:30. I shall never marry any but you.

It was also evident that I had failed to add those expressions of affection linked to Carmel's name which had been in my mind and awakened my keenest apprehension.

"Otherwise," pursued Clifton, "what could have taken her there? These lines said 'Come!' and she went, for reasons which may be clear to you, who were acquainted with her weak as well as strong points. Went how? No one knows. By chance or by intention on her part or yours, every servant was out of the house by 9 o'clock, and her brother too. Only the sister remained, the sister whom you profess to have urged to leave the town with you that very evening, and she can tell us nothing—may die without ever being able to do so. Some shock to her feelings—you may know its character and you may not—drove her from a state of apparent health into the wildest delirium in a few hours. It was not your letter—if your story is true about that letter—or she would have shown its effect immediately upon receiving it—that is, in the early evening. And she did not. Helen, one of the maids, declares that she saw her some time after you left the house and that she wore anything but a troubled look; that, in fact, her countenance was beaming and beautiful."

Carmel, beaming and beautiful at an hour I had supposed her suffering and full of struggle! I could not reconcile it with the letter she had written me.

The lawyer proceeded with his presentation of my case as it looked to unprejudiced eyes.

"Miss Cumberland comes to the clubhouse; so do you. You have not the keys and so go searching about the building till you find an unlocked window, by which you both enter. There are those who say you purposely left this window unfastened when you went about the house the day before; that you dropped the keys in her house where they would be sure to be found and drove down to the station and stood about there for a good half hour in order to divert suspicion from yourself afterward and create an alibi in case it should be wanted. I do not believe any of this myself, but there are those who do. Your passion for Carmel, while not generally known, has not passed unsuspected by your or her intimates, and this in itself is enough to give color to these suspicions even if you had not gone so far as to admit its power over you and the extremes to which you were willing to go to secure the wife you wished. So much for the situation as it appears to outsiders. Of the circumstantial evidence which links you personally to this crime we have already spoken. It is very strong and apparently unassailable."

"Charles," I asked, "how do they account for the cordial that was drunk—the two emptied glasses and the flask which were found in the adjacent closet?"

"It's one of the affair's conceded incongruities. Miss Cumberland was a well known temperance woman. Had the flask and glasses not come from her house you would get no one to believe that she had had anything to do with them. Have you any hint to give on this point? It would be a welcome addition to our case."

"Coroner Perry speaks of a third and unused glass which was found with the flask," I ventured tentatively. "He seemed to consider it an important item."

"It is a curious circumstance. I will make a note of it. You have no suggestions to offer on the subject?"

"None."

"The clew is a small one," he smiled. "So is the one offered by the array of bottles found on the kitchen table, yet the latter may lead directly to the truth. Adelaide never dug those out of the cellar where they were locked up, and I'm sure I did not. Yet I suppose I'm given credit for doing so."

"Naturally. The key to the wine vault was the only key which was lacking from the bunch left at Miss Cumberland's. That it was used to open the wine vault door is evident from the fact that it was found in the lock."

"You may add this coincidence to the other," I conceded. "I swear that I had nothing to do with that key."

Neither could I believe that it had been used or even carried there by Adelaide or Carmel, though I knew that the full ring of keys had been in their hands and that they had entered the building by means of one of them. So assured was I of their innocence in this regard that the idea which afterward assumed such proportions in all our minds had at this moment its first dawning in mine as well as its first outward expression.

"Some other man than myself was thirsty that night," I firmly declared. "We are getting on, Charles."

Evidently he did not consider the pace a very fast one; but, being a cheerful fellow by nature, he simply expressed his dissatisfaction by an imperceptible shrug.

"Do you know exactly what the clubhouse's wine vault contained?" he asked.

"An inventory was given me by the steward the morning we closed. It must be in my rooms."

"Your rooms have been examined. You expected that, didn't you? Probably this inventory has been found. I don't suppose it will help any."

"I will see you tomorrow—any time tomorrow," I said. "Meantime I will give you a commission which you are at liberty to perform yourself or to intrust to some capable detective. The letter, of which a portion remains, was written to Carmel, and she sent me a reply, which was handed me on the station platform by a man who was a perfect stranger to me. I have hardly any memory of how the man looked, but it should be an easy task to find him, and if you cannot do that the smallest scrap of the note he gave me and which unfortunately I tore up and scattered to the winds would prove my veracity in this one particular and so make it easier for them to believe the rest."

His eye lightened. I presume the prospect of making any practical attempt in my behalf was welcome.

"One thing more," I now added. "My ring was missing from Miss Cumberland's hand when I took away those pillows. I have reason to think—or it is natural for me to think—that she planned to return it to me by some messenger or in some letter. Do you know if such messenger or such letter has been received at my apartments? Have you heard anything about this ring? It was a notable one and not to be confounded with any other. Any one who knew us or who had ever remarked it on her hand would be able to identify it."

"I have heard the ring mentioned," he replied. "I have even heard that the police are interested in finding it, but I have not heard that they have been successful. You encourage me much by assuring me that it was missing from her hand when you first saw her. That ring may prove our most valuable clew."

THERE WAS A SLIGHT PRESSURE.

"Yes, but you must also remember that she may have taken it off before she started for the clubhouse."

"That is very true."

"You do not know whether they have looked for it at her home?"

"I do not. I will take good care of your interests from now on. Be hopeful and show a brave front to the district attorney when he comes to interview you. I hear that he is expected home tomorrow. If you are innocent you can face him and his whole office with calm assurance."

"You are free," said I, "I am not. Miss Cumberland will be buried before I leave these four walls. I hate to think of her going to her grave without one token from the man to whom she has been only too good. Charles, a few flowers, white, no wreath, just a few which can be placed on her breast or in her hand. You need not say whom they are from. It would seem a mockery to any one but her. Lilies, Charles. I shall feel happier to know that they are there. Will you do this for me?"

"I will."

"That is all."

Instinctively he held out his hand. I dropped mine in it, there was a slight pressure, some few more murmured words, and he was gone. I slept that night.

CHAPTER VI.

A CHANCE! I TAKE IT.

I SLEPT, though a question of no small importance was agitating my mind, demanding instant consideration and a definite answer before I again saw Clifton. This was my plan. I would acknowledge to having seen a horse and cutter leave the clubhouse by the upper gateway simultaneously with my entrance through the lower one. I would even describe the appearance of the person driving this cutter. No one by the greatest stretch of imagination would be apt to associate this description with Carmel, but it might set the authorities thinking, and if by any good chance a cutter containing a person wearing a derby hat and a coat with an extra high collar should have been seen on this portion of the road, or if, as I earnestly hoped, the snow had left any signs of another horse having been tethered in the clump of trees opposite the one where I had concealed my own, enough of the truth might be furnished to divide public opinion and start fresh inquiry that a woman's form had sought concealment under these masculine habiliments would not, could not, strike anybody's mind. Nothing in the crime had suggested a woman's presence, much less a woman's active agency.

The suspicion which had naturally fallen on myself as the one and only person implicated would in shifting pass straight to another man and, if he could not be found, return to me or be lost in a maze of speculation. I was ready with my confession when Mr. Clifton next came. I had even forestalled it in a short interview forced upon me by the assistant district attorney and Chief Hudson. That it seemed to have made a more favorable impression upon the latter than I had expected gave me additional courage when I came to discuss this new line of defense with the young lawyer.

"I have heard of no new discovery," he said. "If another cutter besides yours passed through the clubhouse grounds at the time you mention it left tracks which all the fury of the storm would not have entirely obliterated in the fifteen minutes elapsing between that time and the arrival of the police."

"But a witness can certainly be found who encountered that cutter and its occupants somewhere on the long stretch of open road between the Whispering Pines and the residence district," I said.

"Possibly. It would help. You have not asked for news from the Hill."

"Carmel!" I cried. "She is worse—dead?"

"No. She's not worse and she's not dead. But the doctors say it will be weeks before they can allow a question of any importance to be put to her. You can see what that will do for us. Her testimony is too important to the case to be ignored. A delay will follow, which may or may not be favorable to you. I am inclined to think now that it will redound to your interests. You are ready to swear to the sleigh you speak of—that you saw it leave the clubhouse grounds and turn north?"

"Quite ready, but you must not ask me to describe or in any way to identify its occupants. I saw nothing but the hat and coat I have told you about. It was just before the moon went under a cloud or I could not have seen that much."

I suppose my voice fell, for his glance became suddenly penetrating and his voice slightly sarcastic as he remarked:

"Those clouds obscured more than the moon, I fancy. I only wish that they had not risen between you and me. This is the blindest case that has ever been put in my hands."

"Tell me," I broke in, "of Carmel's condition, of the sort of nurse who cares for her and how Arthur conducts himself under this double affliction."

"I was there last night. Miss Clifford was in the house and received me. She told me that Arthur's state of mind was pitiful. He was never a very affectionate brother, you know, but now they cannot get him away from Carmel's door. He sits or stands all day just outside the threshold and casts jealous and beseeching looks at those who are allowed to enter."

"Doesn't he grieve for Adelaide? I always thought that of the two she had the greater influence over Him."

Heating Problems Solved

HERE is the furnace that heats the house from first floor to the attic—makes no dust—little ash, and less bother. A BOYNTON "square pot" furnace will give summer temperature in zero weather, on a surprisingly small amount of coal. It's the square fire pot that does it. The never smothers out because the fire pot is full of ash and cinder. A turn of the BOYNTON ash cutting grate clears the fire completely. The BOYNTON has a capacious square cornered ash pit, that you can shovel out clean. BOYNTON boilers—for house, school, or church heating—have this same economical fire pot. See your dealer about BOYNTON "square pot" furnaces and boilers.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

That remarkable organization of colored singers, dancers and comedians, the "Smart Set," will be the attraction at the Plainfield theatre Wednesday matinee and night. S. H. Dudley, one of the best known and withal cleverest negro funmakers before the public, still heads the company. Supported by sixty people he will appear in the sellar role of Raspberry Snow in a three act musical comedy entitled "His Honor the Barber."

There are so many different kinds of comedies that glossary would be necessary to list them all. Farce and burlesque, while apparently belonging to the same family, are distinctly unlike, while they, in turn, have nothing in common with the high-class comedy in which laughter is provoked by the keenness and cleverness of the lines rather than by any absurdity in the situations. Richard Brinsley Sheridan's "School for Scandal" is an illustration of the delightful humor that can be evoked by comedies of a higher order. The old comedian, indeed, had a charm that few modern writers of comedy have been able to attain. The statement that Geraldine Bonner, in her new comedy of New York life, "Sauce for the Goose," which Grace George will present at the Plainfield theatre, Saturday matinee and night, May 6, has instilled into her work the wit, the keen satire and the human charm that make the old comedies so effective, will, therefore, be received with grateful appreciation by a public that has grown tired of horseplay and piffle on the stage.

BOUND BROOK DEFEATS DUNELLEN IN FAST GAME

After holding the locals hitless five innings at Bound Brook Saturday afternoon in the opening game Wendt, pitching for Dunellen, was found for five hits that tallied five runs. In the group of bingles were two doubles and a triple. After that inning he again tightened up and allowed but one more hit during the remainder of the game. Until the sixth Dunellen held the lead, Barnes having scored in the second. In the first inning of both teams double plays figured.

A large crowd from both towns saw the game, which was marred only by an accident in the fifth, when Lew Wiltse, playing first for the locals, was put out of the game by being hit in the face with a high inshoot that loosened his teeth and lacerated the cheek. Leon Dufour, president of the Borough Council, threw the first ball. The score:

The B. A. A. defeated the Blue Stars, Saturday afternoon by the score of 10 to 9. The batteries were Wilson and Lyon for the B. A. A., and Kyle and Sampson for the Blue Stars.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD WINS.

South Plainfield won its opening game against the Baptist Sunday-school baseball team on Saturday, rapping out 18 runs while the Sunday-school boys were coralling four. Soffield, who was on the mound for the Field Club, held his opponents safe at all stages and only let down in the last inning when four runs were scored off his slants. He struck out seventeen men.

Park Golf Club Course Open.

The Park Golf Club course was opened on Saturday for general play and a number of members availed themselves of the opportunity of enjoying their favorite game. The course was found to be in excellent condition and only in the case of three greens were the players compelled to use the temporary ones. A force of men has been engaged getting everything in condition for the season, and when the competitions begin soon, the members will find the course and clubhouse to their liking.

LEAL'S TEAM DEFEATS THE HOLY CROSS NINE

It took ten innings to settle the contest between Leal's School and Holy Cross on Saturday morning, but Leal's finally won out by a score of 17 to 16. The game was fast from start to finish, a rough diamond being responsible for many of the errors committed.

Chamberlain, who pitched for the choir boys, did well but received poor support. He succeeded in striking out eight men, but issued several free passes to first which resulted in tallies. Mellory and Dickerson were on the mound for Leal's and both did good work, the former striking out six and the latter seven. One of the features of the game was a one-handed catch by Woolston. Herbert, Patrick and Waldron each secured three hits.

WON FIRST GAME

Plainfield Nine Defeated Brighton F. C. by Score of Three to Two.

REV. MR. MAGUIRE AS UMPIRE.

Only Once During the Contest Was Dominie's Decision Questioned—Exciting Until the Ninth Inning.

In regular big league style, Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire announced the batteries in Saturday's baseball game between Plainfield and the Brighton Field Club, of Brooklyn. The "ump" was not called down but once during the game and that was in the first half of the ninth when the Brighton's second baseman was at bat. Two balls and one strike had been called by Umpire Maguire when suddenly a ball that went half way round the batter's neck was called "strike three," but the batter remained at the plate and stabbed the next ball pitched to left field for a base. Cosgrove didn't think that that was just right and called the baptist pastor's attention to the very evident error he had made. The game practically ended there with a victory for the local team by a score of 3 to 2.

It was an auspicious opening for the local talent and a good crowd was on hand to root for the winners. Pastor Maguire received no "guying" from the bleacherites, but there was evidence of his ministerial influence on the behavior of the men of both teams.

As to the game:—Plainfield scored in the fourth through the three-bagger by Harter and a screaming double contributed by Ramsberger immediately afterwards. It was due as much to Harter's splendid base running as anything else that the two talleys came across.

In the sixth inning the third bag stopped a ball which propably prevented a double play. The visitors accomplished a double steal immediately after the ball had been returned to the pitcher and a run threatened, but Driscoll at first saved the day with a fine pickup of Ramsberger's low throw of Andrew's hit. In the seventh period Brighton scored one when Alberts threw low to Brit Martin at second and another pretty stop by Ramsberger put a stop to the visitors' aspirations.

Taken altogether the game was a good one up to the beginning of the ninth and it looks as though Manager Dorflinger had gotten together a good aggregation of ball tossers and Plainfield ought to have a creditable position at the end of the season.

The score.

THE REPORTS AND PETITIONS.

Red Tape Over Transfer of Mrs. Edgerton's Request—Lease for Committee Rooms Signed—Money Obtained for Furniture.

Prior to the regular meeting of the Common Council, last night, Councilman Gloak, chairman of the street committee, called for public hearings on an ordinance to open East Sixth street, between Richmond and Central streets, another to establish the grade on Columbia avenue and another one calling for the macadamizing of certain streets. No one spoke for or against the ordinances and later in the evening they were adopted on third reading.

On petition licenses were granted to Auctioneers Murray and Kennedy, when the fees are paid. Residents of East Third street, between Washington and Church streets, petitioned for a light and the same was referred. Residents of Emerson avenue asked for the installation of a sewer and this was referred, as were also communications from Camp Middlebrook Chapter, D. A. R., the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, the Women's Alliance of All Souls' church and the Religious Society of Friends, urging favorable action of the "safe and sane" Fourth of July ordinance. These were received and filed.

The lease between David T. Kenney and the city for additional rooms in the former's building on North avenue was filed. Joseph P. Tate, executor for the estate of Mrs. M. E. Edgerton, informed the Council that a distribution of bequests would be made soon and he asked the city to execute the proper bonds preparatory to its receiving several bequests of a public character. In this connection Mayor Moy suggested in a communication that in the matter of Mrs. Edgerton's bequest of $5,000 to the chief of the police department for a pension fund, that the bond be made by the city.

It is understood that this is not possible, that the money must be paid to Chief Kiely and that he must hold it in trust to be used for a pension fund when established. It has been suggested to Chief Kiely that he invest the money in city bonds.

Another petition for lights on East Second street and Terrill road was referred to the light committee. The Mayor's veto of the proposed Kensington avenue opening ordinance was received and referred to the street committee.

Mayor Moy informed the Council that in the C. M. Meeker claim bill matter, that Oscar Philpot and James P. Homan had both filed claims, and giving as his reason for not approving the bill that he did not believe that the city was properly protected.

Clerk Horace G. Adams, of the District court, reported receipts for the past month of $129.22, expenditures of $47.12, leaving a balance of $82.10. Street Commissioner Gavett reported the granting of sixteen sewer permits during the month. The bond of Constable Peter V. Weaver was received and filed.

Councilman Mygatt reported back the petition of local dentists asking for an appropriation of $1,000 to establish a dental clinic, explaining that it was too late to include the amount in this year's budget. In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Mygatt, which was adopted, $100 was appropriated to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., for Memorial Day observance. Mr. Mygatt voted against the resolution.

Another resolution offered by Mr. Mygatt and adopted, authorized the finance committee to expend $250 to fit up the new committee room, recently acquired, which adjoins the Mayor's office, and another resolution by the same member, which was adopted, appropriated $40 to purchase volumes of the State laws, which will be kept in the new committee room. Additional resolutions by Mr. Mygatt, adopted, transferred $2,500 from the general to the fire fund and authorized the borrowing of $6,000 for sewer extension work.

The petition of residents of Arlington avenue and Randolph road to install a sewer was acted favorably upon, on recommendation of Mr. Gloak, the work to be done under the supervision of Street Commissioner Gavett.

Mr. Taylor offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the fire committee to purchase a team of horses for the department at a cost not to exceed $750, and Councilman C. C. Randolph offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the police board to purchase six bicycles at a cost not to exceed $195 and that they be purchased from Harry

HALL PLANT IS SUED BY INJURED EMPLOYE

An interesting case continued from yesterday before Justice Benjamin Vail in the Supreme court at Somerville, is going on today. Bernard J. Smith, of North Plainfield, who is represented by Francis J. Blatz, is sueing the Hall Printing Press Company for damages for an accident which happened in the latter company's plan last August.

It is alleged in the complaint that while pouring molten iron into a mould at the company's plant owing to a defective mould the iron spattered out from the side of the sand mould and burned Smith severely on the leg, so that he was laid up under the care of Dr. A. H. Dundon from the time of the accident until December 12.

Dr. Dundon testified for the plaintiff as to the nature of the burns and Dr. C. B. Lufburrow testified for the defense. The latter told the jury that because of poor circulation caused by varicose veins the patient's recovery had been retarded. It is likely that the case will be finished this afternoon. Former Congressman Alvah A. Clark is conducting the defense for the Hall Company. He claimed that Smith assumed the ordinary risk any other employee assumes when entering upon his vocation as moulder.

OVER MAYOR'S VETO TO EXTEND STREET

The ordinance providing for the opening of Kensington avenue, which was not approved by Mayor G. W. V. Moy, was called up at the May meeting of the Common Council, last night, by Chairman Gloak, of the street committee, and it was passed over the Mayor's veto. The ordinance provides for the appointment of E. T. Barrows, W. A. Garrigues and J. Fred MacDonald as commissioners to treat with the property-owners and May 23 was fixed as the time when the commissioners will meet the property-owners affected by the improvement. On motion of Mr. Gloak, the Mayor's objections were recorded on the minutes of the Council. Mr. Holt voted against the adoption of the ordinance.

There have been many protests against the opening of Kensington avenue, as proposed, and some of the property-owners have even intimated that if the city goes ahead with the work they will secure an injunction stopping it. Members of the Council who favor the improvement say that the opening of the avenue affords the only opportunity to provide a convenient thoroughfare from the north side of the city to Park avenue, a main thoroughfare, and that it will increase the value of land in that vicinity.

COMPROMISE MADE ON DEAD FIRE HORSE

The Councilmanic fire and building committee, of which Duncan W. Taylor is the chairman, at the May meeting of the Council, last night, recommended, by the adoption of a resolution, a settlement with Fiss, Doer & Carroll, of New York, for the team of horses secured from that concern for the fire house, No. 4, one of which died after being brought to this city. Mr. Taylor offered the resolution to the effect that the fire and building committee purchased a team of Fiss, Doer & Carroll thought to be sound; that the team was passed upon by a Dr. Ryder, a veterinary employed for that purpose, that one of the team contracted pneumonia and died, that Fiss, Doer & Carroll are willing to take back the surviving horse, accepting $162.50 in full settlement of the matter, and that by the resolution the action of the committee is ratified.

This resolution was adopted by the Council and as it calls for an expenditure of money will now go to Mayor Moy for approval. It is not at all certain that he will act favorably on the matter for Mr. Moy has said that according to the city ordinances no committee, except the police, is permitted to expend any money without a resolution and the police committee cannot exceed $30 in its expenditures without a resolution.

Councilman W. W. Wilson was instructed to secure a team of horses from Hersh Brothers, of Elizabeth, but nothing will be done in that matter until a settlement of the the other question is made. Fiss, Doer & Carroll have removed the other horse, at the fire house, No. 4, belonging to them, taking it back to New York.

CHILD WELFARE

Mrs. G. Stuart Simons Tells of Conference on Children at Washington.

THE SESSION ENDED TODAY.

A Plainfield Delegate Gives an Interesting Review of the Proceedings and Talks on the Results.

One of the greatest steps in the forward movements of the day have been taken at the National Congress of Mothers and the combined Parent-Teachers Associations which has been in session at the Hotel Arlington, Washington, D. C., since last Tuesday and which ended today.

Yesterday afternoon President and Mrs. Taft received the delegates at the White House, and after a trip to Annapolis the visitors to the Capitol left, convinced that the country had made great progress in the matter of Child Welfare and the Education for parenthood.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, of East Ninth street, who returned yesterday from the big convention, declared to a Daily Press reporter last night that the result of the international movement has been most beneficial in bringing to the attention of all classes the needs of the children, as well as the necessity for educating the parents in caring for their offspring.

Among the eminent speakers at the Congress were Logan W. Page, of the U. S. Good Roads Department; E. K. Johnstone, of Vineland; Judge William DeLacy, of the Juvenile Court at Washington, D. C., and Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, D.D., of Washington. Mr. Page declared that good roads had as much to do with the proper upbringing of children as anything else, especially in rural districts. The building of schools and churches is stimulated when good roads are provided for the people to travel to them and especially is this so with children on the way to school. Experiments made by his department during the past year has proved the soundness of this theory.

Dr. Johnstone said that the great need of today is the education of the parents. Too much of the vitality necessary to good methods of child culture is wasted in trivialities and many opportunities for helpful work were lost through ignorance.

Alexander Stuart, superintendent of the Washington schools, declared it his belief that home tudy sohuld be abolished. "When the child leaves the school he should leave his books behind him. Every child should have nine hours sleep, and time for culture, recreation and music, and incidentally to become acquainted with his father."

Missionary work among foreign nations was referred to as something necessary for deep thought according to one of the speakers. "Why not care for the four million white children of our own country," asked Miss Martha Gillow, "who are growing up with less good home advantages than those to whom our dollars are being sent?"

Judge DeLancy said that the arrest of children should be prevented if possible, but when they are apprehended their cases should be tried separately. Further, the juvenile courts should be a part of the Public School system, separate and apart from any criminal court.

Open air schools were advocated as the best health helps. There is no ventilation like the pure air of the open, and some day we will see open air schools all over the land. The coming generations will be sturdier and more intelligent simply because of the present efforts to guide and direct rightly future parents.

Mrs. Simons was much impressed with the very evident interest manifested by the foreign delegates of whom there were at least fifty. Among them were Ambassador Jas. Brice, of Great Britain; Merrigio Serrati, representing the Italian Government; Paul Hagemans, of Belgium League of Home Education; Mrs. Berry Hart, who represented the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen, who are at the head of the National Education Association, of London, and many others.

Mrs. J. R. Little, of Atlanta, Gr., gave a synopsis of the meaning of child study to a mother. Her simple appeal to instinct brought applause from all over the auditorium. Dr. Willard S. Small, principal of the Washington Eastern High School, spoke on "School Hygiene" and showed plainly the room for improvement in all departments.

"To cure was the voice of the past; to prevent, the divine whisper of today," said President Mrs. Frededic Schoff, "May the whisper grow into a mighty shout throughout all lands until all mankind takes it up

CATCH AUTO CROOK

Cranford's Police Chief Arrests Nathan Lewis Who is Wanted Here.

PRISONER MAKES CONFESSION.

At Laing's Garage, Lewis Stole a Bosch Magneto and Martin Co. Also May Make Complaint Against Him.

In the arrest of Nathan Lewis, the Cranford police believe they have one of the slickest thieves in the country. Lewis went to Fink's garage in Westfield this morning attired in the customary automobile toggery including the duster and goggles. He was detected attempting to steal a Bosch magneto from the garage and was placed under arrest by Chief Hennessy. Chief Kiely and Detective Sergeant John Flynn went to Cranford this morning and identified the prisoner as one wanted in this city for stealing a Bosch magneto at the garage of A. B. Laing, on Sycamore street, last Friday.

From Lewis, the chief obtained a complete confession and he also discovered in his pockets $54 for which the prisoner could give no reasonable account, beides a letter of advice in which the name of an Elizabeth lawyer was mentioned as the proper one to consult in case of trouble.

Mr. Laing signed a complaint this morning before Judge DeMeza in the city court and when the various charges are all brought together it is believed that Lewis will get a long sentence. Detective Sergeant Flynn worked up the case against Lewis in February and traced him from Plainfield to Jersey City, where the scent was lost.

It is believed that Lewis knows all about the theft of a pair of automobile tires from the garage of the F. L. C. Martin Company shortly after the robery at the Laing garage. The total amount of money lost by the owners of the garages is estimated to be $5,000

Interest in the engagement of Grace George at the Plainfield theatre, for Saturday, matinee and night, May 6, is most pronounced, and audiences of large proportions are assured. The advance sale has been big, and the desire to see this clever and world-widely known comedienne in her latest play is general. In "Sauce for the Goose," the author, Geraldine Bonner, has taken familiar, everyday characters and placed them in a familiar New York environment.

The character which Miss George plays, Kitty Constable, is one that not only affords her splendid opportunities for the display of her attractive qualities as a comedienne, but it is also one that is so natural as to be readily recognized as a bit of character drawing from real life. Kitty Constable combines all the coquettish, illusive, fascinating qualities that Miss George made so evident as Cyprienne in "Divorcons" and as Lady Teazle in "The School for Scandal," and at the same time the character is said to have a charm all its own. In Kitty Constable, Miss George has undoubtedly aded another to her long list of notable creations.

DAUGHTERS OF CROSS ELECT THEIR OFFICERS.

The Daughters of the Cross, affiliated with the City Union of The King's Daughters, held its annual meeting yesterday at the home of Mrs. DeWitt Brokaw, on Sycamore avenue, the borough, and elected these officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. F. M. Berry; vice-president, Miss Minnie Marsh; secretary, Mrs. A. E. Faber; treasurer, Mrs. DeWitt Brokaw; representative to The Day Nursery, Mrs. Frank Allen; trustee, Mrs. F. B. Berry.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were received and these showed that after all bills were paid there is a balance of $25 in the treasury. It was voted to appropriate $200 to the work of the city union and $20 for the baby camp.

Election Law Action.

At the request of Councilman F. L. Holt, the Common Council decided to hold an adjourned meeting Monday night, May 8, to take up matters pertaining to the Geran election law, which requires action before May 15. It is necessary to prepare an ordinance calling for the redistricting of the city.

To Take the Pledge.

Henry Fosbray, who has a record for intoxication, promised Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning that he would take the pledge for a year if allowed to go. The Judge gave him a chance.

SAFE, SANE FOURTH

Councilman Hoyt Has His Troubles in Championing the Ordinance.

BLOCKED AGAIN LAST NIGHT.

Vote on First Section Disheartens Laws and Ordinances Chairman—Doubtful as to Any Further Attempt to Pass.

Another atempt was made by Councilman F. L. Holt at last night's meeting of the Common Council to secure favorable action on his ordinance providing for a "safe and sane" celebration of July 4, but like previous efforts it was of no avail. Mr. Tolt moved that the ordinance be placed on second reading. Mr. Mygatt objected on the grounds that the ordinance proposed by Mr. Holt omitted several important features to be found in the ordinance now in effect.

Mr. Holt was willing to agree, he said, to any changes desired and so expressed himself, but Mr. Mygatt was of the opinion that they could not be made in a few minutes and that some little time was necessary to give the ordinance proper consideration. The latter moved that the ordinance be referred back to the committee for suggested changes.

Mr. Holt explained that the ordinance had been considered by the committee and two of the members favored it, while Mr. Clay was known to be opposed. He declared that it was Mr. Mygatt's intention to kill the ordinance and that there was no use in disguising that fact, and if that is the intention he thought it would be just as well to drop the whole matter now without devoting any more time to the subject.

In the opinion of Mr. Mygatt the ordinance might be changed and brought up on May 8, but he said he wanted to give notice that on all such ordinances he would take the same stand, when they are not properly drawn. He cited the fact that the words 'toy cannons' considered very dangerous had been omitted from Mr. Holt's ordinance.

Mr. Holt said he was willing that the change should be made to include "toy cannons' or he would agree to any further changes. After a short recess, during which some changes were made in the first section of the ordinance, Mr. Holt moved it to a second reading. On the original vote to adopt the first section, Councilmen Gloak, Holt, Montgomery and Taylor voted in the affirmative and Councilmen Buxton, Mygatt, C. C. Randolph and Wilson in the negative. After the changes were made Councilmen Gloak, Holt, Montgomery, Taylor and Wilson voted in favor of the ordinance and Councilmen Buxton, Mygatt and C. C. Randolph voted in the negative. Mr. Buxton, who was acting president decided that the section was lost, because it required six votes to carry it. This led Mr. Holt to say that there was no use taking any further action.

It was desired that favorable action be taken now so that the dealers would not have any excuse for stocking up with fireworks. In discussing the mater later, Mr. Mygatt explained that it would be a simple matter to amend the present ordinance, which he considers a good one, so that the sale of fireworks would be prohibited, and he said that he would vote for such an ordinance, and has been willing to do so ever since the matter has been under discussion, but he said he does not favor making a lot of wholesale changes in the ordinances.

There were a few interested spectators in the lobby, including one woman, who favored the adoption of the "safe and sane" ordinance. It is not known whether the ordinance will come up next Monday night or not, there being no further comment.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY ON CHARGE OF ASSAULT.

On charges of assault and battery made by Detective Sergeant John Flynn this morning, Frank Scello, one of the Italians implicated in the Sunday card fight which resulted in the wounding of Andrew Alexander, was held in $500 bail to await the action of the grand jury by Judge DeMeza, in the city court this morning.

In his complaint Sergeant Flynn charges Scello with having struck Tony Falconiero over the head with a beer bottle on Sunday afternoon. Scello pleaded not guilty through interpreter Domenico Perretti. It is believed that Scello knows much about the fight and the causes which led up to the shooting of Alexander.

Nothing has yet been heard of Emilion Burgazio, who is accused of the shooting, but Chief Kiely believes that the fugitive will be caught either today or tomorrow as he cannot stay in the woods without food for very much longer.

LOVELL IS REJECTED FOR CITY ATTORNEY

The Common Council at its May meeting last night, turned down Mayor G. W. V. Moy's appointment of Arthur Lovell for the position of corporation counsel. Mr. Mygatt offered a resolution calling for the confirmation of Mr. Lovell as corporation counsel for a term of three years, it being understood, of course, that the resolution would not be passed. All of the members, except Mr. Holt, voted in the negative.

Mr. Mygatt previously explained that while he had the highest respect for Mr. Lovell, his experience in legal matters, in his opinion, had been in other branches than municipal law and practice and he was not willing to trust the legal affairs of the city to the candidate. He returned the Mayor's appointment and recommended that Mr. Lovell be not confirmed.

Councilman Montgomery called up the Mayor's appointment of N. W. French as overseer of the poor and moved that it be not granted." He was afterward corrected and changed his motion to the effect that the appointment be not confirmed. All the members except Mr. Holt voted for the motion and at his request he was excused from voting explaining that he had no personal knowledge of the appointee.

SUPPLIES CONTRACTS BEFORE THE COUNCIL

The Consumers' Coal Company in a communication to the Common Council, last night, stated that it declined to sign the contract for furnishing the city department with coal, hay, straw and oats for the coming year, under the provisions of the contract. According to the terms of the contract the "best" oats were called for, while in the bid submitted the words "good quality" were used.

The mater was referred to the fire and building committee and later Chairman Taylor explained that it had been decided to apportion the contracts among the other bidders, with the exception of the one for hay and straw, as Joseph Harrigan, who submitted a bid, declined to keep it open. Other arrangements will have to be made for securing hay and straw.

Mr. Taylor then offered resolutions awarding the contract for 1,000 bags of best oats to the Commercial Mills at 99 cents a bag; that for 200 tons of the best coal to the Dunellen Coal and supply Company, at $5.25 a ton. Mr. Taylor further explained that the city would be able to secure the coal at the above named low price if it would be willing to take it out of the stock of coal which the company now has on hand. This it was agreed to do and the coal will be delivered at once.

RODE ON SIDEWALK FINED AND WARNED

Wardman Carpenter, of the Netherwood section, was fined three dollars for riding his bicycle upon the sidewalk on Woodland avenue, on the morning of April 25. The complaint against Carpenter was made in a letter to Chief of Police Kiely by August Kleinecke, who stated to Judge DeMeza that he nearly had heart failure on three different occasions and he asked the court to have the practice stopped. In imposing sentence Judge DeMeza told Carpenter that the practice must cease.

On Sandford avenue and Norwood avenue last evening more than half a dozen sidewalk riders were seen by residents and pedesterians, but none of them could be apprehended because there was no patrolman in sight. The same condition exists in many other sections of the city. Chief Kiely said this morning that he had not enough men to cover those streets at that time of the day.

In Police Court.

James Turner, against whom Matilda Turner made a complaint of assault yesterday, was arraigned this morning and the hearing put off until tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. The Turners are colored and live at 650 West Third street. Turner was allowed to go on his own recognizance by Judge DeMeza.

FULL FARE FOR PUPILS ON CARS

P. S. C. Gives Notice of Discontinuance of Special Rate for School Children.

The further sale of three cent tickets entitling children having a necessary identifying ticket to ride to and from school is ordered discontinued by the P. S. C. Those which are out will be accepted, but no more will be issued.

A portion of section 14, page 101 of the city trolley franchise, ordinance reads as follows:

"Children under four years of age shall be carried free; children over four and under ten years not requiring seats otherwise occupied by passengers, three cents. All others five cents. School tickets shall be sold for three cents to all children actually attending school and to all teachers engaged in teaching school in the City of Plainfield."

Whether the new Public Utilities Act abrogates the above provision in the city ordinance, is a question, and one which Mayor Moy was not willing to give an opinion on today.

Another order, which also became operative yesterday, was that hereafter all persons or organizations, whether charitable or not, will have to pay the same price for the use of special trolley cars, whether they be for outings of children or otherwise. Heretofore, special cars have been furnished free by the Public Service Commission for the use of the children of orphan asylums and similar institutions, and in other instances special rate reductions have been made. This will now cease.

In answer to protests thus far made in regard to the new rules the Public Service Corporation has referred to subdivisions D and G of section 18 of the new Public Utilities law. The former prohibits the making or giving directly or indirectly of "any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any person or corporation or to any locality or to any particular description of traffic in any respect whatsoever."

The latter prohibits the giving, granting or bestowing upon any local, municipal or county official any discrimination gratuity or free service whatsoever, but nothing contained in the act, it is set forth, shall prevent the entry into any public conveyance or upon the property of any public utility company by any such official in the pursuit of his public duties.

In connection with the three cent tickets which the public and parochial school children had been privileged to use between eight o'clock in the morning and four o'clock in the afternoon, it is held that they discriminate against business college children and against other children and boys and girls who go to and from work, and are therefore under the ban of the new law.

Free or reduced rate special cars, regardless of the worthiness of the cause in which they may be ued, are also under the ban of the clause which prohibits discrimination. The rule prohibiting the carrying of bundles of merchandise of large size by passengers has long been in force but has not been rigidly lived up to. Under the new law, it is held, it must be strictly enforced. In one case in Newark yesterday a man was not allowed to board a car because he had with him a coil of rope weighing perhaps seventy-five pounds. The use of front and rear platforms for such things as this has long been prohibited by a rule of the company, but now the pasengers will not be allowed to take such packages into the cars.

It has long been the custom for newspaper offices to place on car platforms bundles of papers for motormen or conductors to throw off at designated points along their routes. Storekeepers and manufacturers have taken advantage of the same method of easy delivery. Notice that this would no longer be allowed, on the ground that it would be a violation of the new law, was given by the company last week and no such packages were carried yesterday. Hereafter newspapers and other packages unaccompanied by passengers will be carried on the cars only between eleven o'clock at night and six o'clock in the morning, which it is provided in the trolley freight law of 1909 that they may do "for hire." It has been decided that where bundles are taken hereafter under this law a charge of 25 cents a hundred pounds will be made for the service.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

It is hinted that Assemblyman James Lafferty will be the Democratic nominee for Senator for Gloucester county next fall. Senator George W. F. Gaunt is the only Republican candidate mentioned thus far.

Arrangements have been completed for removing the freight yard of the Pennsylvania Railroad that has been in existence for years along Atlantic avenue, between Boston, Albany and Ventnor avenues, Atlantic City, which has been agitated for several years.

It is feared that the new public fountain for Woodbury will not be in place by Memorial Day, when it was hoped to dedicate it. The quarries at Barre, Vt., whence the stone will come, have been under two feet of snow until the past week, which has put the work behind.

From injuries sustained when he cut his throat with a butcher knife a few days ago, Frederick Sharsack, fifty-nine years old, of 922 Federal street, Camden, died in Cooper Hospital Sunday. He had been ill and was also despondent over domestic troubles, having been separated from his wife and children.

After much persuasion on the part of his sister, Charles Leigh, a newspaper man, of Trenton, accompanied her to buy her Easter bonnet. The young woman who served Miss Leigh was Miss Cora M. Boyles, of Kingston. The engagement of Mr. Leigh and Miss Boyles has just been announced, the wedding to take place in June.

Beans as an explosive threw a scare into the Boy Scouts of Camden, in camp near Riverton, Saturday, but the only damage done was to one of the scouts, who got the full benefit of the explosion on the front of his uniform, with a hot bean or two in the face. Otherwise the outing was the finest the two patrols of the First Troop of Camden has yet had.

During a quarrel at Third and Spruce streets, Camden, Sunday afternoon, Dalorio Darono, thirty years old, shot off the end of a finger, and after he was cared for at Cooper Hospital he was locked up on a charge of threatening to kill Anthony Paradise, of 32 Spruce street. Pardise declared that when he asked Darono to apologize for running into him with a bicycle, Darono began blazing away with a revolver. One of the bullets, he said, whizzed by his head, and another nearly struck a girl.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

A real live donkey has a capital part in the three-act musical comedy entitled "His Honor the Barber," which in conjunction with the popular "Smart Set" Company will be the attraction at the Plainfield theatre Wednesday, May 3, matinee and night. S. H. Dudley still heads this famous organization and his well known capabilities as a comedian are so familiar that he does not need further introduction here. Suffice to say he has a role that allows his talents to have full sway and if you fail to laugh at his actions and monkeyshines as Raspberry Snow, a negro who wants to shave the President of the United States, it is because you lack the sense of humor. Messrs. Barton and Wiswell, who are directing Mr. Dudley's tour, have not overlooked the slightest detail with the result that one of the best entertainments witnessed in years is provided. There are sixty people in the cast, all selected for her or his respective ability. Aida Overton Walker is a new addition to the company this season. The famous comedienne and dancer will offer an entirely original specialty entranced by electrical and light effects. Edwin Hanford is the author of the book and the music and lyrics were furnished by Messrs. Brymm, Smith and Burris.

Cassellberry vs. Taft.

Camden, May 2.—President Taft was scored by Rev. W. W. Cassellberry, pastor of the Collingswood Presbyterian church, when he attacked the Chief Executive's views on religion and the Unitarian doctrine generally in a sermon Sunday evening. He concluded his remarks with the statement that "The wayfaring man may not err even though he be a fool." Mr. Cassellberry was formerly pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church.

GOLF

An Executive Committee meeting of the United States Golf Association was held last week at the office of Robert C. Watson, the secretary. All the committeemen were present except W. A. Alexander, H. L. Ayer and Milton Dargan, who sent proxies. The advisability of restricting entries in the National amateur championship tournament was discussed, but nothing was given out then. Something more definite in that line may be expected after the June session. Seven clubs were elected to active membership as follow: Country Club of Detroit, Westward Ho Club, Cincinnati Golf Club, Town and Country Club of St. Paul, Colorado Springs Golf Club, Idlewild Country Club, and Milwaukee Country Club. These were raised from the allied ranks except Colorado Springs and Idlewild. New allied members elected are Uniontown (Penn.) Country Club, Suburban Club of Chicago, Rockland Country Club of Palisades, N. Y., and Glen Oak Country Club of Glen Ellyn, Ill.

Programs are out for the thirteenth annual amateur championship tournament of the Metropolitan Golf Association to be held over the links of the Garden City Golf Club May 24, 25, 26 and 27. The championship will consist of a qualifying round of thirty-six holes, and the top sixty-four will continue on at match play. The first thirty-two will qualify for the title, and the third and fourth sixteens for minor prizes. There is also a cup for the defeated sixteen of the first thirty-two. All match rounds will consist of eighteen holes except the final.

The invitation tournament of the Garden City Golf Club to be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, of this week, will start with an eighteen-hole testing round. There will be three sixteens. The final round on Saturday will consist of thirty-six holes. With one or two exceptions W. J. Travis has always won this tournament.

ENDEAVORS' RALLY ON THURSDAY NIGHT

The annual rally meeting of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union will be held in Warren chapel on Thursday night, May 4, beginning at 7:45 o'clock. The meeting will be in charge of the executive committee of the union with President Frank Stewart presiding. The program will be as follows: 7:45 ong service led by Rev. H. N. Jordan, of New Market, with Mrs. J. O. McKelvey as organist, 8 o'clock, devotional service conducted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey; 8:15 address "The Atlantic City Convention," by Purdy F. Benedict, president of the Union County C. E. Union; 8:30 roll call and presentation of award to the winning society; 8:45 annual reports and election of officers; 8:55 address, "Equipment for Service," Rev. Ernest R. Brown, of Dunellen.

There will be special instrumental music by the Temple Baptist church orchestra under the direction of George Staats. Ie is believed that the attendance at this rally will be the largest yet had because of the widespread interest in the new system of awarding the attendance banner. The winning society will be allowed to choose a delegate to the International Convention which will be held in Atlantic City in July next, travelling expenses and registration fee being paid for the delegate so chosen. It is promised to all who attend that they will be well repaid in coming to hear Rev. Mr. Brown, who is active in Christian Endeavor work.

SUES FOR SALARIES HE RECOVERS $553

Before a jury of which Meyer Leichtentritt, former resident of this city, was foreman in the Supreme court yesterday in Somerville, Robert Newton Crane won a victory in the case of Edward J. Conroy, of North Plainfield against Henry Berg, the hat manufacturer, of East Orange. The case has been through the various courts and in each step taken by the plaintiff through Mr. Crane, the result has proved that Mr. Conroy's claims against Mr. Berg were based on sound logic and principles. The veridct of the jury was in favor of Mr. Conroy who was awarded $553.28 on his contract.

According to the papers in the case Mr. Conroy and Mr. Berg entered into a contract by which Mr. Conroy was to receive a salary from which a deduction of a certain amount was to be made which was to be applied toward the purchase of the property known as the Somerset Nurseries. On May 1, 1909, Mr. Conroy declared that Mr. Berg owed him $800 for wages due for work done in and about the premises. Mr. Berg put in a counter claim for $4,000 claiming that Mr. Conroy had failed to keep his contract and had been negligent in the performance of his part of his duties and had also been guilty of failure to render the proper accounting of the business as carried on by him.

The case was turned over to William D. Wolfskiel, as referee, last July. Mr. Wolfskiel's report to the court was in favor of the plaintiff but exceptions were taken by Riker & Riker, counsel for Mr. Berg and a trial by jury was ordered. This was held yesterday before Justice Benjamin A. Vail, at Somerville, and after the charge to the jury the latter took but fifteen minutes to render a veridct as noted above.

MOZARABIC LITURGY SUBJECT FOR CLERICUS

At the regular meeting of the Plainfield clericus yesterday afternoon at the residence of Rev. Dr. W. H. Neilson, East Ninth street, an interesting paper by Rev. Milo H. Gates, of New York, was read and which was discussed at length later. A luncheon was served. Rev. Mr. Gates' paper was entitled "Mozarabic Liturgy," and treated of the present day methods of religious teachings as compared with that of the middle ages.

Following the discussion of the other business matters which came before them the eleven members present took up the matter of the new Public Utilities measure which affects them materially. According to the provision of the law, clergymen must pay full fare between points within the State. While no action was taken it was the opinion of the majority that the new bill will work hardship on the clergy in this State in general.

The convention which will be held in St. James' church, Atlantic City, on May 9 and 10 next will probably bring together the greatest number of delegates ever brought in this State. Many matters concerning the Protestant Episcopal church in America will come up for consideration, among them the matter of pensions for superannuated and otherwise dependent men of the cloth.

This latter question was presented to the clericus yesterday afternoon in a paper presented to the local clergy by the Monmouth clericus. No action was taken in the matter except to awaken the interest of all the members in the aims to be accomplished.

WOMAN HURT AT END OF HORSE'S WILD RUN

Mrs. Frank Probst, wife of the proprietor of the former Maul hotel, at Watchung, was quite badly hurt in a runaway accident which began and ended at the hostelry, yesterday afternoon. She was taken from beneath an overturned runabout in an unconscious condition and did not fully recover until Dr. Pittis had given medical attention. She is still confined to her bed suffering from severe contusions about the head and chest and general shock.

Mr. and Mrs. Probst had been to town during the morning and returned to the hotel about 12 o'clock. Mrs. Probst wished to enjoy a pleasure drive so remained in the rig while her husband gave the horse a drink. He took the bit from the animal's mouth to do so and absent mindedly forgot to return it afterward. The moment Mrs. Probst pulled on the reins the horse started off at a wild gallop.

The runaway went to Watchung proper, thence into the Stirling road north of the lake and around to the Warrenville road near the Elias Wilson place. This headed it back to Watchung on the south side of the lake. Mrs. Probst retained her seat all the while being powerless to do anything. In front of Marfinz grocery on the return, several men made an attempt to stop the horse but it swung past them. It came down to the hotel where men sprang before it a second time. The horse swerved to one side, and tumbled itself and the rig in a heap by colliding with a pile of lumber near the road. Mrs. Probst was thrown to the roadway and the runabout pinned her down. But for the prompt assistance she might have sustaned serious injury. The animal was only slightly hurt while the vehicle was pretty well wrecked.

BIG JOINT PETITION SENT TO GOVERNOR

The mayors, boards of health and civic bodies of Plainfield, North Plainfield, Dunellen and the township of North Plainfield, representing a combined population of over 30,000 people, advocates of the plan say, have joined hands in forwarding a request to the Governor to sign Senate bill No. 301. The measure seems to be a simple one, and people have been wondering what possible objections could be found to it.

The bill amends the laws by providing that "the Council may, by ordinance, at any time before the commencement of the work, change or cause to be changed any plant for the treatment of sewage or polluting substance from which the affluent is to flow into any of the waters of this State in such manner and to such extent as may be necessary to conform to such conditions as the State Board of Health may lawfully impose."

It passed the Senate and the Assembly unanimously, and is intended to permit North Plainfield to make changes in its sewerage plans demanded by the State Board of Health without re-tracing its legal work of the past eighteen months.

Bound Brook seems to imagine that is has a grievance against North Plainfield's plans, say the friends of the bill, and the whole question was fought out before a Senate committee in connection with Senate bill 41. The committee's decision was unanimously in favor of North Plainfield.

It appears, however, that Bound Brook, seeing a possible chance of holding up the borough's improvement, the champions of the bill say, is seeking to influence Governor Wilson, believing that if the bill can be defeated, North Plainfield's work would be set back for another year. It is scarcely to be believed, say the advocates of the measure, that the Governor will veto a good bill to attain some other object, even if the Bound Brook people have any real cause for complaint, which does not seem to be the case, they claim.

UNION COUNTY COURTS OPENED THIS MORNING.

Supreme Court Justice Bergen and Common Pleas Judge Atwater were on the bench when the Union county courts opened this morning at Elizabeth. Justice Bergen delivered the charge to the grand jury, the feature of which was his strong instructions regarding the accident on the Jersey Central at Elizabethport when three lives were lost. The coroner's jury had placed the blame on the railroad.

There are a number of local causes on both the Supreme and the Circuit Court calendars for trial at this term.

F. W. Runyon, George O. Stevens and John Traynor are the grand jurymen from this city.

as a battle cry. Let fathers, mothers, teachers, nurses, educators, ministers legislators, and, mightest of all, the press, make the child the watchword of the day and hour. 'A little child shall lead them.'"

The objects of the congress was to discuss methods to raise the standard of life in the home; to give young people the necessary opportunities to learn how to care for children so that when they assume the duties of parenthood they may have some conception of the methods which will bets develop the physical intellectual and spiritual nature of the child; to bring into closer relations the school and home, to use systematic and earnest effort to this end and through the formation of parent-teacher associations in every public school and elsewhere, to carry mother love and mother thought into all that concerns childhood.

Mrs. Simons believes that the best work that has ever been accomplished was done at this congress and she was pleased to note that the influence of the first congress had not waned, on the contrary showed a material growth in every way. Every State in the Union was represented at the congress.

MORE ORDINANCES

Dreier, the lowest bidder. Charles A. Sturtevant appointed a special policeman by May Moy, was confirmed in accordance with a resolution by Councilman C. C. Randolph. Councilman Buxton voted against confirmation.

The building code was passed on third reading and just as soon as signed by Mayor Moy will become effective. This code has already been published in the local newspapers. The annual tax budget was also passed on third reading and awaits the Mayor's signature.

Signed Vets' Burial Act.

One of the last bills signed by Governor Wilson last week was the one increasing the amount allowed for the burial of Civil War veterans dying in destitute circumstances. Heretofore the county gave $35, but it is now required to pay the undertakers $50.

Strike Situation Unchanged.

It was stated today that the strike situation of the masons and hodcarriers remained unchanged. The bosses continue to assert that they will keep "open shop" and the men say there will be "nothing doing" in this direction.

To Pass Over Mayor's Veto.

Notwithstanding the fact that that Mayor G. W. V. Moy returned without his approval the ordinance to vacate a portion of Church street, Councilman Gloak, chairman of the street committee, moved at the May meeting last night, that the ordinance be advertised, according to the provisions of the law, explaining that he understood it would thereby become effective the same as though signed by the Mayor. All the members voted in the affirmative on the motion.

William G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. will hold an important meeting tonight. The committee having in charge the investigation to consider the advisability to erect a three-story brick building will make a report through its chairman, Willard Apgar. The sentiment seems to be in favor of the proposition. The plan in view is to have two stores on the first floor, a fine, large hall with a suitable stage for entertainments on the second floor and a fine lodge room on the third. It is believed that the undertaking would result profitably to the council and also give the borough a structure that it is sadly in need of. Mr. Apgar will have a preliminary design of the proposed structure and a statement of finances at the meeting tonight.

NEW REAL ESTATE OFFICE—Will open up my new office on Monday morning at No. 155 North avenue, ground floor. Have already purchased a good size book for the purpose of listing every property in Plainfield. My object is to fill it full of the conditions of your property, including the size of mortgage on same; then to leave the book to my grandchildren to read. I am the man who has been working in a four-dollar capacity to fight nervous prostration for the last four years and in those conditions have earned the title of selling and exchanging more property than any two agents in Plainfield. Now I am better and am ready for business. If you are coming to see me let me tell you something. Don't come near me if you expect me to handle your house, if it is sprinkled with signs or one sign which reads for sale by any broker, unless you want to sell out for 50 cents on the $1.00, for I want you to known that my feeling for you is the same as yours is for me, where you want to include me under any old broker. And let me tell you that these old signs are what make Plainfield real estate sell for less money than it does in any city or town along the Central, notwithstanding it has the name of "City Beautiful." Your any old broker means that some of them should be selling peanuts, instead of offering your property for spoiling the sale of it. Have sold seven properties in the last two weeks. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on the plan "that my time is yours." My office is not as it will be when the store front is changed, but will answer the purpose for a short time. 4 29 12

FIREMEN'S CONVENTION AT NEWARK, MAY 17

All arrangements for the twenty-fifth annual convention of the New Jersey Exempt Firemen's Association, which is to be held in Newark on May 17, were completed last night at a meeting of the Association of Exempt Firemen of the city of Newark, in Firemen's Hall, 593 Springfield avenue.

Delegations from eighty-three cities and towns have signified their intentions of attending the affair. It is estimated that no less than 5,000 members of the Exempt Associations of the State will be in line in the parade in the afternoon. Governor Woodrow Wilson is expected to attend and address the delegates.

The main meeting of the convention will be held in the morning. The opening prayer will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. Oscar E. Braune, pastor of the St. John's Lutheran church. The president of the association, James J. Manning, will make the opening address. Other speakers who will probably address the exempts are Mayor Jacob Haussling, and Governor Wilson. The benediction will be pronounced by the Rev. Dr. William Siebert, pastor of the German Lutheran church.

It is expected that a lively fight between Ellias K. Leslie, of Trenton, and John Kennell, of Passaic, for the presidency, will be witnessed at the election.

The parade in which will be no less than 5,000 uniformed men, will be headed by 200 men of the Rahway fire department in dress uniform.

In the evening a reception and reunion will be enjoyed in Firemen's Hall.

DOWNIE & WHEELER'S CIRCUS COMBINED.

When one considers that with Downie & Wheeler's Big Double Circus, which is to visit this city Wednesday, May 10, there are hundreds of people employed, the task of organizing this traveling city seems the most wonderful feature of the institution. In Downie & Wheeler's winter quarters, the home of these new giant shows, the work of organizing the circus began last September. The important thing is to engage the acts, and this is done by agents of the show, who, during the winter, visit the amusement halls of Europe and Asia in search of novelties.

Everything about the Downie & Wheeler's Combined Shows has been so systematized that it is like a great clock. All sorts of obstacles are overcome daily with no boasting. Every day brings some new problem to solve, but when daylight appears the great canvas tops are undulating in the breeze and everybody is ready for the parade. It is true that of all professionals, none are more domestic than the circus performer. He may lead the life of a rover the greater part of the year, but like the snail he carries his house around with him, and has many homely comforts that the ordinary traveler can not enjoy. In this queer traveling city they speak every language, from English to Hindoostani.

PRAISE FOR NUNS.

Tribute from Capt. Jack Crawford, Soldier, Scout and Poet.

Captain Jack Crawford, soldier, scout and poet, says of the Catholic sisterhood:

"On all God's green and beautiful earth there are no purer, no nobler, no more kind-hearted and self-sacrificing women than those who wear the sombre garb of the Catholic sisters. During the war, I had many opportunities for observing their noble and heroic work, not only in camp and hospital, but in the death-swept field of battle.

"Right in the fiery front of dreadful war, where bullets hissed in maddening glee, and shot and shell flew madly by with demoniac shrieks, where dead and mangled forms lay with pale, blood-flecked faces, yet wearing the scrowl of battle, I have seen the black-robed sisters moving over the field, their solicitious faces wet with tears of sympathy, administering to the wants of the wounded and whispering words of comfort into the ears soon to be deafened by the cold, implacable hand of death.

"How many a veteran of the war, who wore the blue or the gray, can yet recall the soothing touch of a sister's hand, as he lay upon the paintossed couch of a hospital; Can we ever forget their sympathetic eyes, their low, soft-spoken words of encouragement and cheer when the result of the struggle between life and death yet hung in the balance?

"My friends, I am not a Catholic, but I stand ready to any and all times to defend these noble women, even with my life, for I owe that life to them."

Longboat Has "Come Back."

Buffalo, May 2.—Tom Longboat, the Canadian Indian, defeated Gusta Ljungstrom, of Sweden, in a fifteen-mile race here Sunday. The time was 1 hour, 17 minutes, 46 seconds.

Mrs. Charles E. Herring, of The Bristol, has returned from a visit to her former home in Springfield, Mass.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910, by Anna Katharine Rohlfs

Yes, but they cannot get him to enter the place where she lies. His duty is to the living, he says. At least his anxiety is there. He starts at every cry Carmel utters of 'Lila—Lila!' Nothing more!"

"Does he—Arthur—mention me at all?"

"Arthur feels very hard toward you and insists upon your guilt."

"Does the doctor—Dr. Carpenter, I presume—venture to say how long Carmel's present delirium will hold?"

"He cannot, not knowing its real cause. Carmel fell ill before the news of her sister's death arrived at the house, you remember. Some frightful scene must have occurred between the two previous to Adelaide's departure for the Whispering Pines. What that scene was can only be told by Carmel, and for her account we must wait. Happily you have an alibi which will serve you in this instance. You were at the station during the time we are speaking of."

"Has that been proved?"

"Yes; several men saw you there."

"And the gentleman who brought me the—her letter?" It was more than difficult for me to speak Carmel's name. "He has not come forward?"

"Not yet; not to my knowledge, at least."

"And the ring?"

"No news."

"The nurse—you have told me nothing about her," I now urged, reverting to the topic of gravest interest to me. "Is she any one we know or an importation of the doctor's?"

"I did not busy myself with that. She's a competent woman, of course. I suppose that is what you mean."

Could I tell him that this was not what I meant at all—that it was her qualities as woman rather than her qualifications as nurse which were important in this case? If she were of a suspicious, prying disposition what might we not fear from her circumspection when Carmel's memory asserted itself and she grew more precise in the frenzy which now exhausted itself in unintelligible cries or the ceaseless repetition of her sister's name? I passed the matter over with the final remark:

"Watch her, watch them all, and bring me each and every detail of the poor girl's sickness. You will never regret humoring me in this. You ordered the flowers for—Adelaide?"

"Yes; lilies, as you requested."

"There will be no autopsy, the papers say; the evidences of death by strangulation are too well defined."

A LONG NIGHT OF MADDENING THOUGHT.

"Very true. Yet I wonder at their laxity in this. There were signs of some other agency having been at work also. Those two empty glasses smelling of cordial—innocent perhaps, yet"—

"Don't! I can bear no more today. I shall be stronger tomorrow."

Another feeler turned aside. His cheek showed his displeasure, but the words were kind enough with which he speedily took his leave and left me to solitude and a long night of maddening thought.

* * * * * * *

"And you still hold him?"

"Yes, but with growing uncertainty. He's one of those fellows who affect your judgment in spite of yourself. You may escape the fascination, probably will, but at least you will understand my present position and why I telephoned to New York for an expert detective to help us on this job. I wish to give the son of my old friend a chance."

The man whom Coroner Perry thus addressed leaned back in his chair and quietly replied:

"You're right—not because he's the son of your old friend, a handsome fellow and all that, but for the reason that every man should have his full chance whatever the appearances against him. I lay greater stress than you do on the two or three minor points which seem to favor his latest declaration that a man had preceded him in his visit to this lonely clubhouse, a man whom he had himself seen leaving the grounds in a cutter just as he entered by the opposite driveway."

"Ah!" came in quick ejaculation from the coroner's lips. "I like to hear you say that. The police did find traces of a second horse and cutter having passed through the clubhouse grounds. Hexford and Clarke saw them in time to satisfy themselves that they extended from the northern clump of trees to the upper gateway, where they took the direction of the hill."

"That is not all. A gripsack, packed for traveling, was in Mr. Ranelagh's cutter, showing that his story of an intended journey was not without some foundation."

"Yes. We have retained that gripsack. It is not the only proof we have of his intention to leave the city for awhile. No one doubts that he planned an elopement with the beautiful Carmel. The question is, Was his disappointment followed by the murder of the woman who stood in his way?"

District Attorney Fox quietly remarked:

"I suppose that no conclusion can be drawn from the condition of the body when our men reached it. I judge that it was still warm."

"Yes, but so it would have been if she had met her fate several minutes earlier than was supposed. Clarke and Hexford differ about the length of time which intervened between the moment when the former looked into the room from the outside and that of their final entrance. Let us take up something more tangible."

"Very good. Here it is. Of the six bottles of spirits which were surreptitiously taken from the clubhouse's wine vault four were found standing unopened on the kitchen table. Where are the other two?"

"That's it! That's the question I have put myself ever since I interogated the steward and found him ready to swear to the correctness of his report and the disappearance of these two bottles. Ranelagh did not empty them or the bottles themselves would have been found somewhere about the place. Now, who did?"

"No one within the clubhouse precincts. They were opened and emptied elsewhere. There's our clew, and if the man you've got up from New York is worth his salt he has his task ready at hand."

"Would you like to see him?"

"In a moment. I want to clear my mind in reference to these bottles. Only some one addicted to drink would drag those six bottles out of that cold, unlighted cellar."

"Yes, and a connoisseur at that. The two missing bottles held the choicest brand in the whole stock. They were kept far back, too—hidden, as it were, behind the other bottles."

"What was in the four bottles found on the kitchen table?"

"Sherry, whisky and rum—two bottles of rum and one each of sherry and whisky."

"The thief meant to carry them all off, but had not time."

"The gentleman thief. No common man such as we are looking for would make choice of just those bottles. So there we are again. Contradictions in every direction."

"Those bottles, full or empty, must be found. You know the labels?"

"Yes, and the shape and color of the bottles, both of which are peculiar."

The door opened, and Mr. Clifton was ushered in. Well and favorably known to both men, he had no difficulty in stating his business and preferring his request.

"I am here in the interests of Elwood Ranelagh," said he. "He is willing to concede, and so am I, that under the circumstances his arrest was justifiable, but not his prolonged detention. He has little excuse to offer for the mistakes he has made or the various offenses of which he has been guilty. He vows that he had no hand in the murder, and in this regard I feel not only bound but forced to believe him. I have come to entreat your aid in clearing up one or two points which may affect your own opinion of his guilt.

"As his counsel I have been able to extract from him a fact which he has hitherto withheld from the police. It is this:

"The ring which Miss Cumberland wore as the sign and seal of her engagement to him was not on her hand when he came upon her, as he declares he did, dead. It was there at dinner time—a curious ring which I have often noted myself and could accurately describe if required. If she took it off before starting for the Whispering Pines it should be easily found. But, if she did not, what a clew it offers to her unknown assailant! Up till now Mr. Ranelagh has been anticipating receiving this ring back in a letter written before she left her home. But he has heard of no such letter and doubts now if you have. May I ask if he is correct in this surmise?"

"We know of no such letter. None has come to his rooms," replied the coroner.

"I thought not. The whereabouts of this ring, then, is still to be determined. As Mr. Ranelagh's legal adviser I am very anxious to have that ring found."

"We'll search for the ring, Mr. Clifton."

"Meanwhile will you cast your eye over these fragments of a note which Mr. Ranelagh says he received from Miss Carmel Cumberland while waiting on the station platform for her coming?"

An individual executor may never have had any previous experience in the duties he is called upon to perform, or he may be expert in one, or possibly two, branches of his trust.

Four Dollar Oxfords of Distinction

There is as much of a knack and just as much cleverness in the making of good shoes as there is in the making of good watches. It's ceaseless attention to the little details that makes for perfection. Many manufacturers tell us that we are supercritical, but we find that material and workmanship have both got to be watched pretty closely if the high standard we insist upon is to be maintained. Every bit of leather that goes into our $4.00 Oxford is carefully inspected and the most skilled labor puts it together. That's our way of building business; style speaks for itself and the merest inspection will prove the up-to-dateness of the designs we offer you this season.

POLICE AND FIREMEN MUST PAY THEIR FARE

Mayor Moy received the following letter today from President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public ervice Corporation, which explains itself:

"Referring to my letter to you of April 24, I have to say that since it was written I have been advised by our counsel that the provision quoted therein prohibits the carrying of policemen and firemen in uniform as well as without, which advice accounts for the action which has been taken by the company effective this date. I write this in order to clear up any misunderstanding there may be, due to the contents of my former letter, and our subsequent action which is herein explained."

INCREASED PAY FOR FIREMEN IS GRANTED

The ordinance granting an increase in pay to the members of the fire department was adopted on third reading at the May meeting of the Common Council, last night, and as soon as the Mayor signs the ordinance it will become effective. The ordinance charges the salaries as follows:

Chief engineer, from $1,100 to $1,350; first assistant, from $1,080 to $1,200; captains, from $1,020 to $1,140; engineer of steamer, $82.50, same as before; Class A, from $960 to $1,000; B, from $900 to $960; C, from $840 to $924; D, from $780 to $792; E, $720, same as last year. The call-men will receive the same as before, $55 a year, except where they act as captain of the hook and ladder and then they will receive $100 a year and where they act as engineer of the steamer they will receive $82.50 a year.

JR.O.U.A.M. COUNCIL'S FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Plainfield Council, No. 293, Jr. O. U. A. M., celebrated its fifth anniversary last night, holding a "ladies' night" affair. There was an excellent program provided by the good and welfare committee comprising Frank W. Downs, Julius Williams and George B. Cratsley.

Prof. Duryea, of the Star Lyceum Bureau, entertained the company with impersonations, recitations and character sketches and there were mandolin, violin, piano and vocal selections by Walter and William Cubberley. A feature was an address of welcome by Col. Oakley, of Elizabeth, who is a member of the order. Refreshments were served during the evening.

The Council was instituted five years ago on April 30 with thirty-seven members. Today there are 126. Winfield S. Angleman was the first councillor, and Mayor G. W. V. Moy was the first treasurer. Daniel VanWinkle is the present councillor.

SCHOOL BOARD ASKS $74,000 FOR YEAR

All the members of the Board of Education were present last night at the regular monthly meeting excepting President Leander Lovell. It was decided to ask the Board of School Estimate for $74,000 for the coming year, an increase of $7,000 over the last year's estimate of the school expenses. The increase is due in part to the salary increase voted at the March meeting of the board.

Bills amounting to $1,314.47 were ordered paid and the tax collector announced that $327.78 had been collected for the school funds during April. The balance reported by the custodian of school funds was $12,342.73 and the clerk of the board, F. B. Clark, was authorized to make the necessary arrangements for the commencement exercises preliminary to the summer vacation.

The judges selected to award the prizes in English composition for which the manuscripts are all in are Charles A. Selden, Miss Margaret McCutchen and James D. Ferguson.

Following the decision of the board to centralize as much as possible the opportunities of the children of the upper grades of the schools which have been overcrowded it was decided last night to put grades six, seven and eight on one continuous session, 8:30 to 1 o'clock. This gives the older children an opportunity to attend the school hours and complete their studies and permit those who must do so to help their families in whatever capacity they are accustomed to work. The order affects the Washington, Irving and Jefferson schools.

P.O. CLERKS ENJOY ANNUAL DANCE

Local postoffice clerks and their friends to the number of nearly five hundred enjoyed the annual dance of the P. O. Clerks' Association in Saengerbund Hall last night and at the conclusion of the affair it was declared to have been the most successful ever conducted by the association. William Sharp, floor manager, had no difficulty in fulfilling his position and assured the reporters that it was the "finest ever."

Music was furnished by Suhr's Imperial Orchestra and encores were the order of the night. A. E. LaPorte had his hands full attending to the wants of the patrons of the cloak room and Elmer Squier kept tabs on the ticket window. William Thorn was an efficient handler of the ice cream department and H. Fred Miller cared for the thirsty soda water drinkers.

The proceeds of the ball will be used to defray the expenses of the delegates to the State convention of postoffice clerks which occurs here on Memorial Day. The hall was beautifully decorated in the national colors while the stage was profusely covered with palms and tropical plants.

An Ejectment Suit.

Recorder Charles M. Dolliver, who represented Katheryn Sutphen in an ejectment suit in the Supreme Court at Somerville yesterday, secured a verdict for his client. Owing to the absence of counsel for the defense Judge Vail directed the jury which tried the case to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff. The parties live in the borough.

The difference in averages for the four years high school course, between the two young women, is very slight, being less than one point.

Announcement was also made in the school today of the Plainfield Princeton's Club's offer of a $50 cash prize to the student passing the best entrance examination for the Princeton freshmen class. The offer is open to boys in either Plainfield or North Plainfield. Pamphlets giving conditions and all details were distributed among the pupils.

MOY NOT TO APPROVE NEW BUILDING CODE

Mayor G. W. V. Moy, it is said, will not aprpove the resolution passed by the Council, Monday night, authorizing the fire committee to settle with Fisk, Doer & Carroll, for a team secured for No. 4 fire house, one of which died. The Council's resolution called for a settlement for the dead horse by paying Fiss Doer & Carroll, $162.50, the firm to take back the surviving animal.

Mayor Moy said today that the city has not engaged in the "dead horse" business yet, and besides he said that the Council did not authorize by resolution the purchase of the team in the first place, and that a team cannot be purchased except by resolution. Mr. Moy also asserted that there is only one committee of the Council permitted to expend money without a resolution and that is the police board and it cannot exceed $30.

The Mayor is also not likely to approve the new building code passed on third reading Monday night. In his opinion it is too cumberson and he says that he has had several requests to hold the matter for the present.

A HUMANE SOCIETY

Organized Yesterday to Cover All Phases of Prevention of Cruelty.

STATEWIDE AND INFLUENTIAL.

Dr. Stephen J. Keefe Elected President—Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen Chairman of Executive Committee.

A meeting at which every society of the State interested in prevention of cruelty, whether of animals or humans, was represented, took place yesterday in the parish house of St. James' church, Elizabeth, and resulted in the formation of a society which will eventually become Statewide and influential. The object of the new association is to prevent cruelty of whatever nature and it has the support of many of the leading men of the State. Mayor Stein, of Elizabeth, in his address yesterday to the delegates to the conference declared that it was a shame that such an organization should be necessary in this enlightened country.

All anti-cruelty associations are expected to join the new organization and a committee consisting of Dr. Stephen J. Keefe, of Elizabeth; Mrs G. C. Ainsworth, of Rahway, and Mrs. Stephen G. VanHoesen, of Fanwood, was chosen to draw up a set of by-laws for the new association. Another committee on "Legislation and Humane Education" will be appointed, each society being empowered to select a member of the committee.

The officers of the new association are: President, Dr. Stephen J. Keefe, of Elizabeth; first vice-president, Mrs. E. F. Holt, of Summit; second vice-president, Albert Bell, of Atlantic City; third vice-president, Mrs. G. C. Ainsworth, of Rahway; secretary, Miss Mary Barber, of Elizabeth; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Lynch, of Lakewood.

An executive board of five members will be appointed of which Mrs. Van Hoesen is chairman. She will announce her appointments to the board later. The new society has made the point that where other societies of a similar nature exist there shall be held the meetings which will go far toward strengthening the cause of humanity. Charles West, president of the Elizabeth Humane Society, addressed the conference stating the obejcts for which the delegates had met. The new organization starts off with members in every city of prominence in the State.

MISSIONARY SOCIETIES OF THE FIRST M. E. MEET.

The foreign society held a sewing meeting in the morning at 10 o'clock followed by a short business session of a routine nature. Mrs. M. Winter presided and Mrs. C. M. Anderson read a paper on "Education of Women in China," which was exceedingly interesting.

Following lunch the home mission society held a business meeting, Mrs. N. W. Pike presiding. Mrs. Samuel Bingaman then gave an informal talk describing her recent trip to Porto Rico, telling of the native child being supported by the society in the George R. Robinson Home there. A photograph of the child taken by Mr. Bingaman, was shown with considerable interest.

The Dunellen Board of Education appointed the following committees at its regular monthly meeting, last night: Teachers, Messrs. Day, Wynkoop and Bogardus; text books and supplies, Hannley, Todd and Dayton; buildings and grounds, Frederick, Neilor and Cameron; finance, Day, Hannley and Frederick.

A committee composed of Messrs. Bogardus, Frederick, Hannley and Superintendent Guy H. Reutschler, was also appointed to arrange for the annual closing exercises on June 15. A competent speaker will be secured to make an address and the pupils will provide a program.

The teaching corps was re-engaged intact for the coming year. This is very much out of the ordinary as usually there are a few resignations. The teachers' committee was also authorized to secure a competent instructor for the new manual training department. Owen Mohair was also re-appointed truant officer.

DELAY IN THE MAIL DUE TO GOV'T ORDER

Delays in the delivery of mail during the month of May may be due to the extra work that will be done in an effort to determine the different classes of mail matter. Beginning Monday employers in all postoffices took up the work of counting every piece of mail matter handled. In addition to the counting of the mail matter, the employes are required to give the time consumed in the handling of the different classes of matter. There has been much delay, consequently at the Plainfield postoffice.

The Postmaster-General, Frank H. Hitchcock, who is responsible for the order which will add materially to the work of every postoffice in the country during the month of May, is anxious to get some data in readiness for the commission which will make an investigation of the Postoffice Department in the near future.

There are four things which the department wishes to ascertain, viz: First, the number of pieces of mail handled; second, the actual time consumed in handling; third, the average number of pieces handled per minute; fourth, the average number of handlings each piece of mail receives in the course of delivery.

Naturally, to obtain these statistics in accord with the orders received from the Postoffice Department, necessitates a vast amount of extra work in every postoffice in New Jersey and throughout the United States as well. Each clerk, as he handles a piece of mail, must keep tabs whether it is first or second class, how many times it is handled, and the time consumed in such handling. Finally, at the end of each day's work, the statistics are turned in at the office of the assistant postmaster or postmaster of each office, as the case may be, and the daily aggregate is made up.

Even the carriers on the various rural routes throughout the State are obliged to give similar statistics, and they will also have to weigh the mail they handle. Of course, once these statistics have been compiled and submitted to the Post office department, it will enable the officials to arrive at the exact cost, approximately, of handling any one class of mail matter. These facts, when presented to the commission, will show exactly what it costs to operate the department.

Acting under orders from the Postoffice Department at Washington, clerks in the local office began yesterday a thorough "stock-taking," which will continue through the month. Each clerk is required to count every piece of mail handled by him, dividing the matter into separate classes and noting the time taken in the work. The same course is being followed in all the offices in the country.

The local postal officials are without information as to the purpose of the work. It has never been undertaken so thoroughly here before, it is stated, but beyond the order to cary out the instructions and a supply of necessary blanks, Washington has not indicated the reason for the count.

MARTINE DEBATES

Jersey Senator Posing as a Farmer is Heard for First Time by Colleagues.

AUTHORITY ON STOCK PRICE.

Correcting Heyburn, of Idaho, Who Asserted That Milch Cows Are Costly Says They are Worth But $50 Each.

Senator Martine, of New Jersey, made himself heard in debate on the floor of the Senate at Washington, yesterday for the first time when he rallied to the support of Senator Stone, of Missouri, during the latter's argument in favor of the proposed Canadian reciprocity agreement. The Missouri Senator was quoting statistics from the report prepared by the Tariff Board to show that milch cows were valued as highly in Canada as in the United States, on the average. The claim was disputed by Senators Smoot, of Utah, and Heyburn, of Idaho, both of whom are bitterly opposed to the reciprocity arrangement. The latter declared that milch cows could not be bought for much less than $150 per head in his section of the country. It was at this point that Senator Martine mixed up in the debate.

"I have been a farmer all my life," explained Mr. Martine to the Senate, after he had been recognized, " and I want to say that the statement that the average price of milch cows in the United States would run from a hundred to a hundred and fifty dollars is a monstrosity and absurdity. Throughout the State of New Jersey, the great dairy districts of Sussex county, New Jersey and Orange county, New York, which is the acme of the dairy district, the average price will not range over forty to fifty dollars. That there are instances where cows bring over $100 I don't deny, but they are specials. I have a neighbor who paid $2,100 for a cow, but this is an extraordinary instance and cannot be considered as an average price."

Senator Smoot interposed to declare "you cannot buy a good milch cow in my section of the country for less than fifty to seventy-five dollars."

Mr. Martine replied: "I can buy you hundreds of them for forty to forty-five dollars in New Jersey."

"Here is a chance for a trade at once," interposed Senator Reed, of Missouri.

"Yes, but freight charges and cost of transportation make it an impracticable proposition," answered Senator Smoot.

Senator Stone then resumed his argument and referred to Senator Martine's statement to substantiate the points he was making to the effect that there is no serious discrepancy between prices that prevail in Canada and in this country.

ASK-FARES RULING

Public Utilities Commission to Decide About School Children Tickets.

WHAT FRANK BERGEN SAYS.

P. S. C. General Counsel Attaches Little Weight to Local Ordinance Which Provides for Reduced Rate.

Until the Board of Public Utility Commissioners has passed upon the matter the Public Service Railway Company will issue no more tickets at reduced rates to or for school children as told in yesterday's issue of this paper.

A representative of The Daily Press today drew the attention of Frank Bergen, general counsel of the P. S. C., to the provision in the local franchise ordinance, section 14, page 101, of the ordinances of Plainfield. Mr. Bergen viewed the agreement made with the city that school chidren should ride at a reduced fare as of little consequence. He was inclined to the opinion that the new utilities law overides the local ordinance. The Plainfield ordinance is a municipal contract with the company, it is asserted, and in Mr. Bergen's opinion the state can make laws which in effect abrogate municipal contracts. He added that the proper course to pursue would be for Plainfield to submit the questoin to the State Utilities Commission.

In the letter that was sent to the commissioner yesterday, President McCarter, of the traction company, asked for a ruling. In the mean time the reduced rate to school children will be suspended. All the outstanding tickets of this kind, however, will be honored.

That course was decided upon by the trolley officials late yesterday afternoon, and at the same time the company's officers reached the conclusion that under the new law it will be impossible to follow the custom of granting to churches and charitable institutions reduced rates for special cars.

Two points in the new law were considered by the traction officials when the question of reduced rates for school children was taken up. Under subdivision D of section 18, anything in the way of discriminating in rates is expressly forbidden. It was thought that the reduced rates for school children might come within this provision.

Then there arose the question of raising those rates to the regular fare but as subdivision H of section 18 provides that no increase in rates can be made uptil the utility commissioners have determined that it is just and reasonable, Mr. McCarter decided to write to the commissioners.

In his letter the trolley company head explained that in accordance with the provisions of certain ordinances and franchises the Public Service Company has been granting to school children, and in some instances to teachers, a reduced rate between the hours of 8 a. m., and 4 p m., and that pending an official ruling on the matter it had been decided to suspend the rate and issue no new tickets urtil the question at issue is decided.

HERE AND THERE.

Stanley Day, of New Market, has in his possession two newspapers which contain items of interest to the men and women of the present time owing to their contents. The "New Jersey Advocate," published in Rahway on May 22, 1827, contains this advertisement: "Wanted to Purchase, an active, healthy black girl from ten to fourteen years of age. For particulars enquire of the printer."

Another in the "Rahway Herald" of October 2, 1839, says, "The Whigs of Rahway and Woodbridge are invited to attend a meeting at Benj. Woodruff's on Friday evening the 4th October at 7 o'clock. Several addresses may be expected."

Both newspapers are in a good state of preservation although yellow with age. The one last quoted says "General Winfield Scott is formally proposed for President of the United States by the Hartford Ct. 'Patriot and Democrat' (Conservative), also by the Ithaca, N. Y., Chronicle and the Montrose, Pa., Spectator, both Whig."

There is also an advertisement of the old stage line which ran between New York and Rahway. On this line one could travel from New York to Rahway for the sum of 37½ cents. "Seats must be secured in advance by applying to D. Sanderson at Elizabethport."

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The telephone company franchise application was brought up informally at the regular monthly meeting of the Borough Council, Monday night. It was discussed in a semi-public manner and it was decided to lay the matter over for another month. The remainder of the business transacted was of a routine nature.

The roof of the engine room at the Greenbrook tanks of the Jersey Central caught fire Sunday morning. The employes were unable to cope with the blaze and sent to Dunellen for hose. Defender Fire Company sent down 1,000 feet on the pusher engine. It enabled the men to put out the flames. The damage was slight.

It was stated in St. John's church Sunday morning, that the net profits of the recent fair were $1,901. Father Dumphy complimented the workers on their great success and thanked all those who had assisted in the affair.

Miss Anna Ace left yesterday morning for her former home in Stroudsburg, Pa., where she will reside permanently. During her residence in Dunellen, Miss Ace made many friends who greatly regret her departure.

SOMERVILLE.

Saturday Manager Smith, of the Raritan baseball team, will open up the season. The Crescent military band will play, and after the parade from the clubhouse to the Vet End grounds, a short concert will be rendered. The regular line up has not been announced. The new uniforms will arrive this week.

Charles F. Hen[illegible] Trenton, has closed the con[illegible] for the purchase of the former [illegible] property in East Somerville, [illegible] he has held joint ownership with Charles Schwed for some time, and intends in the near future to begin the erection of a number of houses.

Alfred Rensdorf has presented the Elk' Club with a large mounted moose head, which has been placed over the mantle in the front of the new clubhouse.

Isaac P. Voorhees and granddaughter, Miss Helen Allen, of New York, are guests of Mrs. Louise Durham.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Green are entertaining their niece, Miss Vivian L'Amourex, of Detroit.

Mrs. J. N. Ramsey, of Lebanon, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. George Taylor, in Somerville.

William Cahill, of Raritan, is ill with pneumonia.

WESTFIELD.

The Fire Department Committee of Westfield Council, together with the chief of the fire department and chiefs of the fire departments of several neighboring cities and towns, witnessed a demonstration by an auto fire engine at the Park Lake on Broad street. The machine was given a severe test and appeared to work to the satisfaction of the firemen. Westfield firemen claim that a steam or power engine is necessary for the protection of the town, owing to the low pressure in the water mains.

Invitations are to be issued to the officials of the neighboring towns to take part in the Fourth of July celebration at Westfield this year. The purpose of the committee in charge is to make it a combination of "Old Home Week" and Independence Day celebration, spreading the celebration over the entire week.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The South Plainfield baseball club under the management of P. A. McDonough is now reorganizing and will open their third season next Sunday. The team was first organized in 1909 passing through the first season with only three defeats in their record and in 1910 they played up to August 1 without losing a game. The Jackson F. C., of Plainfield, will be the attraction next Sunday. South Plainfield will probably lineup as follows: Thornton, 1b; Miller, 2b; W. Smith, 3b; Barone, ss; A. McDonough, 5f; J. McDonough, rf; Bareri, cf; Moran, p; P. McDonough, c.

The tickets are out for the euchre and dance to be held in Washington Hall May 17, for the benefit of Sacred Heart church.

Surveyors of the Tidewater Oil Company surveyed the property just purchased by P. F. Kaine yesterday.

SELLING TICKETS NOT ESSENTIAL TO SERVICE.

Refusal of the Public Service Railway Company to sell tickets to its patrons does not, in the judgment of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners, constitute a failure on the part of the company to furnish safe and adequate service. Holding this in view the board has dismissed the petition of Joseph Anderson for an order compelling the company to resume the practice of selling tickets.

Mr. Anderson did not ask for any reduction in price, but claimed that it would not only be a convenience to carry tickets, but would materially assist in loading the cars quickly. In defense of its abandonment of tickets the company claimed that the printing and sale of them entailed a great expense, that they were liable to be counterfeited, that they were experimenting on devices to register fares in boxes and that only coins could work the mechanism. Samples of such boxes were exhibited to the board and have been in use on the cars of the company.

SPORTS

News and Notes

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Mike Ryan, the Irish-American Club's crack distance runner, has sailed for England from Montreal, accompanied by his trainer, Johnny Hayes. Ryan will try for the English Marathon championship race on May 27.

The entry for the fifteen-mile professional foot race at Celtic Park, Long Island, next Sunday, shows that Tom Longboat, the Indian, who has just signaled his return to the game by beating speedy Gusta Ljungstrom in Buffalo; Hans Holmer, Bill Queal and Alfred Shrubb will measure paces.

That the long-looked-for Gotch-Hackenschmidt wrestling match for the championship of the world may be arranged for immediately is the opinion of Matchmaker Joe Coffey of the Empire A. C., Chicago. Gotch arrived in Chicago last Monday and announced that he was ready to sign for a go with the Russian lion. It is planned to hold the match Labor Day.

Trophies won in may famous regattas in the past, together with a score of racing shells, were lost in a fire which destroyed the home of the Riverside Boat Club on the banks of the Charles River, Cambridge, Mass., yesterday morning. The money loss is estimated at $20,000, but the value of the mementos cannot be computed in dollars and cents.

Advices received at Harvard University from England indicate that the question of a challenge from Oxford and Cambridge for a dual athletic meet in July between the English universities and a Harvard-Yale team is nearing a decision. There is said to be some doubt about Oxford being willing to participate in such a meet. But in case Oxford should decide not to take part, Cambridge is likely to challenge alone.

A thousand athletes will compete in New York next Saturday in a modified marathon race over a twelve-mile course through city streets. The entrants include the greatest distance runners in the country, who will compete for the honor of representing America in the world's Marathon championship at the Stockholm Olympic games next summer.

BASEBALL.

Baseball is becoming mighty big. The commercial end of the game is playing such an important part, that the attention of capitalists is being attracted to the great national sport. Talk of syndicate baseball is being indulged in. Suggestions have been made in various cities that the National League and the American League pool their interests and play on the same grounds. Over in New York the owners of the Giants are anxious to co-operate with the owners of the Yankee and build one vast park for both teams. Another suggestion, which is not so bad, is for the Giants and the Yankees to build parks side by side—one on Manhattan Field and the other on the new fire-destroyed Polo Grounds. If the baseball moguls aren't more careful, the public will get sore. Then settle back for a big slump for the national pastime.

KEEPP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has cured thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Plainfield citizen's recommendation:

Mrs. Margaret Reville, 732 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I was troubled by lame and weak back and I never found anything that would help me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills from Randolph's Drug Store. My back was so painful and sore that I dreaded to stoop and whenever I caught cold or exerted myself, I suffered more severely. I tried several kidney remedies but it was left for Doan's Kidney Pills, which I obtained at Randolph's Drug Store, to cure me. They are certainly a most effective preparation for kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

SURPRISE PARTY GIVEN FOR IRVING STEBBINS.

Irving Stebbins was given a surprise party last night at his home on West Fifth street by about twenty-five of his friends. The affair turned itself into a May Day party at which the decorations were pink and white. The evening was passed in playing games and enjoying vocal and instrumental music.

One of the features of the affair was the crowning of a May Queen. She was selected from among those present by Irving Stebbins and after the queen had been crowned a march was organized and the queen surrounded with her court. As they passed her in procession each one present was presented with a pink or white carnation. The scene was a pretty one.

NEW REAL ESTATE OFFICE—Will open up my new office on Monday morning at No. 155 North avenue, ground floor. Have already purchased a good size book for the purpose of listing every property in Plainfield. My object is to fill it full of the conditions of your property, including the size of mortgage on same; then to leave the book to my grandchildren to read. I am the man who has been working in a four-dollar capacity to fight nervous prostration for the last four years and in those conditions have earned the title of selling and exchanging more property than any two agents in Plainfield. Now I am better and am ready for business. If you are coming to see me let me tell you something. Don't come near me if you expect me to handle your house, if it is sprinkled with signs or one sign which reads for sale by any broker, unless you want to sell out for 50 cents on the $1.00, for I want you to known that my feeling for you is the same as yours is for me, where you want to include me under any old broker. And let me tell you that these old signs are what make Plainfield real estate sell for less money than it does in any city or town along the Central, notwithstanding it has the name of "City Beautiful." Your any old broker means that some of them should be selling peanuts, instead of offering your property or spoiling the sale of it. Have sold seven properties in the last two weeks. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on the plan "that my time is yours." My office is not as it will be when the store front is changed, but will answer the purpose for a short time. 4 29 12

SOME CHOICE MENUS CONTAINING NO MEAT

It doesn't make the least difference to Mrs. Anna B. Scott whether she works with an ultra-modern kitchen equipment, marble-top table, electric range and aluminum cooking utensils—or with the simplest makeshifts for such luxury; she is equally at home in either case, and her practice of economy is not affected. At a recent demonstration given here by the Philadelphia North American's cooking expert and food economist, this was proven.

With a special view to preparing a low-priced meal which would omit meat and still furnish the requisite amount of nourishment, Mrs. Scott demonstrated the following menu:

Cream of Potato Soup
Escalloped Eggs
Stuffed Tomatoes
Lettuce Salad
Banana Cake

The recipes for these dishes are as follows:

Cream of Potato Soup.

1½ cups mashed potatoes, 2 cups hot milk, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon grated onion, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon white pepper.

Put the mashed potatoes in top of double boiler, add the hot milk and the onion. As soon as this boils add 2 cups boiling water, the salt, pepper, butter and flour, which have been rubbed together, stir until creamy, add parsley and a little paprika. This can be served with croutons.

Cost: Potatoes, 2 cents; milk, 4 cents; butter, 3 cents; other ingredients, 1 cent. Total, 10 cents.

Escalloped Eggs.

Six hard-boiled eggs, 1 cup fresh buttermilk, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 cup cold milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon white pepper, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley.

Brush a bakedish with a little melted butter, cover the bottom with one-third of the breadcrumbs, then add three of the hard-boiled eggs, which have been cut into piece, add another third of the breadcrumbs, then the other three eggs, cut in half, lengthwise, and lay with cut side up, sprinkle with salt and pepper, cover with the balance of breadcrumbs and cream sauce. Put into hot oven and bake 20 minutes, or until brown. Before serving, sprinkle over the top chopped parsley and the grated yolk of one egg which we have saved.

Cream Sauce.

Put the butter in a saucepan, add the flour, then the cold milk, slowly, add the salt and pepper and stir until smooth and creamy.

Cost: Eggs, 12 cents; butter, 3 cents; milk, 2 cents; other ingredients 3 cents. Total, 19 cents.

Stuffed Tomatoes.

Five tomatoes, 1 cup rice, 1 teaspoon salt, dash pepper, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon butter.

Wash the rice through several waters, put on with 4 quarts of boiling water and boil 25 minutes. Drain and blanch with boiling water.

Wash the tomatoes, cut off the blossom end, and remove the insides. Dust the inside with pepper and salt, fill with the plain boiled rice. Put the tomato, which we have taken out in a saucepan, with salt, pepper and a little butter. Put the stuffed tomatoes in a bakedish, put the balance of the rice around, and strain the tomato that has boiled over the rice. Bake 20 minutes, garnish with chopped parsley.

Cost: Tomatoes, 10 cents; rice, 4 cents; butter, parsley, salt and pepper, 3 cents. Total, 17 cents.

Banana Cake.

One cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 2 tablespoons sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¾ cup milk, 4 bananas, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon butter.

Sift the flour, salt, baking powder and 1 tablespoon sugar into a bowl; add the milk and a well-beaten egg, beat well. Skin and scrape the bananas, cut in half, lengthwise, then cut in half again. Brush bakepan with melted butter, pour in the batter, place the bananas on top and sprinkle over the balance of the sugar. Bake in a moderate oven 15 minutes. This can be eaten with milk or caramel sauce.

Caramel Sauce.

Two cups boiling water, 2 teaspoons cornstarch, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon caramel, 2 tablespoons lemon juice.

Mix the cornstarch with a little cold water and add to the boiling water, add the sugar, lemon juice and caramel. Boil one minute.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 7, 1911.

The story of Ruth is one of the most beautiful and inspiring to be found in history. At some time during the period of the Judges in Israel a famine prevailed in the land. A family of Bethlehem, consisting of Elimelech, his wife Naomi and their two sons, Mahlon and Chilion, being sore pressed, emigrated to Moab. Here Elimelech died, and after his decease the two sons married Moabitish wives, named respectively Orpah and Ruth. In ten years the sons also died, and Naomi resolved to return to Bethlehem. Ruth, after a most touching appeal, was allowed to return with her. They arrived at Bethlehem just at the beginning of the barley harvest, and Ruth, going out to glean, chanced to go into the field of Boaz, a wealthy man and near kinsman of Elimelech, her father-in-law. A romantic courtship followed, and Boaz took Ruth to be his wife. She bore him a son, who was called Obed. This son became the father of Jesse, who was the father of David. Thus Ruth became the ancestress of Christ. Her life teaches many useful lessons, some of which are especially appropriate for a consecration service.

1. The life of Ruth teaches a lesson on kindness. Naomi was accompanied part of the way toward the land of Judah by her daughters-in-law. When the hour of separation came and she bade them return "each to her mother's house" she added, "The Lord deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with the dead and with me." They had been kind to their husbands—her sons—and had dealt kindly with her in her bereavements and loneliness. It was kindness manifested in the home, in the family, a sphere of life where there is much need of the manifestation of more kindness and mutual consideration. The word "kind" is related to "kin," and kindness may well begin in the home. But it should not end there. As Christians, inspired by the example of Christ, we should do to all men as we would have them do to us.

2. The life of Ruth teaches a lesson on constancy. In her plea not to be sent back from accompanying Naomi to her old home Ruth shows a constancy of friendship and of love that has seldom been equaled. For Naomi she was willing to leave her own land, her own people, her own gods, and to accept those of her mother-in-law. "Whither thou goest, I will go; • • • thy people shall be my people and thy God my God; where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if aught but death part thee and me." Constant to death. Such constancy should characterize us in all the relations of life. It should especially be manifested in our religious lives. Christ wants just such constancy, such faithfulness, for He has said, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

3. The life of Ruth teaches a lesson on the profitableness of goodness. Of the life of Ruth it has been well said. "Human kindness, filial piety, affectionate constancy, uncomplaining toil, true chastity, sweet patience, strong faith, noble generosity, simple piety—all are here, and they are all observed by God and are shown to be pleasing to Him, who rewards them in due time." Ruth made a good choice when she chose Naomi's God as her God. For all the goodness of her life she was abundantly rewarded. Peace and plenty and high honor were among the blessings that God bestowed upon her in this life and eternal happiness in the life to come. Let us imitate Ruth's noble example and learn the lessons taught to us by her simple and beautiful life.

Teddy.

An act in real life which touched the hearts of all who witnessed the following incident at a county convention of Christian Endeavorers in Pennsylvania will go far to dispel the idea that it is impossible to reach the "street gamin" and hold him:

One afternoon, while conducting a conference in a large Presbyterian church, I noticed a lad about ten years of age come down the aisle and take a seat in one of the front pews. His face was dirty, his clothing was in need of repair, and on his head was perched a cap that had seen better days.

At the close of my address the chorus sang an anthem, during which the boy in the pew, turning in his sleep and getting too close to the edge, dropped from the pew to the floor.

It was only then that I was told that the boy had no real home. Everybody in the town knew him as Teddy. His mother was dead; his father was a drunkard. He had no home home training.

The second evening of the convention as I stepped to the platform to speak I noticed a little bouquet of roses on the pulpit and was told they were for me. Teddy had been there at 6 o'clock that evening and asked the janitor to place the roses on the pulpit for me.—A. J. Shartle, General Secretary, Pennsylvania Union.

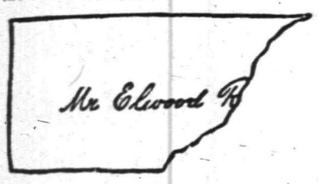
By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910, by Anna Katharine Rohlfs

Mr. Clifton drew from his pocket two small scraps of soiled and crumpled paper, one of which was the half of an envelope presenting very nearly the following appearance:



As he pointed this out he remarked:

"Elwood is not so common a baptismal name that there can be any doubt as to the person addressed."

The other scraps, also written in pencil and by the same hand, contained but two or three disconnected words, but one of those words was Adelaide.

"I spent an hour and a half in the yards adjoining the station before I found those two bits," explained the young lawyer. "I offer them in corroboration of Mr. Ranelagh's statement that the 'Come' used in the partially consumed letter found in the clubhouse chimney was addressed to Miss Carmel Cumberland and not to Adelaide and that the place of meeting suggested by this word was the station platform and not the spot since made terrible by death."

"You are acquainted with Miss Carmel Cumberland's handwriting?"

"If I am not the town is full of people who are. I believe these words to have been written by Carmel Cumberland."

Mr. Fox placed the pieces back in their envelope and laid the whole carefully away.

"We are obliged to you," said he.

"You can cancel the obligation," was the quick retort, "by discovering the identity of the man who, in derby hat and a coat with a very high collar, left the grounds of the Whispering Pines just as Mr. Ranelagh drove into them. I have no facilities for the job and no desire to undertake it."

He had endeavored to speak naturally, if not with an offhand air, but he failed somehow, else why the quick glance of startled inquiry which Dr. Perry sent him from under his rather shaggy eyebrows.

"Well, we'll undertake that, too," promised the district attorney.

"I can ask no more," returned Charles Clifton, rising to depart. "The confronting of that man with Ranelagh will cause the latter to unseal his lips. Before you have finished with my client you will esteem him much more highly than you do now."

Caleb Sweetwater of the New York police department, who entered the room after Clifton departed, was no beauty. He was plain featured to the point of ugliness. His receding chin and far too projecting nose were not likely to create a favorable impression on one ignorant of his cheerful, modest, winsome disposition.

"Mr. Sweetwater," said the district attorney, "we have some doubts if the man we have in hand is the man we really want. But, first, how much do you know about this case?"

"All that's in the papers."

"Nothing more?"

"Very little. I've not been in town above an hour."

"Are you known here?"

"I don't think so. It's my first visit this way."

"Then you are as ignorant of the people as they are of you. Well, that has its disadvantages."

"And its advantages, if you will permit me to say so, sir. I have no prejudices, no preconceived notions, to struggle against."

The eye of District Attorney Fox stole toward that of his brother official, but did not meet it. The coroner had turned his attention to the table again and, while betraying no embarrassment, was not quite his usual self. The district attorney's hand stole to his chin, which he softly rubbed with his lean forefinger as he again addressed Sweetwater.

"HE SHOULDN'T BE HARD TO FIND."

The story which followed is too well known to us for repetition. Sweetwater listened with snapping eyes to all that was said, and when he had been given the various clews indicating the presence of a third and as yet unknown party on the scene of crime he rose excitedly to his feet and, declaring that it was a most promising case, begged permission to make his own investigations at the Whispering Pines, after which he would be quite ready to begin his search for the man in the derby hat and high coat collar whose love for wine was so great that he chose and carried off the two choicest bottles that the clubhouse contained.

"If he exists and the whole story is not a pure fabrication of the entrapped Ranelagh he shouldn't be hard to find," said the detective.

CHAPTER VII.

"I CAN HELP YOU."

A HALF hour spent with Hexford in and about the clubhouse and Sweetwater was ready for the road. Musing and muttering, he plodded up the road, his insignificant figure an unpromising break in the monotonous white of the wintry landscape. Under ordinary circumstances Sweetwater would have met not more than a half dozen carts or sledges between the clubhouse gates and the city streets. But today the road was full of teams carrying all sorts of incongruous people, eager for a sight of the spot made forever notorious by a mysterious crime. He noted them all—the faces of the men, the gestures of the women—but he did not show any special interest till he came to that portion of the road where the long line of half buried fences began to give way to a few scattered houses. Then his spirit woke, and he became quick, alert and persuasive. He entered houses; he talked with the people. Though evidently not a dissipated man, he stopped at several saloons, taking his time with his glass and encouraging the chatter of all who chose to meet his advances. He was a natural talker and welcomed every topic, but his eye sparkled at one only. This he never introduced himself; he did not need to. Some one was always ready with the great theme, and once it was started he did not let the conversation languish till every one present had given his or her quota of hearsay or opinion to the general fund.

It seemed a great waste of time, for nobody had anything to say worth the breath expended on it.

He had left the country road behind and had entered upon the jumble of sheds, shops and streets which marked the beginnings of the town in this direction when his quick and experienced eye fell on a woman standing with uncovered head in an open doorway, peering up the street in anxious expectation of some one not yet in sight. A second survey of the woman's face convinced him that his ordinary loquaciousness would not serve him here. There was a refinement in her aspect quite out of keeping with the locality in which she lived, and he was hesitating how to proceed when fortune favored him by driving against his knees a small lad on an ill directed sled, bringing him almost to the ground and upsetting the child, who began to scream vociferously.

It was the woman's child, for she made instantly for the gate, which, for some reason, she found difficulty in opening. Sweetwater was at his best with children, and, catching the little fellow up, he soothed and fondled him and finally brought him with a merry air of triumph straight to his mother's arms.

He had in his pocket an ingenious little invention which he had exhibited all along the road as an indispensable article in every well kept house. He wanted to show it to her, but it was too cold a day for her to stop outside. Wouldn't she allow him to step in and explain how her work could be materially lessened and her labor turned to play by a contrivance so simple that a child could run it?

It was all so ridiculous in face of this woman's quiet intelligence that he laughed at his own words, and this laughter, echoed by the child and in another instant by the mother, made everything so pleasant for the moment that she insensibly drew back while he pulled open the gate, only remarking as she led the way in:

"I was looking for my husband. He may come any minute, and I'm afraid he won't care much about contrivances to save me work—that is, if they cost very much."

Sweetwater, whose hand was in his pocket, drew it hastily out.

"You were watching for your husband? Do you often stand in the open doorway looking for him?"

Her surprised eyes met his with a stare that would have embarrassed the most venturesome book agent, but this man was of another ilk.

"If you do," he went on imperturbably, "how much I would give if you had been standing there last Tuesday night when a certain cutter and horse went by on its way up the hill."

She was a self contained woman, this wife of a master mechanic in one of the great shops hard by, but her jaw fell at this, and she forgot to chide or resist her child when he began to pull her toward the open kitchen door.

"You were looking out," ventured Sweetwater. "And you did see that horse and cutter. What luck! It may save a man's life."

"Save!" she repeated, staggering back a few steps and dragging the child with her. "Save a man's life! What do you mean by that?"

"Not much if it was any cutter and any horse and at any hour. But if it was the horse and cutter which left the Whispering Pines at 10 or half past 10 that night then it may mean life or death to the man now in jail under the dreadful charge of murder."

Catching up her child, she slid into the kitchen and sat down with it in the first chair she came to. Sweetwater, following her, took up his stand in the doorway, unobtrusive, but patiently waiting for her to speak.

"Who are you?" she asked at length. "You have not told me your real business."

"I am a detective on the lookout for evidence in the case I have just mentioned. I have a theory that a most important witness in the same drove by here at the hour and on the night I have named. I want to substantiate that theory. Can you help me?"

Hahne & Co. Broad, New & Halsey Sts., Newark, N. J.

"I can help you some. You make it my duty, and I have never shrunk from duty. A horse and cutter did go by here on its way uphill last Tuesday night at about 11 o'clock. I remember the hour because I was expecting my husband every minute, just as I am now. He had some extra work on hand that night which he expected to detain him till 11 or a quarter after. Supper was to be ready at a quarter after. I heard the clock strike the hour and ran to the front door to look out. It was snowing very hard, and the road looked white and empty, but as I stood there a horse and cutter came in sight, which, as it reached the gate, drew up in a great hurry as if something was the matter. Frightened, because I'm always thinking of harm to my husband, whose work is very dangerous, I ran out bareheaded to the gate, when I saw why the man in the sleigh was making me such wild gestures. His hat had blown off and was lying close up against the fence in front of me. Anxious always to oblige, I made haste to snatch at it and carry it out to its owner. I received a sort of thank you and would never have remembered the occurrence if it had not been for that murder and if"—she paused doubtfully—"if I had not recognized the horse."

"Didn't you recognize the man?"

"No. The snow was blinding; besides, he wore a high collar, in which his head was sunk down almost out of sight."

"But the horse"—

"Was one which is often driven by here. Ask any one on the hill in what stable you can find a gray horse with a large black spot on his left shoulder. Now I must dish up my dinner."

"Just one question, madam. Was the hat what folks call a derby? Like this one, madam," he explained, drawing his own from behind his back.

"Yes, I think so. As well as I can remember it was like that. I'm afraid I didn't do it any good by my handling. I had to clutch it quick, and I'm sure I bent the brim, to say nothing of smearing it with flour marks. I had been cutting out biscuits, and my hands were white with flour," she explained simply.

Sweetwater made one final plea, and that was for her name.

"Eliza Simmons," was the straightforward reply, and this ended the interview.

Sweetwater went on up the hill. Toward the top he came upon a livery stable. Stopping in his good humored way, he entered into talk with a man loitering inside the great door. Before he left him he had asked him these questions:

"Any gray horse in town?"

"Yes, one. It belongs to a respectable family. There's a funeral there today"—

"Not Miss Cumberland's!" exclaimed Sweetwater, all agog in a moment.

"Yes, Miss Cumberland's."

The next turn Sweetwater took was toward the handsome residence district crowning the hill.

Fifteen minutes later he stood in a finely wooded street before an open gateway guarded by a policeman. Showing his badge, he passed in and entered a long and slightly curved driveway. As he did so he took a glance at the house. It was not as pretentious as he expected, but infinitely more inviting.

The ceremonies had been set for 3 o'clock, and it was now half past 2. As Sweetwater reached the head of the driveway he saw the first of a long file of carriages approaching up the street.

"Lucky that my business takes me to the stable," thought he. "What is the coachman's name? I ought to remember it. Ah! Zadok—Zadok Brown. There's a combination for you!"

He had reached this point in his soliloquy—a bad habit of his, for it sometimes took audible expression—when he ran against another policeman set to guard the side door. A moment's parley and he left this man behind, but not before he had noted this door and the wide and hospitable veranda which separated it from the driveway.

"I am willing to go all odds that I shall find that veranda the most interesting part of the house," he remarked in quiet conviction to himself as he noted its nearness to the stable and the ease with which one could step from it into a vehicle passing down the driveway.

It had another point of interest, or, rather, the wing had to which it was attached. As his eye traveled back across this wing in his lively walk toward the stable he caught a passing glimpse of a nurse's face and figure in one of its upper windows.

Once around the corner, he perceived that the stable door was closed, but that a window well up the garden side was open. Encountering no watchful eye, he stepped up to the stable window and peered in.

A man sat with his back to him polishing a bit of harness. This was probably Zadok, the coachman. Sweetwater suddenly experienced a momentary confusion by observing the head and shoulders of Policeman Hexford leaning toward him from an opposite window—in much the same fashion and certainly with exactly the same intent as himself. As their glances crossed both flushed and drew back, only to return again, each to his several peephole. Neither meant to lose the advantage of the moment. Both had heard of the gray horse and wished to identify it.

There were three stalls, and in each stall a horse stamped and fidgeted. Only one held their attention. This was a mare on the extreme left, a large gray animal with a curious black patch on its near shoulder. The faces of both men changed as they recognized this distinguishing mark, and instinctively their eyes met. The coachman rubbed away with less and less purpose until his hands stood quite still and his whole figure drooped in irresistible despondency. As he raised his face, moved perhaps by that sense of a watchful presence to which all of us are more or less susceptible, they were both surprised to see tears on it. The next instant he had started to his feet and the bit of harness had rattled from his hands to the floor.

"Who are you?" he asked, with a touch of anger quite natural under the circumstances. "Can't you come in by the door and not creep sneaking up to take a man at disadvantage?"

As he spoke he dashed away the tears with which his cheeks were still wet.

"I thought a heap of my young mistress," he added in evident apology for this display of what such men call weakness. "I didn't know that it was in me to cry for anything, but I find that I can cry for her."

Hexford left his window, and Sweetwater slid from his. Next minute they met at the stable door.

"Had luck?" whispered the local officer.

"Enough to bring me here," acknowledged the other.

"Do you mean to this house or to this stable?"

"To this stable."

"Have you heard that the horse was out that night?"

"Yes; she was out."

"Who driving?"

"Ah, that's the question!"

"This man can't tell you."

"But I'm going to talk to him for all that."

"He wasn't here that night. He was at a dance. He only knows that the mare was out."

"But I'm going to talk to him."

"May I come in too? I'll not interrupt. I've just fifteen minutes to spare."

Hexford threw open the stable door, and they both walked in. The coachman was not visible, but they could hear him moving above, grumbling to himself.

"I'll be down in a minute," he called out as their steps sounded on the hardwood floor.

Hexford sauntered over to the stalls. Sweetwater stopped near the doorway and glanced very carefully about him. Nothing seemed to escape his eye. He even took the trouble to peer into a waste bin and was just on the point of lifting down a bit of broken bottle from an open cupboard when Brown appeared dressed in his Sunday coat and carrying a bunch of fresh hothouse roses.

"Who's that man?" he grunted to Hexford.

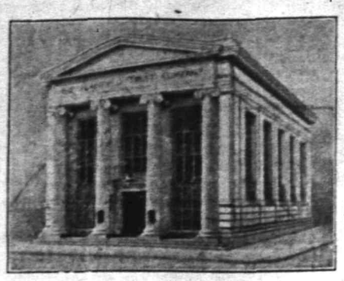
An individual executor may never have had any previous experience in the duties he is called upon to perform, or he may be expert in one, or possibly two, branches of his trust.



This Company is a "professional" executor, and its knowledge is the result of many years of experience in managing estates, while the fees charged are no greater than those allowed by law to an individual.

THE EARLIEST OBSERVATION OF RAINFALL ON RECORD.

The rain gage made in 1639 by Benedetto Castelli, Galileo's contemporary, has been regarded as the first, but evidence of earlier instruments has been found by Dr. Y. Wada, of the Corean Meteorological Observatory at Chemulpo.

From Corean records, is seems that rain gages were regularly used as early as 1442. They were bronze vases fifteen inches deep and seven inches in diameter, mounted on pillars, and King Sajo ordered them placed at the observatory and supplied to the provinces and cantoons, reports of the observations to be sent to court.

MRS. McCUTCHEN ENTERTAINS CONTINENTAL CHAPTER.

The members of Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, were entertained yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, of Rockview avenue, vice-regent of the chapter. Matters of interest to the chapter were discussed. The delegate to the National Congress at Washington, Mrs. J. H. Babin, read an account of her "impressions as a delegate to her first congress."

After the transaction of the business, all enjoyed a little friendly conversation and partook of a cup of tea. The next meeting will be held at the home of the regent, Mrs. E. G. Read, Monday afternoon, May 22, at 3 o'clock.

CONSERVATION WINS VICTORY

The legal authority of the Secretary of Agriculture to regulate grazing lands of national forests and charge fees for grazing privileges, and in general to establish rules and regulations of such forests has been settled for all times, by the Supreme Court of the United States. The court has handed down two decisions, written by Justice Lamar, and concurred in by the other members of that tribunal, involving cases arising, one on the Holy Cross National Forest in Colorado, the other in the Sierra National Forest in California. They sustain the exact position upon which the forest service took its stand while Gifford Pinchot was forester, and to maintain which the former forester fought a hard fight against implacable foes. These foes had skilled lawyers both in the courts and on the floor of the Congress, who in and out of season attacked the forest service with ferocity and persistence.

It was under the Congressional act of 1891 that the forest service acted, as a part of the Department of Agriculture, in framing rules to regulate the national forests. That law said that "The Secretary of Agriculture shall make rules and regulations and establish such service as insures the object of those (forest) reserves, namely, regulate the occupancy and use thereof and prevent their destruction."

MISS MARY COLES TELLS PROBLEMS IN MISSION WORK.

A paper full of interest on "Problems and Policies in Mission Work," was presented by Miss Mary Coles, at the meting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. Miss Coles gave statistics showing the extent of missionary work and the powerful internal motives linked with the divine command that made it impossible for the Christian man and woman to leave it undone. She dwelt on the policy of training native workers whose knowledge of their countrymen made their influence more effective and led to self-propogation and self-support.

With the problem solved of an effective native church, the opinion is given by students of the subject that every village in the world could be reached by the gospel within the next fifty years.

The paper was preceded by a devotional led by Mrs. Brewin.

After Brutal Negro.

The police are looking for a negro who beat to death a bull terrier, the property of Miss Louise Fisk Waring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, of West Seventh street, a granddaughter of former Mayor Fisk. The dog was killed by being struck with a stone while Miss Waring, who is but five years old, was out walking with her nurse yesterday afternoon.

Old-Timer Returns.

Frank Moncton was arraigned before Recorder Dolliver yesterday morning on the old charge of drunkenness. It was his first appearance in a year and the magistrate let him off on suspended sentence as a reward of merit.

LOCAL SUFFRAGISTS AT BIG GATHERING

Castle Point, Hoboken, was the scene of an enthusiastic meeting of the Equal Franchise Society of New Jersey yesterday, when Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stevens entertained the members of the several New Jersey societies at their beautiful home. Among those who attended the meeting from this city were Charles S. Sheldon and Champlain L. Riley. Mrs. Edward F. Feickert, of Dunellen, was also present. Upward of 125 guests were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Stevens.

Among the speakers were Mrs. Clara Laddey, president of the New Jersey State Suffrage Association and Mr. Riley. Mrs. Laddey told of the work being done in this part of the State and Mr. Riley told of the efforts being made by the Plainfield and North Plainfield Equal Suffrage League to obtain suffrage for women. He said that a branch of the league would soon be formed in each election district and that money had been appropriated to engage competent men connected with the movement to govern the formation of these district branches.

Assistant District Attorney Elder, of Kings county, New York, declared that when political consciousness was possessed by the women and they really felt that they were being deprived of their rights nothing could resist them if they then made a demand for suffrage.

LOCAL YOUNG COUPLE WEDDED AT ST. MARY'S

Miss Delia Theresa Sullivan, of Spooner avenue, and John Remppies, of Webster place, were married in St. Mary's church yesterday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Bogan. Miss Mary Sullivan, a sister of the bride, and Frank Remppies, a brother of the groom, were the attendants.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the couples' new home at West Sixth and Liberty streets. It was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. The young couple received many handsome presents, the collection including furniture, cut glass and bric-a-brac.

Mr. Remppies is employed at W. W. Warnock's bakery and has a large acquaintanceship in the city and borough. His bride is also very well known.

BOROUGH HIGH PUPILS IN BROADHURST PLAY

The North Plainfield High School Athletic Association will present George Broadhurst's laughable farce comedy "What Happened to Jones," at the Park Club tomorrow night. Rehearsals have been in progress the past two months and those in a position to know say that the production will be a "top-notcher" in the list of local amateur attempts. The advance sale of seats indicates a large audience.

The cast has been selected from among the most talented of the school pupils and is as follows.

"Jones," hymn book agent, J. Percival Watson; "Ebenezer Goodly,' a professor, Andrew Stiglitz; "Antony Goodly, D. D.," Bishop of Ballart, Harry B. Jackson; "Richard Heatherly," engaged to Marjorie, E. F. Bodin; "Thos. Holder, a policeman, Pierson J. Bailey; "Will Bigbee," an inmate of sanitorium Frank M. Krewson; "Henry Fuller,' superintendent, Carl C. Taylor; "Mrs. Goodly," Ebenezer's wife, Florence Dealy; "Cissy," Ebenezer's ward, Nettie Steiner; "Marjorie," Ezenezer's daughter, Anna Warnock; "Minerva," Ebenezer's daughter, Margaret Darby; "Alvira Stargert." Mrs. Goodly's sister, Helen Edgar; 'Helma" a servant, Lucile Ewart.

Broadhurst's farces and comedies are known the world over, many of them having made record runs, notably "My Friend From India" and "The Man of the Hour." "What Happened to Jones" is one of his best efforts and is filled with bright lines and ludicrous situations. The borough school cast is capable of making the best of every part. Mr. Baker, the coach, has been unsparing in his rehearsals, but it has resulted in what might be termed perfection for the entire production. The only way for doubting Thomases to be convinced is to secure seats for the performance. The proceeds will be used for the promotion of athletics in the school, principally baseball.

METHODISTS MEET

SUNDAY SCHOOLS THE SUBJECT.

William J. Conroy and E. H. Beekman Also Among the Speakers At Session Held in Vincent Chapel.

Under the auspices of the Methodist Social Union, comprising the members of the First, Grace and Monroe Avenue M. E. church, a meeting and social was held in Vincent chapel, of the First M. E. church, last night, for the purpose of discussing methods for increasing the efficiency of the various departments of church work especially that of the Sunday-school. The chapel was crowded with Christian workers and all were deeply interested in the several speeches made during the evening. Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Grace church, presided and explained the purposes of the union in a few words.

The chief speaker of the evening was Rev. Dr. E. S. Lewis, of the Methodist Sunday-school Board, New York. His was almost entirely a suggestive address dealing with the latest and most approved methods of Sunday-school work; also telling of the great possibilities for Christian work to be found in the Sunday-school. His remarks opened up a wide range of thought which proved of great benefit to all present.

The audience was greatly interested in the exhibit of two extra large pictures by Dr. James R. Joy, showing members of the largest Sunday-school in this country. This school which numbers 4,000 is identified with the M. E. church at Brazil, Ind., and the pictures were taken recently following an Easter campaign for an increase in membership. Brazil, Dr. Joy explained, is about the size of North Plainfield. One of the pictures was of a men's Bible class, said to be the largest in this country. After the meeting the photographs were examined closely.

Contrasting present day methods with those when he was a boy, W. J. Conroy, superintendent of Grace M. E. church Sunday-school, showed the great improvement, together with the increased advantages today. Superintendent E. H. Beekman, of the Monroe Avenue church Sunday-school, made a few remarks, in which he said that seven of the trustees and officials in his church were former members of the school, showing how the school should be a feeder for the church.

A social hour followed, during which refreshments were served, under the direction of a general committee, comprising a membership from all three churches.

At the Plainfield theatre on Saturday, both matinee and night, Miss Grace George will be seen in her most successful comedy, "Sauce for the Goose," which promises to be one of the theatrical events of the season. Unusual interest has already been manifested to see Miss George in a play that is already being credited as a superior play to "Divorcons" and many theatre parties have been arranged to journey down to the local theatre this week to see the brilliant comedienne.

Geraldine Bonner, the authoress, has exemplified the idea that the public wants farce. It doesn't ask too much logic or too much sence, in its entertainment, but it wants fun, and in "Sauce for the Goose," there is fun and plenty of it, the sparkling, bubbling sort that entertains tnd pleases. The play is one that fits Miss George and her capable company to a nicety.

Additional Banquet Speakers.

Former Assemblyman William B. Garrabrandt, of Newark and Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, will be extra speakers at the banquet to be given this evening by the Circles on the Square of the Township of New Providence and Warren, at the Waldorf Hotel. He was expected to explain the Geran election law. The other speakers anounced yesterday are expected.

MORE P. O. MONEY

A LONG DELAY IS CERTAIN.

No Plans to Be Considered Martine Learns Until September 1912 —Total Appropriation $150,000.

A bill proposed to increase from $100,000 to $150,000 the appropriation for the construction of a postoffice building in this city, was introduced in the United States Senate at Washington, D. C., yesterday afternoon by Senator Briggs. Of the original $100,000 authorized for the structure, $35,000 has been expended for a site. This leaves $60,000 for the construction purposes. Assistant Secretary Bailey, of the Treasury Department, recently advised Senator Martine that drawings for the proposed postoffice building there would not be taken up by the Department until September, 1912.

The site chosen for the proposed new building is on Watchung avenue, beginning at East Second street and extending to a point near the Friends meeting house, and was acquired through condemnation proceedings on the part of the Federal authorities. The commissioners appointed by Judge Rellstab to condemn the property were Frank H. Smith, William A. Woodruff and J. Fred MacDonald. They fixed the price for the property to be purchased from the Force Estate and the Religious Society of Friends the same as originally agreed upon. The announcement that the plans for the new structure will not be taken up until next year, is greatly regretted here by those who hoped to see the building built this year.

TWO HEARTLESS MEN ARE SCORED IN COURT

The Overseer-of-the-Poor Alexander Ayers appeared as complainant in the city court this morning. Anthony Sobinski, of McCrea place, was put under $300 bonds to support his wife in default of which he will have to go to jail. Charles O'Neil, whose bedridden mother needs his help, was also put under $300 bonds to give her three dollars a week.

Judge DeMeza listened patiently to the testimony in the first case and after the testimony of Mrs. Sobrinsky was given through the interpretation made by her loyal son, fifteen years old, he rebuked Sobrinsky for his conduct and issued his edict. Mrs. Sobrinsky has been twice in Muhlenberg Hospital and is about ready to go again for an operation. She said that her husband was continually coming home drunk and had given her but two dollars since last January. Her two boys were her support in all her troubles and that she wanted something done to prevent her husband's abuse as well as part of his earnings. Sobinsky earns about $15 a week and the judge informed him that he ought to be ashamed of himself for treating his wife in an inhuman manner.

Cruelty to a Horse.

Edward G. Swanson, whose truck farm is in the west end, was arraigned before Judge De Meba in the city court this morning charged with driving a horse with a sore back. The arrest was made by Patrolman Saffron on complaint of Mrs. S. G. VanHoessen. Judge De Meza gave Swanson a reprimand and ordered him to put the horse out in pasture.

Printer His Victim.

A thief, presumably a sneak, entered the home of Mrs. Emily C. DeCamp, 220 East Second street, yesterday afternoon and stole a watch, two dollars in money and a bank book of the Plainfield Savings Bank, belonging to Frazee Putnam, a printer. There was nothing to show how entrance was gained to the house.

Edward B. Haines.

Edward B. Haines, editor and president of the Paterson Printing and Publishing Company, publisher of the Paterson Evening News, died yesterday afternoon at his late home in Paterson. He was sixty-seven years of age and had been ill for over a year, suffering from heart disease.

There will be a vesper service at the Y. W. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, will speak, and Mrs. J. M. Shellabarger will sing.

MINISTER ACCEPTS

TO TAKE CHARGE ON JUNE 4.

He is Thirty-five Years of Age, a Graduate of Bucknell and Crozier—Local Congregation Elated.

Rev. E. C. Conover, pastor of the Baptist church, Pemberton, has accepted the call of the Temple Baptist church, and will preach his first sermon at the local church on Sunday, June 4. Notification of the fact that Mr. Conover had decided to accept the call to the local pastorate was received at the weekly prayer-meeting, last night, being announced by William A. Conger, the clerk, who conducted the service. Naturally, there was much rejoicing on the part of the members present.

Mr. Conger stated that Mr. Conover had also announced the fact to his present congregation at Pemberton last night, and that an official letter from him would be read at the church service Sunday morning. L. W. Randolph supplemented Mr. Conger's remarks by adding that Mr. Conover and his family would reside at 330 East Second street, in the house formerly owned by A. B. Summers, of Watchung avenue.

Mr. Conover's acceptance is a record-breaker for the church in its efforts to get a pastor, it being just one month since Rev. J. W. Musson left for Meriden, Conn., to the time a successor was chosen, and Mr. Conover was the first and only man considered for the place.

Mr. Conover is about thirty-five years of age and since his graduation from Bucknell University and Crosier Theological Seminary, has held two pastorates of five years each. The first one was at a Baptist church near Philadelphia and the second and present one at Pemberton, where he is much beloved by his people. During his ten years' pastorate he has had considerable experience and will come to Plainfield well qualified to take up the work at the Temple Baptist church.

The congregation is anxiously looking forward to the time when it will have a fine new edifice on its recently-acquired property on East Front street, and under the guidance of Mr. Conover, are hoping and praying that that object may be accomplished in the near future. Mr. Conover is married and has a son about eight years of age. While in Crozier Theological Seminary he was a class ahead of Rev. Mr. Musson, and the latter is much pleased with the choice of his former congregation.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED BY THE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Sawyer; second vice-president, Miss Ruth Thompson; third vice-president, Miss Mary Stafford; fourth vice-president, Miss Gertrude Gray; fifth vice-president, Mansfield Smith; secretary, Miss Mary Mathews; treasurer, Fred Jacobs.

Mansfield Smith served the league as president for many years, but he insisted on retiring at this time so that a younger member could be chosen for the office. Installation services will be held at the church, Sunday evening, May 14, and there will probably be a special speaker for the occasion.

Mrs. Mary A. Pangborn, widow of J. Freeman Pangborn, aged 73 years died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Dorlon, 695 Springfield avenue, Newark, yesterday, after a long illness. Miss Isabel Vail Mantz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Mantz, of Pearl street and Charles J. Dresselt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Dresselt, of Lincoln place, were married at the home of the bride's parents last night. The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock by Rev. J. O. McKelvey in the presence of thirty relatives and near friends. The parlor and dining room were prettily decorated for the occasion.

Miss Mantz was attended by her sister, Miss Nellie Mantz, who acted as bridesmaid. The former wore a gown of white mull over white satin, trimmed with pearls, and carried a bouquet of white carnations and sweet peas. Her attendant wore a white satin robe over white silk and carried pink carnations. Henry Dresselt, brother of the groom, was best man and Miss Jennie Dresselt, a sister of the groom, played the wedding march.

BURGAZIO CAUGHT

WILL BE BROUGHT HERE.

Letter to Wife Betrays Whereabouts of Man Accused of Atrocious Assault at Sunday Card Game.

Following a clue given through relatives Chief of Police Kiely yesterday arrested Emilie Brugazio, in New Haven, Conn. Brugazio is charged with atrocious assault with intent to kill Andrew Alekander, of 821 George street on last Sunday afternoon, following a card game.

The apprehending of Brugazio was a pretty piece of detective work on the part of Chief Kiely. He learned that a half sister of the fugitive lived in New Haven and when he was apprised of the fact that a letter had reached Brugazio's wife, written in a man's hand, the chief was pretty sure that he had a line on the situation of the man who shot Alexander.

Taking with him an Italian who was well acquainted with Brugazio, Chief Kiely started yesterday morning early for New Haven and arrived there shortly after noon. Following the scent given by the letter he sought the aid of the local detectives and managed to locate the accused man in the home of his half-sister. It is not yet known whether Brugazio has made any statement as to his connection with the shooting or the causese which led up to it, but Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., said this morning that there was doubt as to the identity of Kiely's prisoner and that he would be brought back to this city probably within a couple of weeks.

On Sunday afternoon a number of Italians were playing cards and drinking in the cellar of Brugazio's home on George street, when a dispute arose as to a certain hand dealt in the game. The cellar was soon full of flying bottles and among those who received blows was Brugazio. In a rage he ascended the stairs to his room and securing a thirty-two caliber revolver, it is alleged, he threatened the whole bunch with annihilation. Alexander one of those who it is alleged struck Brugazio, started to run away, when he saw the revolver, but he was not quick enough to dodge the three bullets which it is alleged Brugazio fired at him.

Alexander is still in Muhlenberg Hospital having been taken there by the police on Sunday immediately after the shooting. It was at first thought that the wounded man could not live, but quick aid saved his life and it was said at the hospital this morning that Alexander would recover.

WILSON TELLS HOW TO CAN MOSQUITOES

Secretary Wilson, of the Agricultural Department, has sent out from Washington some good advice relative to mosquitoes and their elimination. His misquito wisdom is contained in a department bulletin telling how not only to doctor the bites, but explaining in detail how to catch a mosquito on the bedroom ceiling at the very first jab.

Incredible as this statement may seem, even to the best of bedroom acrobats, Secretary Wilson certifies that it has been done and is at the present time being done in several parts of the United States. The feat, as accomplished under Secretary Wilson's direction, is not, however, entirely devoid of excitement. There is a chance of dropping a little kerosene oil into your upturned face.

"A home-made apparatus" is necessary for this improved bedroom campaign against the "skeeters." As described in the department bulletin it consists of a tincup or tin can cover nailed to the end of a long stick in such a way that a spoonful or so of kerosene can be placed in the cup.

"The cup," says the bulletin, "may then by means of the stick be pressed up to the ceiling so as to inclose one mosquito after another." As soon as the mosquito perceives that he is caught under the cup he becomes panic stricken and flies right down into the kerosene.

Secretary Wilson has great faith in the tin can methods. "By it," he says, "perhaps the majority of mosquitoes in a given bedroom—certainly all of those resting on the ceiling—can be caught before one goes to bed."

Secretary Wilson also suggests a mosquito trap after a model invention by H. Maxwell Lefroy, of Indiana. This trap is a foot long, a foot wide and nine inches deep, lined with dark green baize and possessing a hinged door. A small hole to be covered when desired by a revolving piece of wood or metal, is cut in the top of the box. This trap is designed to take advantage of the misquitoes' desire for a nice, cool resting place after a hard night's work. The agricultural bulletin tells how to set this trap.

"Owing to the habits of mosquitoes," it says, " to seek a cool shady place in which to rest, such as a dark corner of the room or a book shelf or something of that sort, they will enter the trap which is put in that part of the room most frequented by mosquitoes, all other dark places being rendered uninhabitable as far as possible. They are driven out of book shelves with dust or tobacco smoke and get into the desirable sleeping place for the day. The door is then closed and fastened and into the small hole at the top of the box a teaspoonful or less of benzine is then introduced. This kills all the mosquitoes inside and the box is thoroughly aired and replaced."

Secretary Wilson says that Mr. Lefroy has averaged as high as eighty-three mosquitoes a day.

Dr. L. O. Howard, the department's chief entomologist, who prepared the pamphlet for Secretary Wilson, says the best mixture he ever found to prevent mosquito bites was made of oil of citronella, one ounce; spirits of camphor, one ounce, and oil of cedar, half an ounce.

"Ordinarily," says the official bulletin, "a few drops on a bath towel hung over the head of the bed will keep the common house mosquitoes away."

For fumigants and smudges the department recommends pyrethrumin powders, which stupefies the mosquito; sulphur dioxide and other things.

If in spite of all these though, the mosquito finally nips you, the most satisfactory remedy discovered by Doctor Howard, author of the bulletin, is "moist soap."

"Wet the end of a piece of ordinary toilet soap," says the department, "and rub it gently on the puncture and the irritation will soon pass away."

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Something "quite different" in the line of summer show is now being exhibited at Wallack's theatre, New York. It is a new musical farce called "A Certain Party," in the making of which a number of the brightest metropolitan writers had a hand and in which Mabel Hite has demonstrated herself one of the cleverest comediennes in stageland. Originally a farce without music, exploiting ward politics and the servant problem, humorous side turned up, "A Certain Party," has been dressed up with catchy tunes and a remarkably handsome chorus to render the more acceptable for warm weather consumption. Congressman E. W. Townsend, famed as the author of the "Chimmie Fadden" stories, Frank Ward O'Malley, the humorist of the New York Sun, William Collier, the comedian, and Edgar Smith, who used to write all the Weber & Fields burlesque, were all concerned in the farce's authorship. Most of the tunes were written by Robert Hood Bowers, who also wrote the music of "The Vanderbilt Cup."

An association to be known as The Coal Merchants Credit Association has been formed by the local coal dealers of Dunellen and New Market. The association is similar to the merchants association as conducted in other towns throughout the State. It is expected that applications for membership will be received from the grocers, butchers, etc., in both towns as it will mean a great protection for them. The association at present consists of C. E. Kelly Co., The New Market Coal and Grain Co., The Dunellen Lumber and Stone Co., and The Dunellen Coal and Supply Co.

The proposition to build a new lodge room and hall building was received with enthusiasm at the meeting of W. G. Holton Council, Tuesday night. The preliminary plans were submitted by Willard Apgar and several important changes were agreed upon. As a result new plans will be prepared and these will be presented at the next meeting Tuesday night. The officers make the request that all members be in attendance as the matter will be finally discussed and a vote taken to authorize the appointment of necessary committees.

A delegation from the Presbyterian church Christian Endeavor Society will attend the district C. E. mass meeting in Warren chapel, Plainfield, tonight. Rev. Ernest R. Brown will make the address of the evening.

May devotions are to be held in St. John's church every Wednesday and Friday during the month.

Mr. and Mrs. George Eastman, of Perth Amboy, are visiting relatives and friends in the borough.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The success of the B. & E. Co., is due to the strict business principles which are used in conducting the company affairs. At Monday night's monthly meeting five names were dropped from the roll and five new members were elected from the waiting list. The Township fire ordinance allowing the company but 50 members, there are still several names on the waiting list.

Weather being pleasant, there should be a large attendance at the opening game of the season Saturday afternoon. The Plainfield team will be up rooters and all and Manager Alberts could not offer the lovers of the National game a better attraction as an opening for the season.

Funeral services of Louise, wife of Arthur Chandler, who died at her home on Park avenue, Tuesday, were held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from Mt. Zion M. E. church, West Fourth street, Plainfield.

COMING IN ALL ITS ENTIRETY.

Downie & Wheeler's World's Best Show Combined will exhibit in this city Wednesday, May 10, one day only. A gigantic amusement enterprise. A whole city of people employed. The strange colony of people, handsome horses, rare wild animals and golden caravans are scheduled to arrive in the early hours of morning, transported upon Downie & Wheeler's own new special train of cars. Circus day will begin with a grand glittering free street parade, every morning at 10:30 o'clock—a vision of beauty and splendor, defying all competition or comparison. The show has $50,000.00 invested in chariots, tableau floats, musical vehicles, fanciful and historical costumes and expensive odd things of distinctive parade use. It is now well understood that Downie & Wheeler's Circus Combined carry as many people, horses, wild animals and show properties as any other show traveling.

LIQUID CURES ECZEMA WHERE SALVES FAIL.

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMS OUT.

A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D. D. D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

GENERAL COLLINS HONORED BY FRIENDS

Friends of General Dennis F. Collins, treasurer of the State Democratic committee, gave him a dinner at Turn Hall, Elizabeth, last night, which was attended by quite a few persons who are prominent in county and State politics. There was an abundance of oratory and edibles and the hall presented a fine appearance.

Among the diners were W. L. Hetfield, LeRoy J. Ellis, Frank J. Sattle, George E. Welden and George W. Ord, all of this city.

Congressman William E. Tuttle, Jr., came on from Washington to act as toastmaster and he opened the affair in a brief but business-like manner.

James J. Manning, former city clerk, of Elizabeth, presented General Collins with a sword, saying that it was emblematic of his rank. He pledged him the loyalty of the Jeremiah P. McNamara Association, the presenters of the gift, and referred feelingly to the fact that yesterday was the forty-first birthday anniversary of the general.

Governor Wilson sent regrets at being unable to be present. United States Senator James E. Martine was detained at Washington and also sent regrets. Judge Nelson Y. Dungan was the first speaker. He praised General Collins for his military record.

Several Hudson County men spoke including Congressman James A. Hamill, Assemblyman Charles M. Egan, James Baker, Charles F. X. O'Brien and Hugh Mara, of Bayonne. There was vocal and instrumental music. Many of the heads of city departments attended. J. Logan Fay and John L. Collins received 'booms' for sheriff.

Stranger's Sudden Illness.

James McGovern, thirty-five years old, asked permission of J. B. Guttridge, a grocer of the Netherwood district, this morning to lie down behind his woodpile and later asked Mr. Guttridge for some medicine, saying that he was feeling ill. Mr. Guttridge rendered all the aid he could, but seemed unable to relieve the man. Later the police department was notified and McGovern was removed to Muhlenberg hospital where City Physician C. B. Lufburrow attended the suffering man. He will probably get well. He is not known here and is believed to be a mechanic out of work.

Slight Fire in Borough.

A small chimney fire at the residence of J. C. Peck, on Myrtle avenue, attracted the residents of that section yesterday afternoon about 5:30. An alarm was turned in and the borough department was quickly on the scene. It only needed the use of a couple of extinguishers to put out the blaze. Practically no damage was done.

DIOCESAN CONVENTION TO MEET NEXT WEEK

Whether or not the two convocations, which at present constitute the diocese of New Jersey, shall be abolished and the diocese combined into one big missionary district under the direct charge of an archdeacon, is agitating the members of the Protestant Episcopal church in this State and is expected to produce a sharp discussion in the diocesan convention which meets in Atlantic City next week. The convention, which meets in St. James' Episcopal church will open at 10 o'clock on Tuesday, May 9, and at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

Bishop Scarborough will make his annual report and address to the representatives of the churches. The convention is composed of about 100 clerical and 100 lay delegates, each church being entitled to one or two clerical representatives and three lay delegates. In the evening of the opening day of the convention a missionary service will be held. Grace, Holy Cross, St. Stephen's and Heavenly Rest parishes, of this city, will be represented at the convention by their rectors and lay delegates.

MASS. BALLOT BOX CAN'T BE USED HERE

The Appropriation Committee of the Board of Freeholders has decided upon the extra appropriation for election this year made necessary by the Geran law.

Freeholder Joseph Perry, of the Committee on Elections, has reported about his recent trip to Boston and Worcester, Mass., when the ballot box in use there was inspected with a view to ascertaining its adaptability for use in this county. The Massachusetts ballot box is known as the "Perfection Ballot Box," and pictures of it were shown the members of the committee yesterday afternoon. As the box has wooden sides, not permitting the ballots inside to be exposed to the eye as provided by the Geran law, the freeholders have decided they can not be used here.

The "Perfection Ballot Boxes" cost about $50 each, which is $25 more than the old ones used in this State and county. The Geran law makes it imperative that the sides of the ballot boxes must be of glass.

Under the new law there will be 100 election districts instead of seventy-two as under the old. There will be four men to a district and each of these will receive $42 in municipalities over 5,000 in population and $26 each in places under 5 000.

KING'S DAUGHTERS TO RELEASE NURSE

Plans for a change in the management of the nurses' work at present carried on by the City Union of The King's Daughters were discussed at the executive meeting of the Union this morning and more definite arrangements will be announced in the near future. The Charity Organization Society is anxious to take over this work and combine it with that of the Anti-Tuberculosis League, beleiving that it will produce better results generally as the work of the two societies are growing rapidly.

The King's Daugthers are willing to transfer the work, and they will undoubtedly make arrangements to have a nurse take care of their own individual needs. Until such a change is made, Miss Olive DeLany, the present city nurse, will continue in her duties. According to the plans being considered by the Charity Organization Society and Anti-Tuberculosis League, two or three nurses would probably be employed to take care of the rapidly growing work.

The annual meeting of the City Union of the King's Daughters will be held this afternoon in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church, when all reports will be submitted and officers will be elected. This morning it was reported that the nurse made 140 visits last month and there were 424 children cared for at The Day Nursery. There was also a discussion of plans for the new Day Nursery building.

The present officers of the City Union of The King's Daughters are: President, Mrs. F. W. Jones; vice-president, Miss Anna Garrigues; treasurer, Mrs. A. M. Most; corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. W. Butler; recording secretary, Mrs. L. C. Leggren. It is believed that they will be elected with a few additional vice-presidents.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT.

Jersey City, May 4.—The plan and scope committee of the Commission Form of Government League expects to have its petition for a special election ready by June 1. If this is done the election will be held before the end of June and if the new form of government is adopted the election of commissioners will take place early in August. The committee expects to obtain the necessary 8,000 signatures to the petition without any great difficulty and its members feel confident of carrying the proposition at the special election.

ACTRESSES NAMES IN PRIVATE LIFE

What if many actors and singers decided to resume their real names! They would have to learn their box office value all over again. Grace George, who will appear here Saturday night in "Sauce for the Goose," is in reality Mrs. William A. Brady. Emma Destinn's signature on a note carried no legal liability with the court in Austria. Miss Destinn did not deny making the note, but contended that it was illegal inasmuch as it was signed with her stage name and not her real name, which is Emelie Kittel. The man in Prague, who brought suit, lost $800 and costs.

If a house and lot were willed to Sarah Frances Frost, would Miss Julia Marlowe be obliged to establish her identity before securing possession of the property?

Gems for Miss Maude Kiskadden could in the same way be claimed by Miss Maude Adams, while Miss Bessie Pickens could call for and receive all that was coming to Miss Bessie Abbot.

Sam Bernard at an early start in life was Samuel Barnett; William Norris was William Block; Walter Hampden was W. H. Dougherty; Joseph Hart was J. H. Boudrow, and Herbert Kelsey was Herbert Lamb.

Miss Ethel Levey, by a like reckoning, used to answer to Grace Ethelia, while Miss Billie Burke was Ethel until the stage called.

Truly Shattuck entirely escaped Clarice Etrulia de Bucharde; Amelia Summerville has little of father's name left to the theatre. It was Thomas Serby Shaw, and Trixie Frigganza has almost forgotten how to respond to Delia O'Callahan.

Broadway has heard of Hamlet and Edwin Fitzgerald, also of Eddie Foy, but the resemblance bears little similarity.

Miss Maxine Elliott's father was Thomas Dermot and Miss Mary Mannering was known in childhood as Florence Friend.

Emmett Corrigan was none other than Anthony P. Zilles. Arnold Daly has a Peter and then a Christopher before the Arnold. Couldn't fancy his ever being Pete or Chris; Lawrence d'Orsay struggled away from Dorset William Lawrence and never seemed to regret it, while Sam Sothern refused to accept all of George Evelyn Augustus T. Sothern.

Arthur Hamilton Bevelle had a Swedish father named Engstrom. He cut out the Arthur and drew a line through the Engstrom. William L. Abingdon saw little in William Lepper to appeal, so he threw it away. Kyrle Bellew punctured the Harold his mother used to call him.

Miss Nance O'Neill, by the same token, is not starred as Gertrude Lamson, yet "Gertie" she once was, and Edna May sang herself across the footlights without the aid of her father's name, Petty.

Lillian Russell is called Nellie by all her intimate friends, for the excellent reason that Nellie is a nickname for Helen, and Miss Russell was baptized Helen Louise Leonard. Miss Helen Hale was Helen Perley Cogswell; Belle Blanche was Blanche Ninezesheimer; Bonita, when a girl was Pauline L. Des Landes; Letty Lind's name was Rudge; Vesta Victoria was the daughter of Joe Lawrence. Marie Jansen was Marie Johnson.

Miss Marguerite Sylva is still known as Maggie Smith, and she really likes to have her friends remember it; Miss Margaret Illington was Maude Light in her home town in Illinois.

There is Tom Terriss now where once there was Thomas Herbert F. Lewin, and Richard Temple in the place of Richard Cobb; Cosmo Stuart originally carried Cosmo Charles Gordon Lennox; Thomas Q. Seabrooke was none other than Thomas Quigley.

Miss Edna Goodrich, whose name has been association lately with Nat Goodwin, is in real life Bessie Edna Stephens; Miss Katherine Gray is the daughter of John T. and Katie R. Best.

Corinne, too, had more of a name in the beginning. It was Corinne Belle d'Brion.

Miss May Irwin forsook the Ada Campbell of her youth. Olga Nethersole forgot her middle name is Isabel. Olla Nazimova was born Nasimoff; Miss Ada Rehan, Crehan; Gabrielle Rejane was Charlotte Reju; Jane Hading, Jeanette Hadingue; Sarah Bernhardt, Rosina Sarah Damola; Madame Modjeska's father was Michael Opido.

Madame Lillian Nordica's paternal parent was a New England preacher named Norton. Marie Tempest's name was Marie Susan Etherington. If Mrs. Patrick Campbell abandoned the Patrick she would be Beatrice Stella.

Also Miss Elsie Janis was born Bierbauer. Miss Agnes Sorma was the Duchess of Minotta.

Miss Josephine Victor in her birthplace in Austria Hungary was a real member of the family of Gunezler. Hazel Dawn's name is Hazel Tout.

Marie Dressler's first start was with the name Leila Kerber, while Hilda Spong was called Frances until she grew up and assumed Hilda.

William Courtleigh responded to the name of William Flynn; Lew Dockstader to George Alfred Clapp and John Hare is really John Fairs.

AS TO RENTING—The first house I had listed in my new office was a fifteen hundred dollar house. The owner came to see me from New York, because his wife was visiting here and saw my ad. Two hours after he gave it to me, a man came up in a five thousand dollar new automobile and I took him to see it, and if the rest of his family are as well pleased with it as he is, it is rented. When I was operating in Trenton, I was collecting rent from 150 houses, all kinds, when the cyclone struck me. And I want to rent houses here in this way, or I do not want to be bothered with them. When I take a house, I want the house for rent, and I will rent it in this way. Will charge nothing to rent it, but will charge 5 per cent. on the amount I collect and take full charge of it; do all the repairing and pay the taxes and interest on mortgage, if you wish me too, and in repairing. If you catch me taking graft from the poor mechanic to buy your work, I want you to send me to the White House before Governor Wilson gets there, and see that there is a four-foot partition wall between Senator Martine and myself so I can get graft, for I do not like any two-cent graft. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on a plan "That my time is yours," 159 North avenue; will have a 'phone in a few days. 5 4 3

NEW REAL ESTATE OFFICE—Will open up my new office on Monday morning at No. 155 North avenue, ground floor. Have already purchased a good size book for the purpose of listing every property in Plainfield. My object is to fill it full of the conditions of your property, including the size of mortgage on same; then to leave the book to my grandchildren to read. I am the man who has been working in a four-dollar capacity to fight nervous prostration for the last four years and in those conditions have earned the title of selling and exchanging more property than any two agents in Plainfield. Now I am better and am ready for business. If you are coming to see me let me tell you something. Don't come near me if you expect me to handle your house, if it is sprinkled with signs or one sign which reads for sale by any broker, unless you want to sell out for 50 cents on the $1.00, for I want you to known that my feeling for you is the same as yours is for me, where you want to include me under any old broker. And let me tell you that these old signs are what make Plainfield real estate sell for less money than it does in any city or town along the Central, notwithstanding it has the name of "City Beautiful." Your any old broker means that some of them should be selling peanuts, instead of offering your property or spoiling the sale of it. Have sold seven properties in the last two weeks. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on the plan "that my time is yours." My office is not as it will be when the store front is changed, but will answer the purpose for a short time. 4 29 12

WOOD NOT HOPEFUL FOR ADJOURNMENT

Representative Ira W. Wood, of the Fourth Congressional district, after spending a couple of days at home in Trenton, has returned to Washington. Mr. Wood came home to attend the banquet of the Republican Club the other night and to escort Representative Hamilton and Secretary Nagel, of Commerce and Labor, who were among the speakers.

When seen by a correspondent, Mr. Wood said that the House of Representatives had made good time in the consideration of the Canadian reciprocity bill. "It is difficult to say," declared he, "just what will happen in the Senate, where, no doubt, more time will be taken in the consideration of the bill."

When asked what he thought about the prospects for adjournment. Mr. Wood said: "Just at this time no one is disposed to hazard a guess as to when we will get away. Many are afraid we may be in Washington all Summer and if the revision of the tariff is taken up in earnest, then we may be there until next fall."

REARRANGEMENT OF CONGRESSIONAL LINES

If the bill which passed the House of Representatives, becomes a law, making the total membership of the House 433, the Legislature next winter will have the task of redricting the State. Under the new apportionment New Jersey will have two additional representatives, making twelve in all.

When the present districts were apportioned, a fair and equitable division was made, and geographical lines were adhered to closely, so that adjacent counties were placed in one district. For instance, the First District had a population, according to the census of 1900, of 165,078; the Second District, 169,037; Third District, 181,566; Fourth District, 162,820; Fifth District, 202,290; Sixth District, 257,777; Seventh District, 177,106; Eighth District, 181,947; Ninth District, 176,106; Tenth District, 209,735. The total population of the State was given in 1900 as 1,883,669. By the census of 1910 these figures have been increased to 2,537,167.

The population of a Congressional district will, presumably, under the new apportionment, be expected to be about 211,431. This is the figure obtained by dividing the population of the State by twelve. On this basis the present First District would not have to be disturbed. Its population is Camden, 142,029; Gloucester, 37,368; Salem, 26,999; total, 206,396. The present Second District might be left the same. It has Cape May, 19,745; Atlantic City, 71,894; Cumberland, 55,153; Burlington, 66,565; total, 213,957. The Third District has Middlesex, 114,426; Monmouth, 94,834; Ocean, 21,318; total, 230,578. Ocean county could be spared form this district and placed with the three counties that now constitute the Fourth District. Taking Ocean out of the Third District it would have a population of 209,260.

The Fourth District, with Mercer, 125,657; Somerset, 38,820; Hunterdon, 33,569, makes a total of 198,046. If Ocean, with 21,318, should be added there would then be an aggregate of 219,364. The Fifth, with Warren, 43,187; Union,140,197, and Morris, 74,704, making a total of 258,088, would be out of proportion. Taking Warren away it would leave a population of 214,901; not far from the figure that is likely to be the basis of representation for any district.

In the Sixth District, now made up of Bergen, with 138,002; Passaic 215,902, and Sussex, with 26,781, there it a total of 380,695. The county of Passaic alone would make an additional district, and Warren with 43,187; Bergen, with 138,002, and Sussex, with 26,781, would make another Congressional district, with a population of 207,970.

The County of Essex has two Retatives, and Hudson is provided for in the same manner. Essex has a population of 512,886 and Hudson of 537,231. Sub-divisions might readily be made so that these two ccunties would be divided into five Congressional districts. The total population in these two counties is 1,050,117. This would make the ratio of representation 210,023.

Naturally,many different divisions of the State can be made. If it is the intention of the party having the power to designate the new Congressional districts, then a "gerrymander" may easily be arranged.

WHISTLER AND MOORE.

Two Versions of the Famous Caning Incident at Drury Lane.

It was in his capacity as editor of the Hawk that the late Augustus Moore, a journalist and playwright of no little notoriety, enacted an unrehearsed comedy with Whistler that created no end of a sensation at the time. It happened in the vestibule of Drury Lane on the first night of the production of "A Million of Money." Whistler, it appeared, had been annoyed at sundry references to himself in the Hawk and, coming up to Gus Moore, who was calmly smoking a cigarette, struck him across the face with a cane. A struggle followed, and, although opinions varied as to the actual course of the conflict, there was no doubt about Whistler having ultimately to pick himself up from the floor.

Each of the protagonists afterward gave his version of the incident. "I started out," said Whistler, "to cane this fellow with as little emotion as I would prepare to kill a rat. I did cane him to the satisfaction of my many friends and his many enemies, and that was the end of it." "I am sorry," wrote Mr. Moore for his part, "but I have had to slap Mr. Whistler. My Irish blood got the better of me, and before I knew it the shriveled up little monkey was knocked over and kicking about on the floor."

The notion, however, that he was knocked down was characterized by Whistler as "a barefaced falsehood." He contended that Mr. Moore never touched him. "I am sure," he added, "I don't know why, for he is a much bigger man than I. My idea is that he was thoroughly cowed by the moral force of my attack. I had to turn him around in order to get at him. Then I cut him again and again as hard as I could, hissing out 'Hawk!' with each stroke. Oh, you can take my word for it, everything was done in the cleanest and most correct fashion possible. I always like to do things cleanly."—New York Tribune.

CARRYING PIG IRON.

The Way Scientific Study Increased Results and Wages.

No work seems more simple, more unlikely to be subject to scientific study, than the art of carrying pig iron. This, however, has been subjected to the most careful scientific study. Men at Bethlehem, Pa., were loading pig iron on cars at the rate of about twelve tons a day. Certain pig handlers were given extra wages for doing this work under special direction. An attempt was made to ascertain the relation between the amount of horsepower which each man exerted and the fatigue which he incurred. Long continued experiment furnished a vast amount of information, but apparently no law. Finally F. W. Taylor, who was conducting the experiments, handed the data over to an associate who was apt at mathematical problems. Very soon he reported that he had discovered the law—that fatigue varied in proportion to a certain relation between the amount of load and the period of rest—for example, a man carrying a ninety-two pound pig had, in order to avoid fatigue, to be at rest 58 per cent of the time. The discovery of this law involved a great amount of data, including certain physiological facts concerning the poisonous effects of waste tissue upon the blood and difficult mathematic formula, including the plotting of curves. As a result the pig handlers were directed exactly how to lift and carry their loads and when to rest, and the amount of pig iron handled by each man every day increased from twelve and a half tons to forty-seven. Of course the men received a great advance in wages.—Ernest Hamlin Abbott in Outlook.

Plumber.

Mulligan, the contractor, put up a church building. Dunn was building inspector then, and when he saw the church he said, "Pat, it isn't plumb."

That made Mr. Mulligan pretty mad. He climbed right up and began to take measurements. Having squinted down the plumb line in a dozen different places, he was ready to report. There was a ring of triumph in his voice.

"Mr. Dunn," he said, "come and look at it y'rself. Plumb, eh? By th' piper that played before Moses, it's more than plumb!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It Worked.

There are a great many ways devised for avoiding jury duty.

The story is told of a man who was noted in the county because of the badness of his son. Finding that there was no way of escape from serving, he had an obliging friend telegraph him at the courthouse.

The telegram read, "Your son is no better." The judge was so amused at the ingenuity that he let the man off.—Judge.

A Cool Soldier.

A French grenadier who was exasperated at some injustice that had been done him by a field marshal pointed his pistol at the marshal and pulled the trigger, but it did not go off. Without moving a muscle the veteran cried, "Four days in the cells for keeping your arms in a bad state!"

Where the Joke Was.

"All the publishers in the country have turned my song down."

"Cheer up. Think what a laugh you have got on the fellow you stole the music from!"—Toledo Blade.

He Told Her.

"Why did I ever leave home and mother?" sobbed his wife.

"Chiefly because your family was too stingy to take us in," he answered bitterly.—Life.

AN UNKNOWN RACE.

Traditions of the Hohokam, Who Were the First Americans.

In the beginning the Hohokam dwelt in the land. They were the first Americans—before the pilgrim fathers, before the Spaniards, before the Indians. They were the unknown people who lived in the United States so long ago that their name is utterly lost. In the southwest old tribes of Indians like the Zunis and Navajos know nothing of them save by vaguest tradition. The Pimas and Papagos of southern Arizona, who occupy part of the land that once was theirs, know that another race possessed the country long ago. More they cannot tell. They and their fathers for hundreds of years have seen what we see—the scanty remnants of ancient villages. For the inhabitants of the villages they have no name except the Hohokam—that is, the "unknown."

The modern archaeologist describes the implements and pottery of the Hohokam. He cannot do much more, for their houses are laid low. Except in a few places, such as the ruins of Casa Grande, near the Gila river, the very walls have vanished. Casa Grande itself may be the work of a people later than the main body of the Hohokam. We can never know the whole story. Yet little by little we may learn its chief facts. Arizona and the adjacent regions are full of ruins unknown to scientists and even to the people who live within a mile of them. They are so nearly obliterated that there seems at first sight little to repay study.

Archaeology begins the task of reconstructing the past. Geography must finish it. Modern geography enables us to determine the mode of life which must prevail, especially among primitive peoples, under given conditions of physical environment. If we can correctly picture the geographic environment of the Hohokam we may learn much of the history of our earliest fellow countrymen.—Ellsworth Huntington in Harper's Magazine.

BOILERS AND BODIES.

Alike In Many Respects In the Treatment They Require.

The boiler has a certain temperature corresponding with the working pressure it is desirable to use and for which it was constructed.

The body has its normal temperature. Any variation above or below this means too high bodily pressure or a reduced vitality.

The fuel put into a boiler should be that which it is designed to burn. Differently constructed boilers will not economically burn the same fuel.

The body should receive the food it is best able to assimilate. Diverse constitutions require diverse nourishment.

A boiler should be fired with small, equal quantities of fuel at stated intervals; large masses irregularly fed are fatal to satisfactory results.

The body should be fed similarly; overloading the stomach produces imperfect digestion and deranges our physical systems.

Boilers are insulated by brickwork, cellular asbestos, etc., to prevent loss of heat by radiation.

Cellular tissue and fat aid in maintaining our normal temperature.

Some boilers well designed produce good results with a small fuel consumption; others are less economical. The more perfect the boiler the less the consumption of fuel.

Some individuals are so constituted that they exist on small quantities of food; others in the same circumstances consume much more. The more perfect the physical development the less the food required.

The above data, intelligently used, govern good boiler practice.

The above will also secure health and good digestion.—Popular Magazine

"But why couldn't you have sent your trunk on the N. T. C., too?" murmured Miss Sterling.

"Because," explained Miss Noling, glad to show her superior knowledge, "I learned from a friend of mine that the N. T. C. is not a trunk line."—Brooklyn Life.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910, by Anna Katharine Rohlfs

"Another of us," repned Hexford, with a shrug. "We're both rather interested in this gray horse."

"Wouldn't another time do?" pleaded the coachman, looking gravely down at the flowers he held. "It's most time for the funeral, and I don't feel like talking, indeed I don't, gentlemen."

His distress was so genuine that Hexford was inclined to let him go, but Sweetwater with a cock of his keen eye put in his word and held the coachman where he was.

"The old gal is telling me all about it," muttered this sly, adaptable fellow. He had sidled up to the mare and their heads were certainly very close together. "Not touch her? See here!" Sweetwater had his arm round the filly's neck and was looking straight into her fiery and intelligent eye. "Shall I pass her story on?" he asked, with a magnetic smile at the astonished coachman.

"You'll oblige me if you can put her knowledge into words," the man Zadok declared, with one fascinated eye on the horse and the other on the house where he evidently felt that his presence was wanted. "She was out that night, and I know it, as any coachman would know who doesn't come home stone drunk. But where she was and who took her, get her to tell if you can, for I don't know no more'n the dead."

"The dead!" flashed out Sweetwater, wheeling suddenly about and pointing straight through the open stable door toward the house where the young mistress the old servant mourned lay in her funeral casket. "Do you mean her—the lady who is about to be buried? Could she tell, if her lips were not sealed by a murderer's hand?"

"She!" The word came low and awesomely. Rude and uncultured as the man was, he seemed to be strangely affected by this unexpected suggestion. "I haven't the wit to answer that,' said he. "How can we tell what she knew? The man who killed her is in jail. He might talk to some purpose. Why don't you question him?"

"For a very good reason," replied Sweetwater, with an easy good nature that was very reassuring. "He was arrested on the spot, so that it wasn't he who drove this mare home, unharnessed her, put her back in her stall, locked the stable door and hung up the key in its place in the kitchen. Somebody else did that."

"That's true enough, and what does it show? That the mare was out on some other errand than the one which ended in blood and murder," was the coachman's unexpected retort.

"Is that so?" whispered Sweetwater into the mare's cocked ear. "She's not quite ready to commit herself," he drawled, with another enigmatical smile at the lingering Zadok. "She's keeping something back. Are you?" he pointedly inquired, leaving the stalls and walking briskly up to Zadok.

"IS THAT SO?"

"You're overstepping your dooty. I don't know who you are or what you want with me, but you're overstepping your dooty," said the coachman.

"He's right," muttered Hexford. "Better let the fellow go. See, one of the maids is beckoning to him."

"He shall go and welcome if he will tell me where he gets his taste for this especial brand of whisky." Sweetwater had crossed to the cupboard and taken down the lower half of the broken bottle which had attracted his notice on his first entrance, and was now holding it out, with a quizzical look at the departing coachman.

Hexford was at his shoulder with a spring, and together they inspected the label still sticking to it, which was that of the very rare and expensive spirit found missing from the clubhouse vault.

"This is a find," muttered Hexford into his fellow detective's ear. Then, with a quick move toward Zadok, he shouted out:

"You'd better answer that question. Where did this bit of broken bottle come from? They don't give you whisky like this to drink."

"That they don't," muttered the coachman, not so much abashed as they had expected. "And I wouldn't care for it if they did. I found that bit of bottle in the ash barrel outside and fished it out to put varnish in. I liked the shape."

"Broken this way?"

"Yes; it's just as good."

"Is it? Well, never mind; run along. We'll close the stable door for you."

"I'd rather do it myself and carry in the key."

"Here, then. We're going to the funeral too. You'd like to?" This latter in a whisper to Sweetwater.

The answer was a fervent one. Nothing in all the world would please this protean natured man quite so well.

CHAPTER VIII.

"LILA—LILA!"

"LET us enter by the side door," suggested Sweetwater as the two moved toward the house. "And be sure you place me where I can see without being seen. I have no wish to attract attention to myself or to be identified with the police until the necessity is forced upon me."

"Then we won't go in together," decided Hexford. "Find your own place; you won't have any difficulty. A crowd isn't expected. Miss Cumberland's condition forbids it."

Sweetwater nodded and slid in at the side door. He found himself at once in a narrow hall, from the end of which opened a large room. A few people were to be seen in this latter place, and his first instinct was to join them; but, finding that a few minutes yet remained before the hour set for the services, he decided to improve them by a rapid glance about this hall, which, for certain reasons hardly as yet formulated in his own mind, had a peculiar interest for him.

The most important object within view, according to his present judgment, was the staircase which connected it with the floor above, but if you had asked his reason for this conclusion he would not have told you, as Ranelagh might have done, that it was because it was the most direct and convenient approach to Carmel Cumberland's room. His notice led him next to a rack upon which hung several coats and a gentleman's hat.

He inspected the former and noted that one was finished with a high collar, but he passed the latter by—it was not a derby. The table stood next the rack, and on its top lay nothing more interesting than a clothesbrush and one or two other insignificant objects; but, with his memory for details, he had recalled the keys which one of the maids had picked up somewhere about this house and laid on a hall table. If this were the hall and this the table, then was every inch of the latter's simple cloth covered top of the greatest importance in his eyes.

He had no further time for even these cursory investigations. Hexford's step could be heard on the veranda, and Sweetwater was anxious to locate himself before the officer came in. Entering the room before him, he crossed to the small group clustered in its farther doorway. There were several empty chairs in sight, but he passed around them all to a dark and inconspicuous corner from which without effort he could take in every room on that floor—from the large parlor in which the casket stood to the remotest region of the servants' hall.

The clergyman had not yet descended, and Sweetwater had time to observe the row of little girls sitting in front of the bearers, each with a small cluster of white flowers in her hand—Miss Cumberland's Sunday school class, he conjectured, and conjectured rightly. He also perceived that some of these children loved her. His eyes dwelt lingeringly on these before passing to that heaped up mound of flowers under which lay a murdered body and a bruised heart. He could not see the face, but the spectacle was sufficiently awe compelling without that. Would it have seemed yet more so had he known at whose request the huge bunch of lilies had been placed over that silent heart?

The sister sick, the brother invisible, there was little more to hold his attention in this quarter, so he let it roam across the heads of the people about him to the distant hall communicating with the kitchen.

Several persons were approaching from this direction, among them Zadok—the servants of the house, no doubt, for they came in all together and sat down side by side in the chairs Sweetwater had so carefully passed by. There were five persons in all—two men and three women. Only two interested him—Zadok, with whom he had already made a superficial acquaintance and had had one bout, and a smart, bright eyed girl with a resolute mouth softened by an insistent dimple, who struck him as possessing excellent sense and some natural cleverness. A girl to know and a girl to talk to was his instantaneous judgment.

During the services Sweetwater found himself watching, with anxious curiosity, the attitude and absorbed expression of a good looking young man whom he was far from suspecting to be the secret representative of the present suspect, whom nobody could forget, yet whom nobody wished to remember at this hallowed hour.

Had this attitude and this absorption been directed toward the casket over which the clergyman's words rose and fell with ever increasing impressiveness he might have noted the man, but would scarcely have been held by him. But this interest, sincere and strong as it undoubtedly was, centered not so much in the services, careful as he was to maintain a decorous attitude toward the same, but in the faint murmurs which now and then came down from above, where unconsciousness reigned and the stricken brother watched over the delirious sister with a concentration and abandonment to fear which made him oblivious of all other duties and almost as unconscious of the rites then being held below over one who had been as a mother to him as the sick girl herself, with her ceaseless and importunate "Lila, Lila!" The detective, watching this preoccupied stranger, shared in some measure his secret emotions and thus was prepared for the unexpected occurrence of a few minutes later.

The final words had been said and the friends present invited to look their last on the calm face which to many there had never worn so sweet a smile in life. Some had hesitated, but most had obeyed the summons, among them Sweetwater. But he had not much time in which to fix those features in his mind, for the little girls, who had been waiting patiently for this moment, now came forward, and, he stepped aside to watch them as they filed by, dropping as they did so a tribute of fragrant flowers upon the quiet breast. They were followed by the servants, among whom Zadok had divided his roses. As the last cluster fell from the coachman's trembling hand the undertaker advanced with the lid and, pausing a moment to be sure that all were satisfied, began to screw it on.

Suddenly there was a cry, and the crowd about the door leading into the main hall started back as wild steps were heard on the stairs and a young man rushed into the room.

"Take it off!" he cried, pointing at the lid which had just been fastened down. "I have not seen her! I must see her! Take it off!"

It was the brother, awake at last to the significance of the hour!

The clergyman, aghast at the sacrilegious look and tone of the intruder, stepped back, raising one arm in remonstrance and instinctively shielding the casket with the other But the undertaker saw in the frenzied eye fixed upon his own that which warned him to comply with the request thus harshly and peremptorily uttered. Unscrewing the lid, he made way for the intruder, who, drawing near, pushed aside the roses which had fallen on the upturned face, and, laying his hand on the brow, muttered a few low words to himself. Then he withdrew his hand, and, without glancing to right or left, staggered back to the door amid a hush as unbroken as that which reigned behind him in that open casket. Another moment and his white, haggard face and disordered figure would be blotted from sight by the door jamb.

The minister recovered his poise and the bearers their breath. The men stirred in their seats and the women began to cast frightened looks at each other and then at the children, some of whom had begun to whimper, when in an instant all were struck again into stone. The young man had turned and was facing them all, with his hands held out in a clinch which in itself was horrible.

"If they let the man go," he called out in loud and threatening tones, "I will strangle him with these two hands!"

The word and not the shriek which burst irrepressibly from more than one woman before him brought him to himself. With a ghastly look on his bloated features he scanned for one moment the row of deeply shocked faces before him, then tottered back out of sight and fled toward the staircase. All thought that an end had come to the harrowing scene, and minister and people faced each other once more, when, loud and sharp from above, there rang down the shrill cry of delirium, this time in articulate words which even the children could understand.

"Break it open, I say! Break it open and see if her heart is there!"

It was too awful. Men and women and children leaped to their feet and dashed away into the streets, uttering smothered cries and wild ejaculations. In vain the clergyman raised his voice and bade them respect the dead, for the rooms were well nigh empty before he had finished his appeal. Only the least of the children remained.

Soon these, too, were gone, and the casket was refastened and carried out by the shrinking bearers, leaving in those darkened rooms a trail of desolation which was only broken from time to time by the now faint and barely heard reiteration of the name of her who had just been borne away.

"Lila, Lila!"

Sweetwater, however affected by this scene in the funeral chamber, had not lost control of himself nor forgotten the claims of duty. He noted at a glance that while the candid looking stranger whose lead he had been following was as much surprised as the rest at the nature of the interruption—which he had possibly anticipated and for which he was in some measure prepared—he was of all present the most deeply and peculiarly impressed by it.

Sweetwater took occasion likewise while the excitement was at its height to mark what effect had been made on the servants by the action and conduct of young Cumberland.

It was not so easy to determine as the anxious detective might wish. Only one of them showed a simple emotion, and that one was, without any possibility of doubt, the cook. She was a Roman Catholic and was simply horrified by the sacrilege of which she had been witness. There was no mistaking her feelings. But those of the other two women were more complex.

So were those of the men. Zadok specially watched each movement of his young master with open distrust and very nearly started upright in his repugnance and dismay when that intruding hand fell on the peaceful brow of her over whose fate to his own surprise he had been able to shed tears.

And the women! Might not the same explanation account for that curious droop of the eye with which the two younger clutched at each other's hands to keep from screaming and interchanged whispered words which Sweetwater would have given considerable out of his carefully cherished hoard to have heard.

It was impossible to tell at present, but he was confident that it would not be long before he understood these latter at least. He had great confidence in his success with women, homely as he was. He was not so sure of himself with men, and he felt that some difficulties and not a few pitfalls lay between him and, for instance, the uncommunicative Zadok. "But I've the whole long evening before me," he added in quiet consolation to himself. "It will be a pity if I can't work some of them in that time."

Plans had been made for carrying the servants to the cemetery, and, despite the universal disturbance consequent upon these events, these plans were adhered to. Sweetwater watched them all ride away in the last two carriages.

This gave him the opportunity he wanted. Leaving his corner, he looked up Hexford and asked who was left in the house.

"Dr. Perry, Mr. Clifton, the lawyer; Mr. Cumberland, his sick sister and the nurse."

"Mr. Cumberland! Didn't he go to the grave?"

"Did you expect him to after that?"

Sweetwater's shoulders rose, and his voice took on a tone of indifference.

"There's no telling. Where is he now, do you think—upstairs?"

"Yes. It seems he spends all his time in a little alcove opposite his sister's door. They won't let him inside for fear of disturbing the patient, so he just sits where I've told you, doing nothing but listening to every sound that comes through the door."

"Where's his room? In sight of the alcove you mention?"

"No; there's a partition or two between. If you go up by the side staircase you can slip into it without any one seeing you. Coroner Perry and Mr. Clifton are in front."

"Is the side door locked?"

"No."

"Lock it. The back door, of course, is."

"Yes; the cook attended to that."

"I want a few minutes all by myself. Help me, Hexford. If Dr. Perry has given you no orders take your stand upstairs where you can give me warning if Mr. Cumberland makes a move to leave his post or the nurse her patient."

Five minutes later Sweetwater had slipped from sight, and for some time not even Hexford knew where he was.

• • • • • • •

"Dr. Perry, may I have a few words with you?"

The coroner turned quickly. Sweetwater was before him. "It'll not take long," added the detective, with a short significant glance in the direction of Mr. Clifton.

Dr. Perry nodded, excused himself to the lawyer and followed the detective into the small writing room which he had occupied during the funeral. In the decision with which Sweetwater closed the door behind them there was something which caused the blood to mount to the coroner's brow.

"You have made some discovery?" said he.

"A very important one," was the quick, emphatic reply. And in a few brief words the detective related his interview with the master mechanic's wife on the highroad. Then with an eager "Now let me show you something" he led the coroner through the dining room into the side hall, where he paused before the staircase.

"Up?" queried the coroner, with an obvious shrinking from what he might encounter above.

"No," was the whispered reply. "What we want is here." And, pushing open a small door let into the under part of the stairway, he disclosed a closet and in that closet a coat or two and one derby hat. He took down the latter and, holding it out to the light, pointed to a spot on the under side of its brim.

The coroner staggered as he saw it and glanced helplessly about him. He had known this family all their lives, and the father had been his dearest friend. But he could say nothing in face of this evidence. The spot was a flour mark, in which could almost be discerned the outline of a woman's thumb.

Our regular selling price is $18—a regulated and restricted price by Ostermoor; by special permission these will be sold at a cut price on account of the coverings being very slightly soiled—so slightly that it will be hard to detect it; this week at.....$12.50

HERE AND THERE.

A sign of letters 100 feet tall has been erected in a newly-opened section of the State of Washington, where fruit culture is to be undertaken. The sign extends for nearly a quarter of a mile, the letters being forty feet wide. This imposing structure can be "read" from railway trains several miles distant.

A bill providing that no woman shall be permitted to work more than nine hours in any day or more than fifty hours in any week has been passed by the Missouri Legislature, and signed by the Governor. The bill will take effect June 20, and most of the factories, stores and laundries will have to recast their schedules before that time.

Milwaukee has a Young Women's Christian Association building in which no men are employes are allowed. Before the elevators could be put in operation it was necessary to train two girls to operate the car and attend to sundry repairs.

Maine has a number of deserted villages, among which not the least picturesque is Hanover, where the growth of trees is so thick that the ruined walls of the houses can hardly be seen. Forty families lived at Hanover at one time, and the schoolhouse held sixty pupils. All the families have disappeared from the section and even a settlement some miles away contains no survivors of the original Hanover.

The total amount of earth excavated and yet to be taken out in building the Panama Canal under the projected plans amounts to 214,666,594 cubic yards. This would tower nearly two and one-half times as high as Cheops, and would contain about fourten times as much material by volume. In height it would extend up into the sky nearly 1,150 feet.

Nantucket possesses what is believed to be the oldest windmill for grinding corn in actual operation in America. Nathan Wilbur, a Nantucket sailor, who had seen the busy windmills of Holland as he sailed abroad, built it out of timbers of wrecked ships in 1746. There has never been a day in all the 166 years since that time when the mill has not been busy. There is always a wind to turn its outstretched wings.

Has not the use of oil on macadamized strets contributed largely to the present unfortunate condition of the street, particularly where the macadam originally did not exceed five to six inches depth? It is usual in macadamizing to use at least three sizes of stone, the smaller on top which, when properly rolled, results in cementing the stone, making an arch, which operates to throw off water and prevent freezing below the macadam. Oil has probably operated to separate the stone formerly cemented, permitting water to go through the macadam followed by freezing, thus heaving up the macadam. If this is a result of covering the macadam with oil to prevent or allay dust it is a very expensive experiment.

It has been estimated that 35,000,000 acres are the limit which may be used economically to cultivate cotton in the Southern States. In less than ten years, at the present rate of natural increase in the demand, the requirements of the mills may be 28,000,000 to 30,000,000 bales per annum.

A government engineer at work on coast improvements in Chile has invented the sail railway. The trade winds blow in opposite directions in the morning and evening, and the engineer took advantage of the winds to transport the men to and from work. He had a few box cars built with a system of brakes, and a large sail hanging from a mast. There is no other propelling force, and the railway works satisfactory.

Big Acts at Proctor's.

UPSALA COLLEGE 15 AND P.H.S. NINE 16

Upsala College, of Kenilworth, went down to defeat before the doughty baseball team of Plainfield High School yesterday afternoon at Kenilworth. The score at the finish was 16 to 15. Thirteen misplays were charged up to the college boys while only six were registered against the local talent.

"Shake" Clarke replaced Vandeventer in the second inning after Upsala had found the latter for four hits and five runs. Clarke held them safe after that until the fifth when the Kenilworth nine began to pound the ball hard. A single and double by Clarke and Good started things for the local boys and the good work was kept up until the end of the game. The score:

KING'S DAUGHTERS

Interesting reports for the year, the election of officers and a discussion of plans for the coming year, comprised the chief business at the annual meeting of the City Union of The King's Daughters, held yesterday afternoon in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church. There was a large attendance, all but a couple of circles being well represented. Mrs. Charles A. Reed, a former president for several years, who has been away for some time, was given a cordial reception.

Mrs. Anna M. Most presented her annual report as treasurer. This showed a balance at last report of $384.36, with receipts for the year of $1,592.22 and expenditures of $1,102.65, leaving a balance of $490.57.

The nurse committee, of which Miss Lillian A. Force is chairman, presented the following report, which was read by Miss Elsie Suffern:

"Since the report of the nurse committee last November, the record book of our city nurse shows 76 cases, of which four were carried over from last report, making 72 new cases. In the caring of these 76 cases, Miss DeLany made 646 visits. Through the co-operation of our physicians, twenty-one patients have been brought to us for relief; the Charity Organization Society, 19; the schools have sent 5; hospital, 3; nurses committee, 4; Day Nursery, 4, and friends 19.

"Varied has been the treatment required and Miss DeLany has been busy in her endeavor, as our representative, to give aid to the suffering, whether it be for a stubborn case of rheumatism, a tubercular patient, the many children with serious diseases of the eye, nine in number, assisting in five operations or caring for thirty cases of other sickness, which in itself alone, makes our work seem worth while. The four chronic cases have surely known the blessing of regular visits from our nurse, where old muslin and jelly have been left behind, each to fill a want.

"The investigations at The Day Nursery have numbered thirteen and twice have visits with patients been made to the hospital. Surely this report shows the need of a nurse to care for the sick-poor of our city, whether it be a particular work for the City Union of the King's Daughters or not. May the leading of one wiser than we can ever hope to be direct us in this particular work."

Miss Hazel B. DeLany, who has been acting as city nurse, since her sister, Miss Olive DeLany left the city, offered this report:

"Number of cases on books, 76; number of new cases, 72; number of cases remaining at last report, 4; number of tuberculosis, 3; operations, 5; confinements, 30; skin cases, 3; rheumatism, 2; visits to hospital with patients, 8; treatments, 3; eye cases, 9; chronic, 4; infected head, 1; nursery investigations, 13; leg ulcers, 1; cases reported by doctors, 21; cases reported by Charity Organization Society, 7; cases reported by friends, 19; reported by schools, 5; reported by hospital, 3; reported by nurse committee, 4; reported by Day Nursery, 4; total number of visits, 644.

Mrs. Anna M. Most for the Day Nursery reported a total of 2,229 children cared for during the year, an average of seventy-five a month, the ages of the children being from three months ot eight years. She acknowledged with thanks assistance rendered by the First Baptist church, the Park Avenue Baptist church, First M. E. church and others, not forgetting to speak of the many donations and contributions during the year.

Then followed two-minute reports from the Circles, at which time pledges were renewed for the coming year as specified.

Benevolent Band, $250; Charity Circle, $200; Cheerful Workers, $100; Daughters of the Cross, $200; Whatsoever Circle, $25; Brightside Circle, $30; Golden Rule Circle, $25; Cup Bearers, $75; Silver Cross, $100; Loyal Daughters, $200; In His Name, $50; Unity Circle, $75; Mrs. Louis Matlack reported for the youngest circle, "Mizpah," just organized with a membership of eighteen. There was a report as to the new arrangement about the work of the city nurse, as stated in The Daily Press of yesterday, whereby the Charity Organization Society and the Anti-Tuberculosis League plan to provide a Visiting Nurses' Association to care for the poor of the city. The King's Daughters will then be

MRS. M. T. PELLETIER GOES TO HER REWARD

Mrs. Mary Titus Pelletier, wife of Florentin Pelletier, aged eighty-three years, died this morning at Truell Inn, where she had been living for several years. Mrs. Pelletier had been a resident of this city for about twenty-five years and during the past ten years had been an invalid. She was a woman of strong Christian character, a devout member of Grace church and until illness prevented a regular attendant at the services.

Mrs. Pelletier was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William U. Titius, of New York, where she was born. During her residence here she made many friends and was admired for her excellent qualities. She is survived by her husband and one son, William T. Pelletier, of Hillside avenue. The funeral will be held at Grace church, Monday morning at 11 o'clock and the interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

MRS. JOSEPH D. MOON DIED SUDDENLY TODAY

Mrs. Joseph D. Moon died suddenly this morning at her home on Grandview avenue, of heart failure. She had been critically ill for the past three or four weeks and despite the best of medical care she failed to respond to the treatment. She passed away while Mr. Moon had gone to a store on an errand and when he returned and found that his wife had passed away he was prostrated with grief. Mrs. A. E. Giddes and Mrs. C. W. Bolton, neighbors, were summoned, but their efforts were of no avail.

Mrs. Moon, who was fifty-eight years old, was born at Washington, Warren county. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ayres Leeson. Her father was prominent here as an undertaker for many years, his place of business being on East Front street. He was also an elder at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Moon was a life long member.

Mrs. Moon is survived by her husband, Joseph D. Moon; two cousins, Mrs. Mellisa Cook and Mrs. Irene Irving, of this city, and three nephews, David, Louis and Harry McNabb, of Philadelphia. The funeral will be held at the late home, the time to be announced later, and Rev. C. L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, will officiate in the absence of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie. The interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

HOME DEP'T SOCIAL AT TRINITY REFORMED

Under the auspices of the Home department of the Sunday shcool of Trinity Reformed church, a social and entertainment was held in the Sunday school room of the church, last night. As usual at such affairs, there was a large attendance of members of the department and their friends. Sociability was one of the features of the evening. This department is one of the most active in the city and has the largest membership in the city or county.

An interesting feature was the presence of F. H. Andrews, of this city, who is the Union county superintendent of Home department work. His remarks were chiefly of a congratulatory nature and he spoke of the department as being a great force in the work of the church. This was clearly evidenced by the results obtained. He also spoke of it being a pastor's force in his work. Rev. J. Y. Broek, the pastor, also made a few remarks congratulating the department.

The entertainment comprised flute duets by Elmer E. Wheeler and Walter Sampson; flute solos by Mr. Sampson, a recitation, "The Foremen's Wedding," by George Leighs; soprano solos by Mme. Brugiere, a dialogue, "Two Wandering Jews," by Messrs. Wheeler and Sampson.

After the entertainment there was a social hour during which refreshments were served by a committee from the department, of which Mrs. Charles M. Dolliver was the chairman.

COMMISSION GOV'T

Former Mayor Fisk Talks on New Form of Municipal Administration.

Upon the invitation of Eugene A. Laing, who was acting president at the Chamber of Commerce meeting last night, former Mayor Charles J. Fisk gave a talk on the important provisions of the commission form of government bill which was passed by the last Legislature. In his opinion the bill is a good one, insuring a strictly business form of government free from petty politics.

"We want the greatest amount of good out of our government," said Mr. Fisk, "and the new law provides for as government on a business basis. Already about 125 cities in this country have taken advantage of the scheme, and the result seems to be that municipalities get more for their money. I would like to see steps taken here to bring about the adoption of the plan and I believe that every citizen should make a careful study of it with that view in end. I don't think that Plainfield would make a mistake in adopting the plan. It provides for an election in the spring, independent of all other elections and the commissioners are chosen for four years.

"There is the initiative, the referendum and the recall so that if any one of the commissioners is not doing his duty he can be removed. These act as a public safety. It simplifies the city's business and puts it all up to the commissioners who are held responsible. The plan provides for a short ballot, and under the provisions it is quick to detect a wrong."

In view of the fact that the people seem to be so much interested in the plan, Mr. Laing and others thought it would be wise to take steps to bring about its adoption. It was finally left to the legislative committee of the Chamber to look the matter up and take such steps as was thought wise. If possible the necessary petition will be drafted and signatures secured with an idea of having an election this year.

Councilman F. L. Holt, through Judge Ulrich, secretary, asked for the Chamber's endorsement of a trolley ordinance now pending in the Council, but until more was learned about the provisions of the ordinance, it was thought best not to take any action. It was explained that the new Public Utilities Act gives the city sufficient control of trolleys.

There was a short discussion of the proposition to recommend Councilmanic action looking toward the prevenaion of fires, but this matter was referred to the legislative committee.

There was the unanimous adoption of a motion thanking former Senator John Kean for the library sent to the Chamber. The communication from the National Municipal League, of Philadelphia, inviting the Chamber to join, was received and filed, as was also one from the Russell Sage Foundation regarding plans for a "safe and sane" Fourth of July celebration.

A communication from the World's Peace Fund, asking for the endorsement of plans, was referred to the officers, as way also one asking that it be urged that Congressman T. J. Scully, of Perth Amboy, be placed on certain committees.

The Elizabeth Real Estate Board asked for information concerning water rates in this city, and in return said that it would be glad to reciprocate. The information will be furnished. Arthur F. Dow & Co., of New York, sought information about factory sites. The communication was filed. The Steel Ball Company, of America, also desired information about a factory site and this was filed.

After the election of Jacob Schwartz, William Hamilton, Marchant Brothers and Caspar Stadele as members, the meeting adjourned.

High Ratings for Miller.

Senator Martine praised Jersey cows highly in the Senate the other day—Jersey cows supply Milton Miller, a milk dealer of Everett place, with the rich creamy milk he retails at 8c per quart. Board of Health tests give this milk 3.8% butter fat. Miller's special milk, for babies or convalescents is the best in the city. Health boards tests show 5.7% butter fats. This special is only 10c a quart. Economic milk consumers, who desire quality should telephone immediately 1532-J., Miller's diary. 5 5 2

Mrs. Abbey Holmes Surprised.

Mrs. Abbey Holmes, of West Second street, was given a surprise party at her home, last evening, when a large company of friends called, bringing with them fruits, flowers and other articles. There was a program of recitations, vocal and instrumental music and whist and euchre were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served.

CATHOLIC CHURCH FOR THE EAST END SOON

The parish of St. Mary's church having grown to such large proportions, Rev. Bernard M. Bogan, the pastor, is considering plans to build a new Catholic church edifice within the next year. Yesterday the priest purchased a tract of land, 269x150 in "Chelsea Park," in the East End. The tract is located on St. Nicholas boulevard, running from Geneva place to Seneca place and is a part of the land now being developed by a real estate concern.

Father Bogan visited the section yesterday and finally decided on the tract. He will now have plans drawn for a church of suitable size to meet the constantly growing population, especially in the East End of the city. Ever since Father Bogan came to Plainfield he has been impressed with the importance of building a new church in the East End and now his hopes are soon to be realized. While other churches have been branching out and building edifices in other sections of the city, St. Mary's church has been contented to devote its effort and energies to the one church. Now it will seek to meet the growing need which has been apparent for years.

CELEBRATING THEIR SILVER WEDDING DAY

Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. VanWinkle, of Sandford avenue, are celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding today. This afternoon, Mrs. VanWinkle entertained a large company of relatives and friends at a card party, whist being the game enjoyed. The home was elaborately decorated for the occasion, the arrangement in the dining-room being especially attractive. Mrs. VanWinkle was showered with the congratulations of her guests, and she was also handsomely remembered by receiving many handsome gifts. Following the game of whist a fine supper was served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. VanWinkle were married on Elm street, twenty-five years ago today by Rev. Asa R. Dilts, then pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and he was assisted by Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, then pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Mrs. VanWinkle is a most active member, especially in the Ladies' Christian Work Society. Mr. VanWinkle has been employed at the local postoffice for many years, first as a carrier, then a clerk and now he is superintendent of carriers. The couple have one daughter.

JAMES WESTON DIES IN LOCAL HOSPITAL

James Weston, one of the oldest and best known employes at the Potter Press Works, died in Muhlenberg Hospital at 6 o'clock last evening. He had been ill for several weeks with an intestinal obstruction and was operated on ten days ago. It afforded relief temporarily but he failed to rally.

Mr. Weston was born in London, England, sixty-nine years ago, and came to Plainfield from Westerly, R. I., when the Potter company removed here in 1879. He remained with the firm continuously until his illness began. He had always resided in the West End and had a large acquaintance in all parts of the city. Mr. Weston is survived by his wife, two daughters and two sons. They are Mrs. Charles L. Holstein, of Summit avenue; Miss Florence Weston, George and Frank Weston, living at the parental home on Essex street.

The funeral will be held at his late home on Essex street, Monday afternoon, and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

HEARD POLITICIANS

When former Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer arose to introduce Mayor George W. V. Moy, at the banquet of "Circles on the Square" last night in the Waldorf, there were about ninety guests with appetites appeased and in good humor. Mr. Swackhamer's ability as toastmaster has never been questioned, but last night he seemed to have got to the point of beating his own record, provoking peals of laughter from the assembled guests.

Of course the toastmaster started off with a story and ended it with a joke which was timely and to the point. Mayor Moy welcomed the men of the circles and stated that he hoped that Mr. Swackhamer would "live long." He referred to the toastmaster as the "tall sycamore" and also said that Donald McLean deserved a special word of welcome because of his imminence as a lawyer. But when the photographer took his flashlight and set fire to the draperies laughter ceased. The dinner was a success from every viewponit and no one could cavil at the excellent vians provided by Henry Windham.

Following Mayor Moy, W. B. Garrabrant, of Newark, former Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, Donald McLean, former secretary to Senator John Kean; Assemblyman Lloyd Thompson, William Jeffery, William H. Rogers and former Mayor Charles Joel Fisk spoke briefly on timely topics. Letters of regret were read from Judge Nelson Y. Dungan, George L. Record and Simon P. Debbie, who were on the list of speakers.

Mr. Garrabrant paid a tribute to the present Assembly and Senate at Trenton and particularly to Mr. Swackhamer, for whom he launched a boom for the senatorship from Somerset county. He complimented the committee upon the superior quality of the dinner and said he had no hesitancy in proclaiming the fact that "Circles on the Square" was the greatest institution in this part of the State.

A song by the members of the circles followed the speech of Mr. Gararbrant and Mr. Pierce took up the burden of making the next speech. He said that the question of today is that of progressive legislation and that New Jersey easily leads the country in this respect. Mr. Pierce referred to the newest laws, commending the commission form of municipal government including the initiative, referendum and recall and said that the law as now on the statute books was the most progressive measure ever put before the people of this State. Mr. MacLean in a brief speech acknowledged his obligations to former Senator Kean, whom he said was a friend of all young men who are anxious to do right.

Assemblyman Thompson said that good citizenship is the only guarantee of good government and the giving of the power of the initiative, referendum and recall would bring to the State something that would show New Jersey to be always in front of the fonward movements in the country. He referred to the Geran law and said he had serious objections to it because of its many complicated provisions and had voted against because he thought the bill unfair even after the Republican Senate had made over 300 amendments to it.

Mr. Jeffery explained the motives and political desires of the circles which he declared to be of the cleanest known today. He said circles on the square means "organization" and that organization is everything. Henry Rogers and Mr. Fisk spoke briefly on the matter of home government, Mr. Fisk laying stress upon the fact that the commission form of municipal government would prove to be the best thing Plainfield ever had if it was once established.

Songs were sung and a final joke was perpetarated by Mr. Swackhamer. The committee in charge of the dinner was composed of Frank C. Shaffer, Clarence Mathews, Vito Delia, of New Providence township, and Guy D. Peck and E. E. Cooper, of Warren.

ALLEGED BIKE THEIVES HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Charges were preferred against two alleged bicycle thieves in the city court this morning before Judge William G. DeMeza, and both were held. William Green, colored, was held in $100 bail to await the action of the grand jury and Vincent Conway, a fifteen-year-old white boy, who claims New York city as his residence, was remanded until tomorrow morning when he will be given a hearing.

According to the police Conway attempted to sell to Thomas Starr, a colored man, yesterday, a bicycle which had been stolen from L. A. Clements, a lawyer, with offices in the Babcock building. The price of the wheel made Starr become suspicious and he took the youth to police headquarters. There it was found that the wheel had been stolen. It is believed by the police that both prisoners are implicated in other thefts of wheels in this city and perhaps some of those taken may be recovered.

MRS. HENRY P. PUGH DIED THIS MORNING

Mrs. Josepha .. Pugh, wife of Henry P. Pugh, aged 67 years, died at : o'clock this morning at her home, 954 West Fourth street. Mrs. Pugh, whose maiden name was Josepha I. Parker, was born in Augusta, N. Y., April 1, 1844, and was the granddaughter of Amos Parker, a Revolutionary soldier, who had the distinction of being selected as the first bodyguard to Gen. Lafayette, and who on one occasion saved Lafayette's life.

Mrs. Pugh had lived in New Jersey for thirty years and in Plainfield for nineteen years. In church affiliation she was a member of the Congregational church, of Bound Brook, where she formerly resided, and was also a member of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church. She is survived by her husband, Henry P. Pugh; three daughters, Mrs. H. W. Fraleigh and Mrs. J. P. Kirch, of this city, and Mrs. George S. Bolsterle, of West Leyden, N. Y., one son, Ray C. Pugh, of Seneca Falls, N. Y., and one sister, Mrs. Mary E. Winer, of Phoenicia, N. Y.

The funeral service will be held at the late residence Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, and Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will officiate.

MODEL HOMES FOR THE POOR OF CITY

Having become interested in a scheme to house the poor under sanitary conditions, Charles W. McCutchen has communicated with President George L. Babcock, of the Chamber of Commerce, with the idea of introducing the plan in this city. His communication was read at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night, and it was decided, as suggested by Mr. McCutchen, that a meeting be held in the chamber rooms at which time Champlain L. Riley, president of a New York company, and H. Atterbury Smith, an architect, be allowed to exhibit plans and explain the scheme. The meeting will be held on Friday night, May 12, and an effort will be made to secure the attendance of members of the Charity Organization Society and the Anti-Tuberculosis League, as well as all others interested.

The style of houses under consideration are similar to the "John Jay Dwellings," which are now being erected in New York by the company of which Mr. Riley is the head. The homes are built on the hollow square plan, providing for about sixteen apartments on each floor. They furnish an abundance of light and air, permitting people of limited means to live in a healthful way and under the best sanitary conditions at a reasonable cost.

Mr. McCutchen explained is his letter that he had no financial interest in the matter, his only aim being to lend his interest to the welfare of the poor of the city. The executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce voted to allow the use of the rooms for such a meeting as suggested.

'SUNNYSIDE' AFIRE

"Sunnyside," the beautiful home of Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, situated on the north side of East Front street, between Richmond and Berckman, was badly damaged by a fire which broke out at 4:30 yesterday afternoon. It originated in the attic from a cause as yet unknown and had evidently been smoldering for a considerable period before being noticed. All the apparatus from headquarters and No. 4 house was on the scene, but the flames had worked their way through the upper walls and stubbornly resisted all efforts to subdue them. The firemen worked for two hours and a half before the recall was sounded.

Mrs. Mead has been away from the city and until her return from Troy, N. Y., today it will be impossible to give anything like an exact estimate of the damage. There is hardly any doubt but what the loss will be between five and six thousand dollars on the building and perhaps $4,000 on contents. The greater part of the latter were saved by the firemen, police, servants and neighbors, everything was of a costly nature and easily ran into money. Very little was burned and the damage came either from water or breakage in handling.

The house was occupied only by servants at the time the fire started. Several of them detected smoke and for a time thought it due to the fact that James Walsh, the coachman, had started up the furnace. When the smoke became thicker they went outside to look just as Walsh came running across the lawn for the same purpose. A glance at the east corner of the house showed unmistakable signs of fire. Miss Agnes Greenshield, a maid, instantly ran at top speed to Front street and Norwood avenue and turned in an alarm from box 16, breaking the glass key frame with her bare hands to do so. The other servants summoned help from the neighborhood and busied themselves getting valuables to a place of safety. The residence was one of the most handsomely decorated and furnished in the city. Thousands of dollars worth of rare oil paintings, tapestries, imported rugs and furniture were in the lower rooms but despite the rush of volunteers it was impossible to get them all out.

The firemen had hardly gotten busy before Chief Kiely arrived with a platoon of police reserves composed of Patrolmen Nolan, O'Keefe, McGinley Sweeney, Messler, Vanderweg and Saffron. They established fire lines and took charge of the rescue work, placing the valuables on the spacious lawn. Chief Kiely personally looked after the family silverware, of which there were two large chests, and had it sent in charge of Patrolman Nolan to a safe deposit vault. Miss Greenshield was one of the most energetic of the workers and continued to assist in the salvage even after she had been drenched with water. Patrolmen McGinley, Nolan and O'Keefe were also saturated and had to secure dry uniforms.

Chief Doane found that the fire had started in a room at the east corner of the attic used for storage purposes. It was filled with excess bedding and furniture, all of which was ablaze. The firemen put two lines of hose in action but they experienced all kinds of difficulties in getting at the blaze. They were repeatedly driven back by heat and smoke but persisted until the blaze was confined to the roof. This was composed of shingles, some of them three feet long. This made it hard to get at the flames and they crept across the entire front part of the structure. It was one of the most difficult fires Chief Doane has encountered in years and too much credit cannot be given him for the way in which it was handled. It was held pretty well to the forward part of the house and a large part of the damage is due to water washing down to the basement. Firemen Clark, Caroll, Keiderling, Connaughton, Breem and Dunn were all in the thickest of the fight but escaped with only slight nausea from smoke. The flames were finally extinguished when holes were chopped in the roof and a sweep made for the water to get between the slate and shingles.

Miss Margaret Mead was summoned by telephone from the annual meeting of the City Union, King's Daughters, and took charge of the valuables. At the suggestion of Chief Kiely and J. Fred McDonald, the latter acting for the insurance companies, she summoned seven vans from the Hand storage Company and all the articles that had not been taken to the neighboring homes were placed in them. These were hauled to the stable on the premises for the night and a special detail of police placed on guard. They will be sorted over today and then stored until the

THREE TO ANSWER HERESEY CHARGES

Questions of vital importane to the religious world and especially the Presbyterian church, will come before the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States at Atlantic City, May 18 to 27.

Two eminent theologians and a prominent pastor will be called upon to answer questions of heresy, it being charged that their "teachings are false" to Presbyterian standards and subversive of the fajth.

The Union Theological Seminary, of Manhattan, which has graduated one-third, at least, of the Presbyterian pastors of New York and New Jersey and thousands of ministers of other denominations, will be called upon, indirectly, to defend itself against serious criticisms of its teachings.

The men who are to be brought up on charges of heresy are Dr. Francis Brown, president of Union Theological eminary; the Rev. Dr. William Adams Brown, a professor in that institution, and the Rev. Dr. William R. Grant, of the Northumberland, Pa., Presbytery. In the case of the theologians the West Jersey Presbytery brings proeedings for their trial, and in Dr.Grant's case the trial will come up on an appeal by the prosecuting committee of his Presbytery, which body acquitted him recently.

It is also known that there is a pretty general feeling that all reference of heresay cases to the General Assembly should be avoided, but as already noted, the West Jersey Presbytery wants the matter of the charges against the Browns brought up and it cannot, therefore, be avoided.

A rumor obtained some credence that the executive committee of the General Assembly had the other day passed a resolution to be presented to that body that no young man should be taken under the care of any presbytery for the purpose of studying for the ministry, be licensed or ordained, that was studying at the Union Seminary or had been graduated therefrom and that if this were so, some thought, it would bring about a split in the great church.

There is decided feeling throughout the country toward conservatism of thought regarding the doctrines of the church and well-informed ministers say that not in a century has there been such a reversal of opinion as there has been in the last ten years. It is even declared that what are known as higher critics are not being called to vacate pulpits and that there is a growing willingness on the part of the great majority of the members of the church to listen to the old truth, they are getting tired of what they term a negative gospel and are clamoring for a positive faith on the part of those who preach. The General Assembly can make a declaration on the question, but it is not looked for at this session.

These terms, as applied to Presbyterians, are defined as follows: A conversative is one who adheres to what is known as the reformed system of doctrine, or the standards and the old theology, and the liberal is one who is not particular what anyone believes. Then there are the moderates, who, as the name implies, are moderately conservative.

SOLILOQUIES OF A BENEDICT.

To hear some people talk life is a sort of slide down a corrugated roof with nothing but a long drop at the end.

A pessimist is a man who sees nothing but panics, catastrophes and decadence ahead; has gathered nothing out of the past but buckets of slime. He is generally bald and dead broke.

Ask a woman if those children outside are not making an awful racket and see if she doesn't look carefully to ascertain if they are her own oh a neighbor's before answering.

While the suffragettes are casting about in search of arguments to prove the leadership of their sex in the professions since time immemorial we would humbly suggest that Delilah gained fame as a tonsorialist.

KUROPATKIN IS TERMED WAR COWARD BY WITTE.

A crushing indictment against General Kuropatkin's conduct of the war with Japan is contained in a book by Count Witte, former premier, who said yesterday that the book would probably be ready for distribution within a few days.

Witte accuses Kuropatkin of gross inefficiency, cowardice and mendacity in attempting to shift the blame for the disastrous outcome to other shoulders. It is considered certain that Kuropatkin will challenge Witte to a duel when the book appears.

COSTLY NICKELS.

Counterfeiting nickels at a cost of twenty-five cents each is an industry in Chicago which the government secret service has kindly stopped, for which Andrew Barto, the accused man, may well be glad. According to the testimony of Captain T. I. Porter, head of the sercet service, it required an hour and a half of time to make three lead nickels. At this rate each nickel would have cost a quarter, yet he either had rosy dreams of fortune by disposing of them at two cents each in bulk or he was a man so determined on being crooked that he would rather lose money at it than be honest. The counterfeiting outfit consisted of a heavy stamping machine, bellows, forge, stamping press and a number of devices for polishing and trimming the coins, all very workman like and successful, but expensive in the matter of time. "To make the coin," Captain Porter testified, "Barto first had to cut the nickels from a sheet of lead and then polish the edges for fully fifteen minutes by hand. Then he put the unfinished piece on the mold and set it under a heavy weight, which he lifted to the ceiling of his den with a hand windlass until he released a catch and dropped the weight on the steel die. If the weight hit accurately the bogus coin was stamped, but he spoiled three out of five."

NOAH DOVE HONORS STEPHEN H. SCHLEIF

Noah Dove Encampment, No. 25, I. O. O. F., gave a reception to Stephen H. Schleif in Odd Fellows' Hall, last night, in honor of his election as grand patriarch of the Grand Encampment of New Jersey at Phillipsburg Tuesday. The affair was attended by delegations of Odd Fellows from all over the State, including Canton Essex, of Newark, in uniform, which acted as escort to the guest of honor. Mr. Schleif's official staff was also included in the reception.

Chief Patriarch Henry H. Hoffman was in charge of the program which for the most part comprised speeches by the officers and visitors. Mr. Schleif was called forward and without any previous hint was presented with a handsome gold watch, suitably engraved, as a token from Noah Dove Encampment. The presentation was made by Past Chief Patriarch John Becker, and Mr. Schleif made a fitting response. At the conclusion of the exercises, adjournment was taken to the banquet room where a collation was served. The hall was handsomely decorated with flags and lodge insignia.

ENDEAVORERS RALLY AT WARREN CHAPEL

Officers were elected, reports presented and an address made at the annual mass meeting of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union at Warren chapel last night. Every society in the union was represented by a large delegation. Frank Stewart, president, presided. The meeting opened with a song service led by Alexander Dresselt, Mrs. Joseph O. McKelvey being at the organ. The orchestra from the Temple Baptist church, assisted with the music. Rev. J. O. McKelvey read the 72d Psalm, which he termed the Christian Endeavor Psalm, after which he offered prayer.

The roll call followed and then it was announced that the Warren chapel society was entitled to have one delegate sent to the Atlantic City convention at the expense of the union, for having the highest percentage of attendance at the meeting. The Dunellen Presbyterian church society was second and the society from the West End Tabernacle third.

The report of the secretary, Alexander Galloway, showed that the past year had been the most prosperous in the history of the union. The attendance at meetings was larger and more work had been accomplished, while there was a good balance in the treasury.

Charles F. Springstead, of Westfield, delivered an interesting address on "The Atlantic City Convention," giving many facts and figures to show that it will be the largest convention of the kind ever held in this country. The election of officers then followed and these were chosen:

President, Frank Stewart, Temple Baptist church; vice-president, Chas. Neagle, Seventh-Day Baptist church; secretary, Miss Maud Disbrow, Netherwood Reformed church; treasurer, Miss Bertha Jones, Hope chapel; assistant secretary and chairman of the press committee, Walter Firstbrook, Hope chapel; chairman prayer-meeting committee, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Park Avenue Baptist church; chairman of the lookout committee, Clarence B. LaRue, Temple Baptist church; chairman missionary committee, Robert Love, West End Tabernacle.

"Equipment for Service," was the subject of an address by Rev. Ernest Brown, of the Dunellen Presbyterian church. He took his text from Ephesians 6, beginning with the words, "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord and the power of His might." Mr. Brown said that no Christian can render acceptable service unless he is filled with the power of God. This power comes in four ways, first by a thorough convehsion through the blood of Jesus Christ; second, by absorbing the Word of God; third, by prayer and fourth, by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. Mr. Brown said that all about are souls hungering for the Gospel and each Endeavorer is responsible for those nearest him. The address of Mr. Brown closed the service.

Smalley testified against the man on the cruelty charge and Mrs. VanHoesen and Patrolman McGinley on the other. Rosenthal was defended by Harry C. Runyon and the S. P. C. A. was represented by J. Henry Crane.

Fearing that some of his own dogs might have come in contact with "Happy," which was on Mr Hooley's premises early Monday morning, the dog's body was sent by him today to the Pasteur Institute, New York, to ascertain whether it was effected by rabies.

The insurance on the house is held by the Glens Falls and Girard Companies and is for a large amount. The personal insurance is known only to Mrs. Mead but is believed to be about $25,000.

While all sorts of opinions have been advanced as to the cause of the fire, nothing is definite. Chief Doane believes it might have been caused by a defect in the chimney. No one had been in the attic in several days and no lights or matches had been used near it.

Mrs. Mead returned from Troy at nooh today and stated to reporter that it would be some time before she could give details of the damage. She intimated, however, that $10,000 would not be very much out of the way.

Chief Doane was warm in his praise of the nerve displayed by Miss Margaret Mead on reaching the scene. She was in the midst of the turmoil directing the saving of property until the chief had to insist on her leaving to secure dry clothing. She was deluged with water until her garments were saturated.

Among those who helped the firemen and policemen to carry out some of the precious bric-a-brac and other valuables were Edward Hardingham, William Woodruff, Gordon Moy, son of the mayor, James Caulfield, Frank and Schuyler Line, Clarence LaRue and George Leigh.

able to give more attention to the work of the Day Nursery. Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney and Mrs. Charles A. Reed also spoke on this subject, the former explaining the action of the executive committee yesterday morning. It was found that one nurse could not attend to all the city work and at the suggestion of Hugh F. Fox of the Charity Organization Society, it was thought best to turn that work over to the society. Mrs. Reed was of the opinion that it was about time that at least some of the expense be put up to the city. Miss Olive DeLany, who held the position of city nurse, resigned recently, and her sister, Miss Hazel B. DeLany has been acting in her place. Just what arrangements The King's Daughters will make in the future cannot be determined at present.

It was impossible to exhibit the model Day Nursery from the Child's Welfare Exhibit in New York, as explained by a letter, for the reason that it is still in Newark.

Mrs. Frank W. Jones, president of the Union, presided at the meeting which was opened with devotional exercises by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church. Mrs. F. W. Butler filled her position as secretary.

After the regular meeting the executive committee met and elected these officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. Frank W. Jones; vice-president, Mrs. Frederic W. Butler; treasurer, Mrs. A. M. Most; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Emerson E. Parvin; recording secretary, Miss Elsie Suffern. There are two changes, Mrs. F. W. Butler, who was recording secretary, being succeeded by Miss Suffern, while she succeeds Miss Anna Garrigues as vice-president.

Brought Fugitive Back.

Emilio Burgazio will be arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this afternoon at 5 o'clock. The alleged criminal waived extradition in New Haven yesterday and was brought to this city by Chief of Police Kiely. Burgazio is accused of having shot Andrew Alexander on Sunday afternoon last.

Kind Words For Firemen.

L. Kornfield, the West Front street baker, whose barn was damaged by fire Saturday night, has presented a check for $10 to the firemen's relief fund. It was accompanied by a letter to Chief Doane in which he warmly thanked all the members of the department for their work and stated that but for their heroic efforts the barn and probably his bakery would have been destroyed. Mr. Kornfield's kind words and generous gift are greatly appreciated by the firemen.

AS TO RENTING—The first house I had listed in my new office was a fifteen hundred dollar house. The owner came to see me from New York, because his wife was visiting here and saw my ad. Two hours after he gave it to me, a man came up in a five thousand dollar new automobile and I took him to see it, and if the rest of his family are as well pleased with it as he is, it is rented. When I was operating in Trenton, I was collecting rent from 150 houses, all kinds, when the cyclone struck me. And I want to rent houses here in this way, or I do not want to be bothered with them. When I take a house, I want the house for rent, and I will rent it in this way. Will charge nothing to rent it, but will charge 5 per cent. on the amount I collect and take full charge of it; do all the repairing and pay the taxes and interest on mortgage, if you wish me too, and in repairing. If you catch me taking graft from the poor mechanic to buy your work, I want you to send me to the White House before Governor Wilson gets there, and see that there is a four-foot partition wall between Senator Martine and myself so I can get graft, for I do not like any two-cent graft. REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—New 9-room bungalow; terms to suit. 1430 East Second street. 4 22 1mo

NEW REAL ESTATE OFFICE—Will open up my new office on Monday morning at No. 155 North avenue, ground floor. Have already purchased a good size book for the purpose of listing every property in Plainfield. My object is to fill it full of the conditions of your property, including the size of mortgage on same; then to leave the book to my grandchildren to read. I am the man who has been working in a four-dollar capacity to fight nervous prostration for the last four years and in those conditions have earned the title of selling and exchanging more property than any two agents in Plainfield. Now I am better and am ready for business. If you are coming to see me let me tell you something. Don't come near me if you expect me to handle your house, if it is sprinkled with signs or one sign which reads for sale by any broker, unless you want to sell out for 50 cents on the $1.00, for I want you to known that my feeling for you is the same as yours is for me, where you want to include me under any old broker. And let me tell you that these old signs are what make Plainfield real estate sell for less money than it does in any city or town along the Central, notwithstanding it has the name of "City Beautiful." Your any old broker means that some of them should be selling peanuts, instead of offering your property or spoiling the sale of it. Have sold seven properties in the last two weeks. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on the plan "that my time is yours." My office is not as it will be when the store front is changed, but will answer the purpose for a short time. 4 29 12

A DISAPPOINTED MAN.

He and the Insurance Man Could Not Agree as to What Was an Accident.

Mr. Halloran surveyed the insurance agent with a dark and hostile countenance. The fact that one eye was concealed by a somewhat grimy bandage did not add to the attractiveness of his expression.

"Haven't you made up your mind yet to insure with us?" inquired the agent. "You told me I might call again in a few days."

"There was two of you at me to get an accident insurance policy," said Mr. Halloran, breathing heavily. "I towld you and him both you might call in again, and he come firrst, day befoor yistherday, and I insured wid his company.

"That very night I met up wid Barney Casey on the way home, which was what I was expecting wud happen," continued Mr. Halloran, raising himself by grasping the arms of his chair with two capable although scarred hands, "and whin we'd finished wid one another I was like this.

"Yistherday morning I sent for the insurance chap, and says I to him, 'Look at me,' I says, 'and istimate the damages and pay them.'

"He squirmed right out o' the door, saying 'twas no accident I'd had.

"Now, if meeting wid Barney Casey afther keeping out o' his way for six months is no accident I'm done wid insurance companies, and the sooner you have this house the betther 'twill plaze me."—Youth's Companion.

HE UNDERSTOOD.

An Interview That Made Matters Clear to the Officer.

"Come, mister, no one can sleep here!" said a policeman the other evening when he found a man lying on a vacant plot of land by the side of the road and aroused him.

"But I have a good excuse," replied the man.

"What is it?"

"See that house over there? Well, please to do me the favor to go and ring the bell and ask if William Dockey is at home."

The officer went to the house, ascended the steps and rang the bell.

A head was thrust out of a window, and a woman's voice demanded:

"Now, who is there?"

"Madam," replied the officer, "is William Dockey at home?"

"No, he ain't, and I don't expect him until daylight," said the woman, and at the same time a bowlful of water descended on the officer's head.

"Well," said the man on the ground as the dripping officer came up, "you see how it is, don't you? I'm Dockey. That's Mrs. Dockey."

"I think I understand," replied the officer. "You can remain where you are."—London Answers.

Death, Ancient and Modern.

The art of the ancients would certainly seem to show that their conception of death was a much more cheerful one than that which has obtained in later times. It was at one time thought that the old Greeks and Egyptians had no artistic symbol for death, but this was a misconception. Death was almost invariably represented by them as the kinsman of sleep. The Greeks personified it as Thanatos, elder brother of Sleep. The Romans sometimes depicted Death and Sleep as twin children reposing in the arms of Night. The skull and crossbones and the skeleton as emblems of death do not appear to have become common until comparatively late Christian times. It has been suggested that the terrible famines and pestilences which scourged Europe during the middle ages were responsible for the fear or horror with which the modern mind is usually accustomed to look upon death.

Discourtesy Rebuked.

Lord Palmerston expected work to be done well, but Mr. Preston Thomas in his book tells us that of mere peccadilloes he was tolerant. Some young gentlemen in the foreign office amused themselves by "shining" young ladies who lived on the other side of the street—that is, by catching the rays of the sun on a mirror and flashing them over the way. The father of the young ladies complained to Palmerston, who thereupon issued this minute:

"The secretary of state desires that the gentlemen in his department will not cast disagreeable reflections on the ladies opposite."—London Chronicle.

How to Test Paper.

You cannot test paper as you would string, by stretching it. It has been stretched so much in the process of manufacture that it won't stand much more. The way to test it is to rub it in the hands. After such treatment poor paper is full of holes and cracks. Good paper simply takes the appearance of leather. If much white dust is produced we know there are earthly impurities. If it cracks it has been bleached too much.—London Globe.

On His Own.

"While I was engaged to her she made me give up drinking, smoking and golf. Last of all, I gave up something on my own account."

"What was that?"

"The girl."—Judge's Library.

GOVERNOR FAVORS LOCAL OPTION IDEA

Governor Wilson writing to the Rev. Thomas B. Shannon, new superintendent of the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League, has outlined his views on the question of local option. While favoring the principle, he is oposed to making it an issue between political parties. The Governor's letter, sent in reply to a request from Mr. Shannon, is as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Shannon—The question asked in your letter of April 27, about my attitude toward the important question of local option is, of course, a perfectly legitimate one, and you are entitled to a very frank answer. I would have replied sooner had I not been prevented by imperative public engagements. I have explained my views to you in private, but have, of course, no objection to your making them public.

"I am in favor of local option. I am a thorough believer in local self-government and believe that every self-governing community which constitutes a social unit should have the right to control the matter of the regulation or of the withholding of licenses.

"But the questions involved are social and moral, not political, and are not susceptible of being made parts of a party program. Whenever they have been made the subject matter of party contests, they have cut the lines of party organization and party action athwart, to the utter confusion of political action in every field. They have thrown every other question, however important, into the background and have made constructive party action impossible for long years together.

So far as I am myself concerned therefore, I can never consent to have the question of local option made an issue between political parties in this state. My judgment is very clear in this matter. I do not believe that party programs of the slightest consequence to the political life of the state and of the nation ought to be thrust one side and hopelessly embarrassed for long periods together by making a political issue of a great question which is essentially non-political, non-partisan, moral and social in its nature.

Very sincerely yours,
(signed) "WOODROW WILSON.

Willing to Tell it.

The check which the comely young German woman handed in at the window of a Walnut street savings fund band the other day was made payable to Gretchen H. Schmidt. The man at the receiving teller's window called her back to rectify the mistake just as she was turning away.

"You don't deposit this quite this way," he explained. "See, you have forgotten the H."

The young woman looked at her check and blushed a rosy red.

"Ach, so I haf," she murmured, and wrote hurriedly:

"Age 23."—Philadelphia Times.

A "Good" Part.

An ambutious amateur actor had so persistently besieged the club manager for a place in the play that finally he was admitted.

"What part am I ast for?" he inquired.

"You are to be the heroine's father," was the reply.

"What does he do?"

"Well, sir, he dies six years before the curtain rises on the first act," said the manager.—Metropolitan Magazine.

IF you have never had a bank account you cannot understand the feeling of independence and happiness that comes with the possession if one.

A great writer has said that many people with good incomes are more unhappy than beggars because they live beyond their means. If you have never had a bank account you realize the truth of this assertion and cannot understand the feeling or independence and happiness that you may so easily enjoy.

JERSEY RED MEN TO GATHER AT MILLVILLE

Members of the fifty tribes of the Improved Order of Red Men from thirty towns in New Jersey, with fifteen bands of music and the great chiefs of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, 5,000 red wariors in all, attired in full feathers and war paint, will take part at Millville in the largest demonstration of Red Men ever held in this state, tomorrow night. Chief among the guests of honor will be Past Great Incohonee Thomas K. Donnelly, of Philadelphia, who is 82 years old, and who is known from coast to coast among Red Men.

W. Fred Ware, mayor of Millville, will act as marshal of the parade, and during the progress of the column on High street the cars will cease running.

Eight special trains from Atlantic City, Medford, Cape May City, Ocean City, Holly Beach, Port Norris and two from Camden, in addition to the regular hourly train service on the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad will take the visiting Red Men and guests to Millville. It is anticipated that Millville will entertain as many visitors tomorrow night as she has residents, which is 12,500.

Among the tribe of Red Men that will be represented are Plainfield, Vineland, four from Bridgeton, Shiloh, Delmont, Port Norris, Cape May Court House, Holly Beach, Ocean City, four from Atlantic City, Petersburg, Pleasantville, May's Landing, Minotola, Newfield, Glassboro, Pitmad, Gloucester, twelve from Camden, Medford, Haddonfield, Trenton, Burlington, Paulsboro, Woodbury, South Amboy Asbury Park and Bayonne. In order that the visitors may reach home the same night, the special trains will leave Millville about midnight.

AUSTRALIAN PREMIER ON THE "YELLOW PERIL."

Victoria, B. C., May 5.—That Australia fears the Orient was the opinion expressed by Frank Wilson, Premier of Western Australia, who arrived Wednesday by the steamer Zealandia, en route to London to attend the coronation.

"Unless we people of Australia prepare to defend it, we will lose it," he said. "The defense movement, the construction of an Australian navy, was not begun too soon."

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

The last weeks of the New York Hippodrome season are announced and those who have not yet made an opportunity to see the big triple spectacular show and circus will do well to take advantage of the short time now left before the close of the season. The spectacular part of the big show is divided into three parts "The International Cup," "The Ballet of Niagara" and "Marching Through Georgia." Besides which there is a complete three ring circus containing 13 big feature acts. "Marching Through Georgia" is a Southern spectacle of old plantation days. The leading features are the building of the Pontoon Bridge which takes place before the audience and is accomplished in the space of four minutes. The great cotton plantation scene and the march of Sherman's Army to the Sea. The wonderful "Ballet of Niagara" and the magnificent Niagra Falls' scene continue to excite the admiration of every visitor to the world's largest playhouse.

Four Dollar Oxfords of Distinction

There is as much of a knack and just as much cleverness in the making of good shoes as there is in the making of good watches. It's ceaseless attention to the little details that makes for perfection. Many manufacturers tell us that we are supercritical, but we find that material and workmanship have both got to be watched pretty closely if the high standard we insist upon is to be maintained. Every bit of leather that goes into our $4.00 Oxford is carefully inspected and the most skilled labor puts it together. That's our way of building business; style speaks for itself and the merest inspection will prove the up-to-dateness of the designs we offer you this season.

TRICKED PAULINE.

Napoleon's Pert and Pretty Sister's Pride Was Humbled.

TWICE SHE MET HER MATCH.

The Empress Josephine Once Gave Her, So to Speak, a Dressing Down, and the Fashionable Mme. De Coutades Figuratively Boxed Her Ears.

Napoleon was anxious to have General Marmot marry his sister Pauline, but the wily old soldier refused to make the flirt his bride. Then Napoleon turned to General Leclerc, who really loved Pauline, and they were wedded. Leclerc was then sent as head of the French expedition to Haiti, Pauline going along under protest. Leclerc died of fever in Haiti, and Pauline returned to France with his body.

After a time Pauline, whom Lyndon Orr in Munsey's describes as a "feather headed, languishing, beautiful, distracting morsel of frivolity," resumed her heartbreaking tactics.

"Presently it became noised about," writes Mr. Orr, "that Prince Camillo Borghese was flirting desperately with Pauline. The prince was an excellent specimen of the fashionable Italian. He was immensely rich. His palace at Rome was filled with artistic treasure. He was the owner, moreover, of the famous Borghese jewels, the finest collection of diamonds in the world.

"Napoleon rather sternly insisted upon her marrying Borghese. Fortunately the prince was very willing to be connected with Napoleon, while Pauline was delighted at the idea of having diamonds that would eclipse all the gems which Josephine possessed, for, like all the Bonapartes, she detested her brother's wife. So she would be married and show her diamonds to Josephine. It was a bit of feminine malice she could not resist.

"The marriage took place very quietly at Joseph Bonaparte's house because of the absence of Napoleon, but the newly made princess was invited to visit Josephine at the palace of St. Cloud. Here was to be the triumph of her life. She spent many days in planning a toilet that should be absolutely crushing to Josephine. Whatever she wore must be a background for the famous diamonds. Finally she decided on green velvet.

"When the day came Pauline stood before a mirror and gazed at herself, with diamonds glistening in her hair, shimmering around her neck and fastened so thickly on her green velvet gown as to remind one of a moving jewel casket. She actually shed tears of joy. Then she entered her carriage and drove out to St. Cloud.

"But Josephine, though no longer young, was a woman of great subtlety as well as charm. Stories had been told to her of the green velvet, and therefore she had had her drawing room redecorated in the most uncompromising blue. It killed the green velvet completely. As for the diamonds, she met that maneuver by wearing not a single gem of any kind. Her dress was an Indian muslin with a broad hem of gold.

"Her exquisite simplicity, coupled with her dignity of bearing, made the Princess Pauline, with her shower of diamonds and her green velvet displayed against the blue, seem absolutely vulgar. Josephine was most generous in her admiration of the Borghese gems, and she kissed Pauline on departing. The victory was hers.

"There is another story of a defeat which Pauline met from another lady, one Mme. de Coutades. This was at a magnificent ball given to the most fashionable world of Paris. Pauline decided upon going and intended, in her own phrase, to blot out every woman there. She kept the secret of her toilet, and she entered the ballroom at the psychological moment, when all the guests had assembled.

"She appeared, and at sight of her the music stopped, silence fell upon the assemblage, and a sort of quiver went through every one. Her costume was of the finest muslin bordered with golden palm leaves. Four bands spotted like a leopard's skin, were wound about her head, while these in turn were supported by little clusters of golden grapes. She had copied the headdress of a Bacchante in the Louvre. All over her person were cameos, and just beneath her breasts she wore a golden band held in place by an engraved gem. Her beautiful wrists, arms and hands were bare. She had, in fact, blotted out her rivals.

"Nevertheless Mme. de Coutades took her revenge. She went up to Pauline, who was lying on a divan to set off her loveliness, and began gazing at the princess through a double eyeglass. Pauline felt flattered for a moment and then became uneasy. The lady who was looking at her said to a companion in a tone of regret:

"'What a pity! She really would be lovely if it weren't for that!'

"'For what?' returned her escort.

"'Why, are you blind? It's so remarkable that you surely must see it.'

"Pauline was beginning to lose her self composure. She flushed and looked wildly about, wondering what she meant. Then she heard Mme. de Coutades say:

"'Why, her ears! If I had such ears as those I would cut them off!'

"Pauline gave one great gasp and fainted dead away. As a matter of fact, her ears were not so bad. They were simply very flat and colorless, forming a contrast with the rosy tints of her face. But from that moment no one could see anything but these ears, and thereafter the princess wore her hair low enough to cover them."

MILITARY PUNISHMENTS.

Times When Rebellious Soldiers Gambled For Their Lives.

In times past the military code in England was no less stern and uncompromising than the civil. Sentence of death was readily decreed and as promptly executed. Where offenses multiplied and wholesale executions would have weakened the army numerically decimation—the slaughter of every tenth man—was the rule, or the troops gambled for their lives by casting dice upon a drumhead or drawing lots under the gallows tree.

Lesser penalties—not capital, but physical, and causing pain with permanent degradation—were maiming, branding the cheek or forehead, boring the tongue or cutting the nose and ears. These last named were retained upon the military statute book until the reign of Queen Anne. The "trappado" was a fiendish device by which a delinquent was hoisted on high by a rope fastened to his arms and then dropped down by a sudden jerk that often dislocated his shoulders. Hanging by the thumbs, sometimes called "picketing," was also practiced, while the body was raised to such a height that its whole weight rested on one toe, and that again on a sharp pointed spike.

To "ride the wooden horse" was to be mounted on a razor edge, with weights fastened to the extremities.

Running the gantlet, or "gantelope," was as old as the Cromwellian army, and it is thus described in an army order about 1649: The culprits (who had been guilty of blasphemy as well as deer stealing) were to be "stripped naked from the waist upward and a lane made by half the lord general's regiment of foot and half Colonel Pride's, with every man a cudgel in his hand. They were to be run through in this posture so that every soldier might have a stroke at their naked backs, breasts or arms wherever it might alight."—Pearson's.

GETTING TIRED.

Fatigue That Follows Monotony of Work or Exercise.

It is said that for horses the hardest road out of London is the most level one. There are no hills to climb and descend, and the tired horse has no chance to rest one set of muscles while another works. Monotony produces fatigue, and because this particular road is one dead, monotonous level more horses die on it than on any other leading out of London.

We can even take a charitable view of the time taken daily by the typewriter girl for the arrangement of her hair. Her fingers are congested by the work of writing and tired by contact with the hard keys of her machine, and the different feeling of her hair and the little plays and movements of her fingers in adjusting it are a distinct stimulation and relief.

Fatigue following long continued exercise is really a mild form of illness which arises from overexerting some one part of the body. In writing, for instance, the fingers move up and down hardly more than a quarter of an inch as they travel across the page. Yet this is hard work for their little muscles and burns up tissue in the fingers very fast. If rest intervals are too short and infrequent, there is not time for the removal of the waste products of this destruction through the normal channels of the body and congestion results. The feeling of fatigue or pain that follows long continued use of any of the muscles is due to the influence of such poisonous material, as well as to the stretching of the tissues caused by the pressure of the blood which settles there.—Paul W. Goldsbury in Atlantic.

Puzzled the Englishman.

A Philadelphian who had been entertaining a friend from London for several days noticed that his guest appeared to be in deep thought at dinner the other evening. "What's the matter?" he asked, fearing that the Englishman was ill or worried or homesick. "I'm rawther puzzled, old chap," replied the Londoner. "I really cawn't make out what the blawsted bounder meant. I was lost in your city the other day, and I dropped into an apartment house to ask my way. A fellow was loading freight on a bally lift. I awsked him, 'Me good man, can you tell me how far down is Spruce street?' And that fellow said, 'I don't know, old top; my elevator only runs to the basement.' Now, what the dickens did that bloke mean?"—Philadelphia Record.

Largest Ice River.

The great antarctic river discovered by Lieutenant Shackleton is the largest ice river known and represents the only visible outflow from the vast ice sheet of the southern continent. This the Beardmore glacier descends 6,000 feet between sandstone hills and is 100 miles long by 50 wide. The Malaspina glacier in Alaska covers nearly 600 square miles. Himalayan glaciers reach a length of twenty miles, and the longest Alpine glacier is sixteen miles.

Harking Back.

"You were telling Miss Gaussip this morning that you were going to be married again, weren't you?" said the shrewd man.

"Why, yes," the widower gasped in surprise. "How did you know?"

"After you left her she began to count on her fingers."—Philadelphia Press.

CORPS OF ROGUES

French Foreign Legion a Unique Military Body.

CRIMINALS FILL ITS RANKS.

It Gathers Recruits From the Social Outcasts of All Grades of All Other Countries—Iron Discipline and Brutal Punishments.

The French Foreign Legion is unique. There is no other military organization like it on earth. It was first raised in 1831 for service in the then newly conquered colony of Algeria. The officers are French officers, of course, but the ranks are made up of outcasts of all social ranks of all other countries. It is understood that recruits are simply seeking refuge from the arm of the civil law. The corps has done excellent work against the Arabs and is always placed in the forefront of the fight.

The Foreign Legion exists but to march. To this one end its whole training is devoted. To fall out on the march is the one unpardonable sin in a legionnaire. The system of marches is brutal. No matter what the distance, it has to be completed in one stage. Forty miles, fifty, sixty—no matter—it is done straight off the reel, with, of course, brief halts for rest. But there is no general halt until the whole distance is completed.

If a legionnaire faints on the march he is tied to a baggage cart which rolls on. He then either has to march or he is dragged along. "Seeing this done for the first time, I thought it brutal, but later I learned to understand the reason for it," said one who had served in its ranks.

The legionnaire who straggles in the desert is lost. Hundreds of men have died a dreadful death in this way. The Arab women pounce upon them, lying helpless in the sand, and, with shrieks of fiendish delight, proceed to torture and mutilate them before killing them outright.

A legionnaire's pay is only a halfpenny a day. True, wine in Algeria costs only a penny a quart, and tobacco threepence to fourpence a pound. But—a halfpenny a day!

His rations, too, are of the scantiest. Two meals a day only are served—breakfast at 10 o'clock in the morning and supper at 4 in the afternoon. Each meal is exactly alike, consisting of a thick soup made up of meat and vegetables, with bread, and every other day a small quantity of wine.

The discipline is ruthless in its severity; the punishments are cruel in the extreme. For grave offenses, like desertion, insubordination or striking a superior officer, death is frequently inflicted, or, failing that, the offender is sent to serve in the penal battalion on the edge of the Sahara desert. This nearly always means a slow and painful death in place of a quick and comparatively painless one.

Minor offenses are punished with from twenty to a hundred days in prison or with "cellule," which is solitary confinement in the dark plus starvation. I have seen strong, robust men so reduced after doing thirty days cellule that they have hardly been able to stand, yet they had to resume their ordinary duties nevertheless.

Not long since two other dreadful forms of punishment were in vogue—the "silo" and the "crapaudine." The silo was just a deep hole in the ground shaped like a funnel, into which the victim was cast. He was given no blanket or other protection from the weather.

The sun beat upon him by day; the cold night mists penetrated to the marrow of his bones. He could not lie down, for the bottom of the silo sloped to a point. He just crouched, a huddled heap, until not infrequently death mercifully relieved him from his sufferings.

The crapaudine consisted in trussing a man as a fowl is trussed, his hands and feet being tied together on his back in such a manner that they formed a sort of semicircle.

This resulted in such frightful cramps that the pain sometimes drove men mad. Both the silo and the crapaudine, however, have now been abolished. But in the field and on the march an offender is still punished by being "spreadeagled" and bound to four stakes driven into the ground.

To escape from these tortures men mutilate themselves, usually by cutting off one or more fingers, or they will purposely make themselves ill. One favorite trick is to take a drink from the sewers under the Arab prison. This loathsome draft almost invariably brings on an attack of typhoid of a peculiarly malignant type.

Others, more enterprising, try to desert, but they rarely succeed. Mostly they meet with dreadful deaths at the hands of the wild Arabs of the desert. The only class of recruits who are treated with special favor are those who have previously been officers in some other army. These are usually made corporals on enlistment and afterward sergeants. But even under the most favorable conditions life in the legion is the life of a dog.

In Its Due Order.

Dr. Thirdly was dividing up his sermon into its appropriate heads one Sunday morning, when a member of the congregation shouted irascibly:

"Meat, man! Give us meat!"

"Well," said Dr. Thirdly promptly, "hold on, then, till I'm done carving."—New York Tribune.

Nothing can bring back the hour of splendor in the grass, of glory in the flower.—Wordsworth.

LISZT AS AN IDOL

The Great Musician Was Petted by English Royalty.

A SOUVENIR OF THE MASTER.

The Singular Memento That Was Sacredly and Secretly Treasured by a Cold, Rigid and Rather Disagreeable Old Englishwoman.

"When I was a very small boy indeed," writes Ford M. Hueffer in Harper's, "when I wore green velveteen clothes, red stockings and long golden curls, thus displaying to an unsympathetic world the fact of my pre-Raphaelite origin, I was taken one day to a very large hall. In front of us was a wooden platform draped all in red. Upon the platform was a grand piano.

"In front of me the first row of the stalls had been taken away, and in place of them there had been put three gilded armchairs, before which was a table covered with a profusion of flowers that drooped and trailed to the ground. Suddenly there was applause—a considerable amount of applause. A lady and gentleman were coming from under the dark entry that led to the artists' room. They were the Prince and Princess of Wales. There was no doubt about that even for a small boy like myself.

"And then there was more applause. What applause! It volleyed, it rolled round the hall. All were on their feet. People climbed on to their chairs, they waved hands, they waved programs, they waved hats, they shouted, for in the dark entrance there had appeared, white and shining, a head with brown and sphinxlike features and white and long hair and the eternal wonderful smile.

"They advanced, these three, amid those tremendous shouts and enthusiasm—the two royal personages leading the master, one holding each hand. They approached the gilded armchairs immediately in front of me, and the prince and princess indicated to the master that he was to sit between them at the table covered with flowers.

"He made little pantomimes of modesty, he drew his hands through their grasp, he walked quickly away from the armchairs, and because I was just behind them he suddenly removed me from my seat and left me standing under all the eyes, solitary in the aisle of the center of the hall, while he sat down. I do not think I was frightened by the eyes, but I know I was terribly frightened by that great brown, aquiline face, with the piercing glance and the mirthless, distant, inscrutable smile.

"And immediately just beside me there began what appeared to be a gentle and courtly wrestling match. A gentleman of the royal suit approached the master. He refused to move. The prince approached the master. He sat indomitably still. Then the princess came and, taking him by the hand, drew him almost by force out of my stall, for it was my stall, after all.

"And when he was once upon his feet, as if to clinch the matter, she suddenly sat down in it herself, and with a sudden touch of good feeling she took me by the hand—the small solitary boy with the golden curls and the red stockings—and sat me upon her lap. I, alas, have no trace of the date on which I sat in a queen's lap, for it was all so very long ago; the king is dead, the master is long since dead, the hall itself is pulled down and has utterly disappeared.

"I had a distant relative—oddly enough an English one, not a German—who married an official of the court of Weimar and became a lady in waiting on the grand duchess. As far as I know, there was nothing singularly sentimental about this lady. When I knew her she was cold, rigid and rather disagreeable. She had always about her a peculiar and disagreeable odor, and when she died a few years ago it was discovered that she wore round her neck a sachet, and in this sachet was a half smoked cigar.

"This was a relic of Franz Liszt. He had begun to smoke it many years before at a dinner which she had given, and, he having put it down unfinished, she had at once seized upon it and had worn it upon her person ever since. This sounds inexplicable and incredible, but there it is."

Settling a Bill.

When Andrew Jackson lived at Salisbury, N. C., he once attended court at Rockford, then the county seat of Surry, and left without paying his bill, which was duly charged up against him on the hotel register, which seems to have been the hotel ledger at that time, and so stood for many years. When the news of the victory of the 8th of January, 1815, was received in this then remote section the old landlord turned back the leaves of the register, took his pen and wrote under the account against Andrew Jackson, "Settled in full by the battle of New Orleans."

She Meant Well.

The late Sir Wilfrid Lawson, the rigid apostle of temperance, while on a week end visit made the acquaintance of a sharp young lady of seven, to whom, on leaving, he said: "Now, my dear, we have been talking some time. I am sure you have no idea who I am."

"Oh, yes, I have," the little missy replied. "You are the celebrated drunkard."—London Graphic.

WORKING WITH GOLD.

Factories In Which Dark Colored Clothes Must Be Worn.

Light suits of clothes are not favored in factories where work is done on gold. In fact, in many such factories a dark suit of clothes is absolutely required, and even a light waistcoat may lose a man a job. The reason for this is that any stray grains of gold that may get on the clothing can easily be caught on a dark suit, while they might get away from the establishment if light clothes were worn.

That such a rule was enforced among gold workers one man learned recently when a Bohemian gold beater applied to him for a helping hand. The Bohemian said that he had only recently come to this country, that he had had a chance to obtain a good job at his trade, but that the place had been refused him because he turned up with a light coat and waistcoat on, and they were the only clothes he had.

The man whom he approached was struck by the story and offered to help him out if it proved true. He went to a downtown factory with him and found out that the man could have the job if he presented himself within an hour with the proper clothes on. Two dollars enabled the man to rig himself out in the dark coat and waistcoat to go with his dark trousers, and, sure enough, he got the job.

"You may think this strange," said the man at the factory, "but it means quite a little to us. Every man's clothing is carefully examined when he leaves here at night and the gold brushed off whenever we see any on his clothing.

"It is impossible to hide even tiny grains on a dark background, but take a mixed or a light suit and we might easily lose quite an amount of gold, and gold isn't anything you want to lose even in small quantities."—New York Sun.

REFUSED TO OBEY.

Major Butler Carried His Obstinacy Right Into His Coffin.

Many amusing stories are told of the great formality blended with a humorous brusqueness and independence which characterized early Revolutionary days. An incident of camp life is related by the author of "Romance and Realism of the Southern Gulf Coast."

In 1798 the first United States troops that came down the Mississippi were quartered at Fort Adams. General Wilkinson, Colonel Hamtramck, Major Butler, Captain Green and other officers were merry over their punch one night, and the general by some accident got his cue burned off. Angry at the laugh which followed his mishap, he next day issued an order forbidding any officer to appear with a cue. Obedient to orders, all the officers but Major Butler cut off their cues.

"The vain old prig!" said the major. "I'll see him hanged before I cut off my cue to gratify him!" And he boldly appeared without changing the style of his hairdressing.

The major was put under arrest, but he declared obstinately that he would spend the rest of his life in prison before he would comply with such a silly command. Soon afterward he was taken very ill, and, realizing that he was at the point of death, he gave instructions for his burial, which he knew would be witnessed by the whole command.

"Bore a hole," said he, "through the bottom of my coffin, right under my head, and let my cue come through it, that the old general may see that even when dead I refuse to obey his order."

And these directions were literally carried out.

Where Waltzing Is Barred.

German court regulations forbid waltzing. This veto dates back to 1859, when the Empress Frederick, then crown princess, was tripped up by her partner in a waltz and fell at the feet of her mother-in-law. The Empress Augusta, a despot on the score of etiquette, forbade the inclusion of waltzes thenceforth in all balls at the New palace. So far the kaiser has resisted the pressure brought to bear on him to revive the waltz. Dancing at the Berlin court always opens with a polonaise, and the rest of the program is filled with quadrilles and polkas, the schottishes and the mazurkas.

Truth a Trouble Maker.

A West Philadelphia man and his wife have separated. None of their friends know why, but one, being curious, asked the husband:

"What was the trouble between you and your wife?"

"Oh, nothing much. She bought a new hat for $20 and asked me what I thought of it, and I told her; that's all."—Philadelphia Times.

Enterprise.

"What would you do if I should shoot myself?" demanded the ardent suitor.

"I'd sign up in vaudeville immediately," replied the actress. "I wouldn't have time to get a play written. These shooting sensations soon fizzle out."—Kansas City Journal.

In Later Life.

"I see you are doing a good many things now that once you would have been shocked at."

"Well, I make up for it by being shocked at a good many things that I once did."—Pittsburg Post.

"So she refused you."

Strip Upon Which the Starry White Coffee Flower Blooms.

It is only on the world's waistband that the starry white coffee flower blooms. Only between the fifteenth degrees, north and south of the equator, can the tree be successfully grown and on those altitudes which are between the 3,000 to 5,000 feet mark. Left by itself the plant will grow to a tree twenty-five feet in altitude; but, as man is not usually over two yardsticks high, the bearing shrubs are kept by pruning under a maximum height of ten feet, so that they can be easily handled.

The seeds are thickly sown in the nursery, but as soon as babyhood has passed and the tender sprouts are able to bear a breath of wind or changes of temperature they are transplanted into orchards. They are set pretty far apart so that while young and not yet bearing the soil may be utilized with parallel rows of corn, bananas or plantain. A thrifty shrub grows berries when three years old and continues to bear during twenty years from three to six pounds of beans. Its glossy green leaves remind one of the laurel, and the fragrant, white, five petaled flowers—the perfume varying in different countries and localities—grow in clusters of from three to ten each in the axils of the branches. Well regulated streams of water run through the orchard to secure lusty growth, but when the berries begin to ripen the water is turned off lest the fruit be too succulent. The twin beans or nutlets ripen within a mass of pulp that looks like a dark red cherry, or in tint and size rather like a cranberry. This pulp, when perfectly ripe, is delicious to the taste, but when dried it is taken off either by hand or, as is usually the case in present day operations in Brazil, by most modern machinery.—St. Louis Republic.

WORKED TOO HARD.

Why David Graham Phillips Once Lost a Situation.

People who thought that the late David Graham Phillips had a rapid, fluent and even at times overhasty pen were very far from the truth, says a writer in the Bookman. Mr. Phillips himself admitted freely that from first to last he always found literary composition a labor—a labor of love that he could not have shirked if he would, but none the less a labor.

A story which he sometimes told at his own expense illustrates this. It was shortly after his graduation from Princeton that he sought work as a reporter and finally by offering his services for nothing obtained a chance to show what he could do on the leading daily in a western city.

The weather was cold and the temperature of the office somewhere below 60 degrees, yet hour after hour Mr. Phillips would sit at his desk with the moisture rolling from his brow in the anguish of trying to make literature from such material as "Yesterday afternoon John Jones fell off a stepladder and dislocated his shoulder."

One day—it was the tenth of Mr. Phillips' services—the presiding genius of the paper happened to pass through the city room and stood for some minutes watching him.

"Who is that young man?" he presently asked the city editor.

The latter explained.

"Get rid of him!" came the curt edict.

"But," expostulated the city editor, "we are getting him for nothing."

"I don't care," rejoined the higher power. "I don't care if he is paying for the privilege. Get rid of him at once. I can't bear to see any human being work so hard."

The Scream of Ennui.

A dog howls when he is lonely, a cat wauls (the word must be right, for it comes from "caterwaul") because of some combative or amative impulse, but a parrot screams through sheer boredom. I sometimes think it is the only creature that shares with us that secondary curse which followed our ejection from Eden—ennui. And I know that if Noah fed his animals well and if they had plenty of room for exercise the only creatures who rebelled vocally against the dire tedium of voyage and the creatures who made the most noise, bar none, were the two little papingoes, as our forefathers used to call them.—Atlantic.

Slipper Day In Holland.

There is a curious festival called Slipper day celebrated in Holland. Slipper day in the Netherlands is the one day in the year in which the Dutchwoman claims superiority over her husband. On that day she rules him to her heart's content, and he generally obeys good humoredly enough—that is, unless she is one of those ladies not unknown in Holland or in any other country who aspire to complete rule over their unhappy partners throughout the year.

Badly Handicapped.

"How did your show go on the road?"

"Bad. We were fearfully handicapped by the plays we selected."

"Eh? Why, I thought the dramas in your repertory were the finest you could secure."

"Yes; but we couldn't play 'em."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CHAPTER IX.

THE MOTIONLESS FIGURE.

"THE coat is here, too," whispered Sweetwater after a moment of considerate silence. "We had better lock it now, had we not, till you make up your mind what to do with this conclusive bit of evidence?"

"Yes, lock it. I'm not quite myself, Sweetwater. I shall never survive the strain if"— He turned away.

Sweetwater carefully returned the hat to its peg, turned the key in the door and softly followed his superior back into the dining room and thence to their former retreat.

"I can see that it's likely to be a dreadful business," he ventured to remark as the two stood face to face again. "But we've no choice. Facts are facts, and we've got to make the best of them. You mean me to go on?"

"Go on?"

"Following up the clews which you have yourself given me? I've only finished with one; there's another"—

"The bottles?"

"Yes, the bottles. I believe that I shall not fail there if you'll give me a little time. I'm a stranger in town, you remember, and cannot be expected to move as fast as a local detective."

"Sweetwater, we have but one duty—to follow both clews as far as they will take us. Only be careful. Remember the evidence against Ranelagh. You will have to forge an exceedingly strong chain to hold your own against the facts which have brought this recreant lover to book. You see—oh, I wish that poor girl could get ease!" he impetuously cried as "Lila, Lila!" rang again through the house.

"She is the only one who is wholly innocent in this whole business. Consider her at every point. Her life is invaluable to every one concerned. But she must not be roused to the fact—not yet. Nor must he be startled either; you know whom I mean. Quiet does it, Sweetwater. Quiet and a seeming deference to his wishes as the present head of the house."

"Is the place his? Has Miss Cumberland made a will?"

"Her will will be read tomorrow. For tonight Arthur Cumberland's position here is the position of a master."

"I will respect it, sir, up to all reasonable bounds. I don't think he meditates giving any trouble. He's not at all impressed by our presence. All he seems to care about is what his sister may be led to say in her delirium."

"That's how you look at it?" The coroner's tone was one of gloom. Then after a moment of silence: "You may call my carriage, Sweetwater. I can do nothing further here today."

Sweetwater threw open the door, but his wistful look did not escape the older man's eye.

"You're not ready to go? Wish to search the house perhaps. It has already been done in a general way."

"I wish to do it thoroughly."

The coroner sighed.

"I should be wrong to stand in your way. Get your warrant and the house is yours. But remember the sick girl."

"That's why I wish to do the job myself."

"You're a good fellow, Sweetwater. The keys tell the tale—the keys and the hat. If the former had been left in the clubhouse and the latter found without the mark set on it by the mechanic's wife Ranelagh's chances would look as slim today as they did immediately after the event. But with things as they are he may well rest easily tonight. The clouds are lifting for him."

The coroner gone, Sweetwater made his way to the room where he had last seen Mr. Clifton. He found it empty and was soon told by Hexford that the lawyer had left. He followed Hexford upstairs.

"I'd like to see the girl and I'd like to see the brother when he thought no one was watching him," he said.

"I wonder what she meant by that wild cry of 'Tear it open! See if her heart is there!' Tear what open—the coffin?" said Hexford.

"Of course. What else could she have meant?"

"Well, delirium is a queer thing; makes a fellow feel creepy all over. I don't reckon on my nights here."

"Hexford, help me to a peep. I've got a difficult job before me, and I need all the aid I can get."

"Oh, there's no trouble about that! Walk boldly along; he won't notice"—

"He won't notice?"

"No; he notices nothing but what comes from the sickroom." He listens all the time."

"Does the nurse know this?"

"The nurse is a puzzler."

"How so?"

"Half nurse and half— But go see for yourself. Here's a package to take in—medicine from the drug store. Tell her there was no one else to bring it up. She'll show no surprise."

Muttering his thanks, Sweetwater seized the proffered package and hastened with it down the hall. He had been as far as the turn before, but now he passed the turn to find just as expected, a closed door on the left and an open alcove on the right. The door led into Miss Cumberland's room. The alcove, circular in shape and lighted by several windows, projected from the rear of the extension and had for its outlook the stable and the huge sycamore tree growing beside it.

Sweetwater could not see Arthur's face. But his drooping head, rigid with desperate thinking; his relaxed hand closed around the neck of a decanter, which nevertheless he did not lift, made upon Sweetwater an impression which nothing he saw afterward ever quite effaced.

"When I come back that whisky will be half gone," thought he and lingered to see the tumbler filled and the first draft taken.

But, no. The hand slowly unclasped and fell away from the decanter, his head sank forward until his chin rested on his breast, and a sigh, startling to Sweetwater, fell from his lips. Hexford was right—only one thing could arouse him.

Sweetwater now tried that thing. He knocked softly on the sickroom door.

This reached the ear oblivious to all else. Young Cumberland started to his feet, and for a moment Sweetwater saw again the heavy features which an hour before had produced such a repulsive effect upon him in the rooms below. Then the nerveless figure sank again into place with the same constraint in its lines and the same dejection.

Sweetwater's hand, lifted in repetition of his knock, hung suspended. He had not expected quite such indifference as this. It upset his calculations just a trifle.

The door was opened to him this time. As it swung back he saw first a burst of rosy color as a room paneled in exquisite pink burst upon his sight, then the great picture of his life—the bloodless features of Carmel calmed for the moment into sleep.

Sweetwater gazed at the winsome brown head over the nurse's shoulder and felt that for him a new and important factor had entered into this case with his recognition of this woman's great beauty. How deep a factor he was far from suspecting or he would not have met the nurse's eye with quite so cheery and self confident a smile.

"Excuse the intrusion," he said. "We thought you might need these things. Hexford signed for them."

"I'm obliged to you. Are you—one of them?" she sharply asked.

"Would it disturb you if I were? I hope not. I've no wish to seem intrusive."

"What do you want? Something, I know. Give it a name before there's a change there."

She nodded toward the bed, and Sweetwater took advantage of the moment to scrutinize more closely the nurse herself. She was a robust, fine looking woman, producing an impression of capability united to kindness. Strength of mind and rigid attendance to duty dominated the kindness, however.

"I want another good look at your patient, and I want your confidence since you and I may have to see much of each other before this matter is ended. You asked me to speak plainly and I have done so."

"You are from headquarters?"

"Coroner Perry sent me." Throwing back his coat, he showed his badge. "The coroner has returned to his office. He was quite upset by the outcry which came from this room at an unhappy moment during the funeral."

"I know. It was my fault. I opened the door just for an instant, and in that instant my patient broke through her torpor and spoke."

She had drawn him in by this time and, after another glance at her patient, softly closed the door behind him.

"I have nothing to report," said she, "but the one sentence everybody heard."

Sweetwater took in the little memorandum book and pencil which hung at her side and understood her position and extraordinary amenability to his wishes. Unconsciously a low exclamation escaped him. He was young and had not yet sunk the man entirely in the detective.

His eye went wandering all over the room as he spoke until it fell upon a peculiar looking cabinet or closet let into the wall directly opposite the bed. "What's that?" he asked.

"I don't know. I can't make it out, and I don't like to ask."

Sweetwater examined it for a moment from where he stood, then crossed over and scrutinized it more particularly. It was a unique specimen. What it lacked in height—it could not have measured more than a foot from the bottom to the top—it made up in length, which must have exceeded five feet. The doors, of which it had two, were both tightly locked, but as they were made of transparent glass the objects behind them were quite visible. It was the nature of these objects which made the mystery. The longer Sweetwater examined them the less he understood the reason for their collection, much less for their preservation in a room which in all other respects expressed the quintessence of taste.

At one end he saw a stuffed canary, not perched on a twig, but lying prone on its side. Near it was a doll, with scorched face and limbs half consumed. Next this the broken pieces of a china bowl and what looked like the torn remnants of some very fine lace. Further along his eye lighted on a young girl's bonnet, exquisite in color and nicety of material, but crushed out of all shape and only betraying its identity by its dangling strings.

"Some childish nonsense," he remarked and moved toward the door. "The servants will be coming back, and I had rather not be found here. You'll see me again. I cannot tell just when. Perhaps you may want to send for me. If so, my name is Sweetwater."

His hand was on the knob, and he was almost out of the room when he started and looked back. A violent change in the patient had occurred.

Disturbed by his voice or by some inner pulsation of the fever which devoured her, Carmel had risen from the pillow and now sat, staring straight before her, with every feature working and lips opened as if to speak. Sweetwater held his breath, and the nurse leaped toward her and gently encircled her with protecting arms.

Flinging out her hand, she cried out loudly, just as she had cried an hour before:

"Break it open! Break the glass and look in. Her heart should be there. Her heart, her heart!"

"Go or I cannot quiet her!" ordered the nurse, and Sweetwater turned to obey.

But a new obstacle offered. The brother had heard this cry and now stood in the doorway.

"Who are you?" he impatiently demanded, surveying Sweetwater in sudden anger.

"I brought up the drugs," was the quiet explanation of the ever ready detective. "I didn't mean to alarm the young lady, and I don't think I did. It's the fever, sir, which makes her talk so wildly."

"We want no strangers here," was young Cumberland's response. "Remember, nurse, no strangers." His tone was actually peremptory.

Sweetwater observed him in real astonishment as he slid by and made his quiet escape. He was still more astonished when, on glancing toward the alcove, he perceived that, contrary to his own prognostication, the whisky stood as high in the decanter as before.

CHAPTER X.

HELEN SURPRISES SWEETWATER.

THE servants returning from the funeral drove up just as Sweetwater reached the lower floor. He was at the side door when they came in, and a single glance convinced him that all had gone off decorously at the grave and that nothing further had occurred during their absence to disturb them.

He followed them as they filed away into the kitchen and, waiting till the men had gone about their work, turned his attention to the girls, who stood about very much as if they did not know just what to do with themselves.

"Sit, ladies," said he, drawing up chairs quite as if he were doing the honors of the house. "You're all upset, you are, by what Mr. Cumberland said in such an unbecoming way at the funeral. He'd like to strangle Mr. Ranelagh! Why couldn't he wait for the sheriff? It looks as if that gentleman would have the job, all right."

"Oh, don't!" wailed out one of the girls, the impressionable, warm hearted Maggie. "The horrors of this house will kill me. I can't stand it a minute longer. I'll go—I'll go tomorrow."

"You won't; you're too kind hearted to leave Mr. Cumberland and his sister in their desperate trouble," Sweetwater put in, with a decision as suggestive of admiration as he dared to assume.

Her eyes filled, and she said no more. Sweetwater shifted his attention to Helen. Working around by her side, he managed to drop these words into her ear:

"She talks most, but she doesn't feel her responsibilities any more than you do. I've had my experience with women, and you're of the sort that stays."

She rolled her eyes toward him in a slow, surprised way that would have abashed most men.

"I don't know your name or your business here," said she, "but I do know that you take a good deal upon yourself when you say what I shall do or shan't do. I don't even know myself."

With the most innocent air in the world he launched forth in a tirade against the man then in custody, as though his guilt were an accepted fact and nothing but the formalities of the law stood between him and his final doom. "It must make you all feel queer," he wound up, "to think you have waited on him and seen him tramping about these rooms for months just as if he had no wicked feelings in his heart and meant to marry Miss Cumberland—not to kill her."

"Oh, oh!" Maggie sobbed out. "And a perfect gentleman he was too. I can't believe no bad of him. He was not like"— Her breath caught and so suddenly that Sweetwater was always convinced that the more cautious Helen had twitched her by her skirt. "Like—like other gentlemen who came here. It was a kind word he had or a smile. I—I"— She made no attempt to finish, but bounded to her feet, pulling up the more sedate Helen with her. "Let's go," she whispered. "I'm afeared of the man."

The other yielded and began to cross the floor behind the impetuous Maggie.

Sweetwater summoned up his courage.

"One moment," he prayed. "Will you not tell me before you go whether the candlestick I have noticed on the dining room mantel is not one of a pair?"

"Yes; there were two—once," said Helen, resisting Maggie's effort to drag her out through the open door.

"Once," smiled Sweetwater; "by which you mean three days ago."

A lowering of her head and a sudden make for the door.

Sweetwater changed his tone to one of simple inquiry.

"And was that where they always stood, the pair of them, one on each end of the dining room mantel?"

She nodded, involuntarily perhaps, but decisively.

Sweetwater hid his disappointment. The room mentioned was a thoroughfare for the whole family. Any member of it could have taken the candlestick.

"I'm obliged to you," said he and might have ventured further had she given him the opportunity. But she was too near the door to resist the temptation of flight. In another moment she was gone, and Sweetwater found himself alone with his reflections.

The moon shone that night, much to Sweetwater's discomforture.

The house presented an equally dolorous and forsaken appearance, and in the stable it was no better. Zadok had bought an evening paper and was seeking solace from its columns. Sweetwater had attempted the sociable, but had been met by a decided rebuff.

Soon Sweetwater realized that his work was over for the night and planned to leave. But there was one point to be settled first. Was there any other means of exit from these grounds save that offered by the ordinary driveway?

He had an impression that in one of his strolls about he had detected the outlines of a door in what looked like a high brick wall in the extreme rear. If so it were well worth his while to know where that door led. It might be as well to try the lock, but he would have to cross a very wide strip of moonlight in order to do so, and he feared to attract attention to his extreme inquisitiveness.

Advancing in a quiet, sidelong way he had, he laid his hand on the small knob above the lock and quickly turned it. The door was unlocked and swung under his gentle push. An alleyway opened before him leading to what appeared to be another residence street. He was about to test the truth of this surmise when he heard a step behind him and, turning, encountered the heavy figure of the coachman advancing toward him with a key in his hand.

Zadok was of an easy turn, but he had been sorely tried that day, and his limit had been reached.

"You snooper!" he bawled. "What do you want here? Won't the run of the house content you? Come! I want to lock that door. It's my last duty before going to bed."

"YOU SNOOPER!" HE BAWLED.

Sweetwater assumed the innocent.

"And I was just going this way. It looks like a short road into town. It is, isn't it?"

"No! Yes!" growled the other. "Whichever it is, it isn't your road tonight. That's private property, sir. The alley you see belongs to our neighbors. No one passes through there but myself and"—

He caught himself in time with a sullen grunt which may have been the result of fatigue or of that latent instinct of loyalty which is often the most difficult obstacle a detective has to encounter.

"And Mr. Ranelagh, I suppose you would say?" was Sweetwater's easy finish.

No answer. The coachman simply locked the door and put the key in his pocket.

Sweetwater made no effort to deter him. More than that, he desisted from further questions, though he was dying to ask where this key was kept at night and whether it had been in its usual place on the evening of the murder. He had gone far enough, he thought. Another step and he might arouse this man's suspicion, if not his enmity. But he did not leave the shadows into which he again receded until he had satisfied himself that the key went into the stable with the coachman, where it probably remained for this night at least.

It was after 10 when Sweetwater re-entered the house to say good night to Hexford. He found him on watch in the upper hall, and the man, Clarke, below. He had a word with the former:

"What is the purpose of the little door in the wall back of the stable?"

"HER HEART SHOULD BE THERE. HER HEART, HER HEART!"

WAR WARM WORK

The Phrase "Heat of Battle" Not a Mere Figure of Speech.

FIGHTING FIRES THE BLOOD.

An Old Veteran's Story of an Early Morning Attack In Zero Weather and the Change the Skirmish Wrought In His Half Frozen Body.

"The expression 'heat of battle' is more than a mere poetic figure of speech descriptive of the fierce glow of emotion the soldier feels when in the midst of conflict," said a southern soldier who was an officer under Colonel Mosby. "It describes exactly the sensible, physical condition the soldier feels, no matter what the temperature may be.

"That this is true was evidenced by my own experience during the war between the states. It was in February, 1864, and Colonel Mosby, with some hundred of us, was camped near Upperville, a village in Virginia about thirty miles south of Harpers Ferry. Late one afternoon our leader received a dispatch from General Lee to make a forced march that night and attack a body of Federal troops that was stationed on Loudon heights, which overlook Harpers Ferry. The weather was bitter cold, the coldest that had been known in that section for many years. The mercury was coquetting around zero, a six inch fall of snow, half melted and frozen again, made the roads almost impassable, and a stiff north wind, added to these other evils, made the outlook for a pleasant dash of thirty miles a most dismally improbable one.

"It was about sunset when, muffled to the eyes against the biting frost and bitter wind, our column left camp at Upperville. For the first ten miles our squadron, made up of veterans inured to all manner of hardships, did not suffer much, and occasionally some one would even essay a joke. But in the second ten miles the cold, that had slowly eaten its way through overcoat and jacket and shirt, began to bite into our bodies. To restore life to our numb legs we would take our feet from the stirrups and let them hang until the circulation was restored—an old trick with those compelled to ride much in the cold—and we would keep our hands and arms in some measure warm by beating them against our bodies or clapping them severely together.

"The second ten was bad enough, I say, but the last was—well, a polar nightmare. The vitality seemed to be frozen out of man and beast. For hours the horses stumbled through the snow bearing a troop as silent as the dead save for an occasional thumping of some poor devil's half frozen arms against his side as he sought to restore life to the deadened limbs. When I took my feet out of the stirrups to help the circulation I would have to take my hands and lift my legs up to get the feet back in place, so lost to all sensation were they.

"At length about 3 o'clock in the morning we saw the lights of the enemy's picket fires and could distinguish the muffled forms of the sentries as they paced their beats. There was a small strip of woods that ran to within a hundred or less yards of the Federal camp, and in this we formed for the attack. My hands were so cold that I was unable to cock the hammers of my revolvers with my thumb, but was compelled to effect it with my teeth, holding the pistol between my numbed fists and drawing back the hammer by gripping it in my teeth and pulling it back until it caught.

"At length all was in readiness. As I sat there, barely able to grasp my revolvers, the 'Charge!' rang out, and the next moment we were in the midst of the enemy, who were too astounded at an attack on such a bitter night to offer much resistance and for the most part fled down to Harpers Ferry to the main body. Some of them, however, put up a stout fight for men awakened from warm sleep to fight to the death in the bitter night air, and for a couple of minutes we had all we could do, but it was soon over, and we were in possession of the camp.

"When I came to myself I found I was sitting with one leg thrown over the pummel of my saddle, my overcoat and jacket flung wide open, while my shirt, opened to the last button, allowed a grateful zero zephyr to play upon my bare sweating breast. In my hand, from which I had pulled the glove, moist with sweat, I was holding my hat, with which I was vigorously fanning myself.

"And less than five minutes before I had been so chilled that had I been in a comfortable house with a physician at hand he would have filled me full of hot drinks, wrapped me in blankets and kept me in bed a couple of days.

"No," concluded the veteran, "the 'heat of battle' is something more than a mere figure of speech."—New York Times.

Pills to Prevent Earthquakes.

"I remember," says Addison in the two hundred and fortieth Tatler, "when our whole island was shaken with an earthquake some years ago there was an impudent mountebank who sold pills which, as he told the country people, were 'very good against an earthquake.'"—Letter in London Saturday Review.

I've made it a practice to put all my worries down in the bottom of my heart, then set on the lid an' smile.—Mrs. Wiggs.

SERMON ON WOMEN

"Women and the Kingdom," was the subject of Rev. J. Y. Broek's sermon at Trinity Reformed church, last evening, it being a special discourse to the Ladies' Christian Work Society, which was celebrating its thirtieth anniversary. The members of the society attended the service in a body, and Mr. Broek not only congratulated them, but also gave some wholesome advice for every member of his church. Among other things he said:

"The church at Philippi was in a flourishing condition. She had been very kind to Paul. Women were especially active and full of good works in their church. They were of the same mind in the Lord and the spirit of mutual assistance and friendship was dominant. The particular ministry of these women must have been visiting the sick, hospitality, social activity and the performance of minor details of work that relieved considerably the labors of Paul.

"The relation of women to the Kingdom is very important today. While Christianity has been elevating women, we find she has taken an increased interest in the church and from a human standpoint. We say the work of the Kingdom of Christ would be greatly retarded without her help. The Kingdom for which we are laboring is great in its origin, character, extent, permanence and future of its activities.

"The special law of this Kingdom is that members should love one another with brotherly love. We should recognize all Christians as brothers, entitled to the same privileges and blessings. Another law is that every member should labor according to his ability.

"The present activity of women in the Kingdom is marked and is an incentive of immense value and power. More than one-third of the entire force on the foreign field is composed of godly women. Women's organizations at home have been rapid in growth, exerting such a wide influence, creating an impulse so forceful that no other agency in church work can compare with it.

"If religion is worth anything to us, it is to teach us to be kind and friendly one with another and with all classes and conditions of people. What a person is in everyday life, counts most of all. The church should have social activities. Of course, we go to extremes with these things. Some people say that if we have a church supper, create a social atmosphere and mingle as brethren, we are turning the church into a restaurant business. The person who sees nothing but financial gain in these social activities has an extremely short-sighted vision. I would rather have my church turned into a restaurant business than into a religious vaudeville. The financial consideration is not the primal one.

"The church needs social activities, because she should be the common meeting ground of poor and rich. The curse of this age is snobbishness. How unChrist-like that some people will not speak to each other, unless they have so much prestige or wealth. What a splendid opportunity for men and women of culture and refinement to show at the social affairs of the church what a true Christian gentleman or woman should be. If in our churches we would lay aside our aristocratic ideas and work side by side with a poorer member of the church, we are exhibiting in now small measure the spirit of Jesus. Christ never recognized poor or rich as a class. He only thought of their need as individuals.

"Every church needs more men and women of the Dorcas spirt. Every church should be a church of a hearty welcome, that would say none too rich, none too poor to enter this church family, but that we are willing to help one another."

During the service, Miss S. Etta Raybert, soprano soloist, sang effectively "Take My Life and Let it Be Consecrated."

OPEN AIR TENEMENTS SUBJECT OF LECTURE

The lecture on "Open Stair Tenements," which will be delivered by Champlain L. Riley before the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday night will touch one of the vital questions that confront all rapidly growing communities. "Tenement houses creep in unobserved at first when two famillies instead of one occupy a single dwelling house," said one man interested in the subject today. "From that the step is easy to three and four families in a single house. Plainfield has many tenements of this kind and this spring blocks of two-story frome tenements have sprung up in several parts of town.

"Tenement houses we must have! Shall they be good or bad? Many Plainfielders have for several years been watching the development of 'open stair tenements' in New York city and more recently in Hoboken, where Mrs. Caroline B. Alexander and Richard Stevens are building tenements of this type. It remained for Charles W. McCutchen and Geo. L. Babcock to introduce the idea to Plainfield.

"Henry Atterbury Smith, architect, of New York, first built this type of building for Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt to house famillies having at least one case of tuberculosis. The Open Stair Tenement Company has developed the same plan on a commercial basis. The plan secures more rooms to the lot than any other plan in existence and has attracted much attention among speculative builders on account of its high paying qualities. There is direct sunlight in every room and most of the apartments have through ventilation from one room to another. It is hoped that this plan will find favor not only in Plainfield, but in other communities throughout the State."

NEWARK AUTO AGENT WANTED BY THE COURT.

After being arrested on a charge of exceeding the speed limit, Frank L. Apgar, of Newark, an agent for the Fiat company, in that city, failed to appear this morning, when the case was called by Judge DeMeza and the police were instructed to lock Apgar up if he appears before next Monday morning, to which date the court postponed the hearing. The arrest was made by Patrolman Safiron, who declared that Apgar was travelling at the rate of 30 miles an hour on West Front street.

LECTURE ON PALESTINE BY REV. DR. HERRING

In his sermon preceding the lecture on Palestine, which was the second in a series, Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, declared that the recent report relating to the discovery of the Ark of the Covenant beneath the Mosque of Omar was erroneous, as history has shown that the Ark was buried beneath the Temple of Solomon. "Other things of antiquity may have been unearthed," he said, "but not the Ark of the Covenant."

Dr. Herring took his large audience from Jerusalem to the Mount of Olives and Mount Zion, explaining from a map of Palestine hte routes usually travelled by tourists and the care necessary to be taken to avoid clashes with the Turks. The two principal thoroughfares in Jerusalem are David and Damascus streets. They are broad in comparison with the others and have some modern buildings on them. Views of ancient and modern Jerusalem were thrown on the screen and interested a large audience.

COUNTRY CLUB GOLF SEASON HAS BEGUN

GREAT PIN ARTISTS

Plainfield's bowlers made some of the professionals of the country look up and take notice on Saturday night at the Grand Central Palace alleys, in Brooklyn, when with a five man team, and with the two-man team from Campbell's alleys, they made some remarkable scores. Accompanying the Plainfield delegation were the members of Watchung No. 2 team and a bunch of rooters. Francis J. Blatz, a member of the Watchung team, put a scare into the 350 teams on the alleys when he scored 275 in the last game of the two-man series. Had it not been for the use of new pins which failed to fall after rolling about for some seconds, Mr. Blatz would have broken the record with a perfect score. Chauncey Stout also came within an ace of doing the same trick, but the pins would not fall. The tournament will be finished tonight and at present Blatz and Stout stand tenth in the 350 teams, while the five-man team occupies twentieth place. Nash and Campbell also got into the money with their score of 1113 in the second series of games.

The active season was begun at the Park Golf Club, Saturday, and a large field was attratted to the popular course which had been put in first-class condition for the day. Those in charge of the tea were Miss Moody and Miss Parker, and they were assisted by other women.

The initial competition was the play for the President's and Golf Club cups, handicap and scratch competition, which will be continued every Saturday on the point system. WATCHUNG FIREMEN BEAT GUN CLUB

"Mayor" W. de La R. Anderson saved the day for Watchung firemen on Saturday afternoon when he lined out a three bagger in the sixth inning with the bases full. This wallop cleared the bases and tied the score and it was necessary for two more sessions to be played before victory perched upon the banners of the smoke-eaters. Their opponents were the Watchung Gun Club team and some surprising plays were made and it is certain that there is a brigade of stiff men going about the township today. Everybody in the township who was not otherwise engaged attended the big game and there was something doing every minute.

LaMaire, who pitched for the gun club, struck out five men, and Demler, who was on the mound for the firemen, had nine strikeouts to his credit. The final score was 12 to 11.

FORESTERS GATHERED AT TORONTO, CANADA

Henry Hansen, of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, who was one of the New Jersey representatives to the triennial convention of the supreme court held at Toronto, Can., returned home Saturday evening. All the supreme officers were re-elected and it was decided to consolidate the offices of the escretary and treasurer, Robert T. Mathison being elected to that position, succeeding Thomas Lawless, who died. The officers are as follows: Supreme Chief Renger, Elliott G. Stephenson; supreme secretary and treasurer, R. T. Mathison; supreme physician, T. Millman; supreme councilor, J. Hunter.

Among the many important matters up for consideration were the establishment of a million dollar endowment fund for the orphan members. It was so arranged that those who have lost boith their father and mother, be cared for at the Home and those who have lost a father will be aided from a fund established for that purpose. It was also decided to establish a tuberculosis camp in California to be known as "Mt. Stephenson," and will be an addition to the sanitorium at Rainbow Lake, Adirondacks, which comprises 1,500 acres and cares for 57 patients at the present time.

The financial reports were most satisfactory and showed that an improvement of $35,00,000 had been made during the past three years, and it was found that the present rates of dues and assessments would be amply sufficient to successfully finance the order. A banquet was given May 2, in the assembly hall of the twelve story building owned by the order. Among the many guests of note was the lieutenant-governor, who made an excellent address. During the evening a silver set was presented to Supreme Chief Ranger Elliot G. Stephenson.

'OPEN SHOP' HERE

Local contractors whose masons and hod-carriers are on a strike for higher pay, formally declared an "open shop" Saturday night. This means that men from other cities will be employed in the strikers' places and in consequence advertisements for this class of workers were placed in Newark, Easton, Pa., Perth Amboy and Philadelphia papers today. All men engaged will be retained permanently, it is said.

The lock-out came after a conference Saturday between the bosses and Robert Nethercroft, of Portchester, N. Y., representative from the International Union of Masons and Bricklayers. The employers were firm in their determination to remain out for $5.20 a day instead of $4.80 for the masons, and $3 instead of $2.80 for the hod-carriers. The bosses then drew up the "open shop" declaration, sixteen of them affixing their signatures.

Nethercroft met the journeymen, Saturday night, but the latter only reiterated their former statement. They asserted that conditions warranted the increase, that the scale asked is paid in other cities and that they would not return under the old rate.

One of the journeymen said today that there are a large number of contracts underway or about to be started soon, and he doubted very much if enough men could be secured from outside to take care of them.

Somebody made a complaint about the scanty attire of the two men and the borough cops arrested both. They were arraigned before Recorder Dolliver, this morning, and after a lecture on the American Sabbath and propriety, were fined $1 each.

Whiskey Leads to Arrest.

The finding of a case of whiskey proved the undoing of a gang of thieves who broke into the freight station of the New Jersey Central at Bound Brook, Saturday night. County Detective George Totten and two deputies found four members of the gang helplessly drunk in the woods near Middlebrook, a mile from the scene of the robbery. They had in their possession several bottles of whiskey. Three of the gang got away. The quartet is being held on a charge of robbery.

Case Settled for $2,500.

Mrs. Emma Langefeld, who recovered a verdict of $5,000 for the death of her son, Ernest Langefeld, in an accident at the Hall Printing Press Company plant at Dunellen, has accepted $2,500 in settlement, Judge Lyon in the Middlesex County Court, stating that if that sum was not accepted, he would grant a new trial. Langefeld was killed about a year ago while installing a sprinkler system at the press works, when he was run down and killed by a traveling crane.

THE DAILY PRESS.

Plainfield, N. J., May 8, 1911.

The public generally is provoked because of the apparent activity of those entrusted with the city's water problem's solution. What the people demand is that the question be decided by the Common Council one way or the other and that without any further procrastination. What plausible excuse there is for failing to either renew the contract with the water company or to take immediate steps for the condemnation of its plant is not clear to the average citizen. Thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money had been spent when suddenly the movement became stalled. The public is enttiled to know the reason.

What the Trenton State Gazette has to say of Union county's model representative in the upper house of the Legislature, we believe will be heartily endorsed by the press in general. This is the Trenton paper's tribute:

Ernest R. Ackerman, a business man of the first class, is acting governor of this state. By virtue of his office as president of the senate, Mr. Ackerman is obliged, under the constitution, to perform the duties that go with the governorship during Governor Wilson's absence from the state. Mr. Ackerman is a Republican, but that fact will make no difference with the administration of the affairs of New Jersey while he is in the governor's office. One thing may confidently be relied upon, and that is that, while he is acting governor, the business of New Jersey will be attended to with careful consideration for the interests of the commonwealth.

PLAINFIELD NINE WON FIRST GAME

The Scotch Plains baseball season was formally opened on Saturday at the latter place, when the Plainfield Baseball Club carried off the honors by a score of 5 to 4. The season was begun in true league style, County Committeeman George H. Johnson throwing the first ball, and "Billy" Lee, the old-time player, handling the indicator. When he called out "play ball," there was a record-breaking crowd on the field, including a big delegation from this city.

The game was in the nature of a battle of pitchers, "Jimmie" Montross for Plainfield having a shade the better of it over Slocum, also of Plainfield, who occupied the box for the 'Plains. However, it was not Slocum's fault that the home team lost, but it was due to an error by "old reliable" George Baldwin, who dropped Harter's line drive to left field in the sixth inning.

This, together with several errors and a three-base hit, netted Plainfield four runs. This was the only bad inning Scotch Plains had, but it was sufficient to lose them the contest. In the eighth inning, Driscoll went over the pan. "Dave" made a clean two-bagger to centre, coming home on Harter's drive to the same garden.

Scotch Plains got in the running in the third inning. Baldwin reached first on an infield hit, which caught Slocum stealing third. Flannery walked and Baldwin came in on H. Albert's long fly to left field. Two more runs were gathered in the fourthinning, Frentz getting on with a safe drive to centre, stole second, while Joe Albert made first on Harter's error. Frentz and Alberts scored on Brown's drive to centre. In the sixth inning, Brown scored on a comedy of errors by Plainfield's infield, but was unable to get a man across the plate again, although a hit at several times would have meant victory for the 'Plains. The home players were not equal to the occasion.

The Plainfield team played a fine game throughout and was strong in all departments. The contest was remarkably free from disputes, there being the best of feeling among the players. A little later these teams will meet in this city. The score:

RAHWAY Y.M. LEAGUE BEATS LOCAL Y.M.C.A

The Rahway Young Men's League won a well played game from the local Y. M. C. A. team at Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, the final score being 7 to 4 in favor of the visitors. Although the home team outbatted the visitors, their hits were scattered and Rahway managed to bunch theirs in the second, fourth and tenth innings. At the end of the ninth the score was a tie with four runs each. Rahway got to Frederickson in this session and with the aid of a couple of errors pushed three tallies across.

NEW REAL ESTATE OFFICE—Will open up my new office on Monday morning at No. 155 North avenue, ground floor. Have already purchased a good size book for the purpose of listing every property in Plainfield. My object is to fill it full of the conditions of your property, including the size of mortgage on same; then to leave the book to my grandchildren to read. I am the man who has been working in a four-dollar capacity to fight nervous prostration for the last four years and in those conditions have earned the title of selling and exchanging more property than any two agents in Plainfield. Now I am better and am ready for business. If you are coming to see me let me tell you something. Don't come near me if you expect me to handle your house, if it is sprinkled with signs or one sign which reads for sale by any broker, unless you want to sell out for 50 cents on the $1.00, for I want you to known that my feeling for you is the same as yours is for me, where you want to include me under any old broker. And let me tell you that these old signs are what make Plainfield real estate sell for less money than it does in any city or town along the Central, notwithstanding it has the name of "City Beautiful." Your any old broker means that some of them should be selling peanuts, instead of offering your property or spoiling the sale of it. Have sold seven properties in the last two weeks. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on the plan "that my time is yours." My office is not as it will be when the store front is changed, but will answer the purpose for a short time. 4 29 12

AN ELOPEMENT

How a Man Assisted a Runaway Pair and What Came of It All

By A. B. SEARLE

I was in the country for my health and, as directed by my doctor, taking long walks. At first I enjoyed my constitutionals immensely, but after awhile longed for some one to enjoy them with me. Then I thought that if something would only happen to me while rambling along over the country roads it would relieve my ennui. A footpad or a runaway horse would be a godsend.

But one morning something happened that was especially suited to my taste. I started out before breakfast for half an hour's exercise. I was moving along at a four mile an hour gait when, turning a bend in the road, I came face to face with a young man and a young woman. The man carried a small valise, while the girl held a tight grip on a tiny bag.

"I beg pardon, sir," said the man, "but does this road lead to G.?"

"Yes, but you must turn to the right when you come to the first intersecting road. Then you turn to the left at the next, cross a bridge"—

"Are there any short cuts?"

"Yes. You can leave the road just above here and cross a field; then, having passed the bridge, there is a wood through which"—

"One moment. Have you a heart?"

"A heart! Of course I have."

"Then I beseech you to help a pair of lovers to escape from the persecution of"—

"A tyrannical, contemptible, old curmudgeon of a father?"

"Worse. This young lady is the ward of an uncle who to gain her property for himself was to have sent her today to a lunatic asylum. I have—But it is a long story. We must go on. Will you help us?"

"I should think so. I know the way to the station. I'll pilot you and by the shortest possible route."

"Oh, sir," exclaimed the girl, raising her eyes to heaven as if to give thanks, "if you will do so you will save me from a madhouse. I shall soon be mad myself if I am shut up among those creatures!"

"Come on!" I cried.

"We have staked all on this flight," said the man as we hurried along, "this young girl's liberty and her fortune. The fortune was paid to her guardian last night and was to have been deposited in bank today. Oh, that villain! But, with your kind help, we shall outwit him."

"I've been there myself," I said. "My wife had money her father desired to control, and he acted a villainous part in the matter. To this very day I would like to throttle him."

"What we fear," the man went on, "is that the young lady's uncle will get on our track, have what we are carrying taken from us, and, once in the meshes of the law, we may never recover it."

"But that is nothing," moaned the girl, "to being shut up in that dreadful asylum."

"Don't think of it, sweetheart," said the man encouragingly. "With this kind gentleman's assistance we shall escape."

We were crossing the field I had referred to when the man suddenly stopped and listened. We could distinctly hear the sound of a galloping horse and rattle of wheels.

"Come on!" cried the lover. "We must reach that wood before our pursuers come in sight of us."

We hurried on, reached the edge of the wood and crossed a bridge. Then the man stopped again.

"Gwendolin, dear," he said, "I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll hide the bonds and your jewels under this bridge. No one will know where they are but us and this gentleman. I'm sure we can trust him with the secret."

"To be sure we can. I never saw a more honest countenance," the girl rejoined. "But, Edgar, darling, I can't bear to leave my jewels I have here in my bag. Mother gave them to me on her deathbed. I'd rather keep them with me. Once on the train, I think I can conceal them."

While this brief dialogue was in progress the man dashed down under the bridge and thrust his valise between an abutment and the flooring; then, rejoining us, we all went on through the wood.

"I should think," I said to him, "that if they are after you they would head you off at the station."

"I never thought of that," he replied, coming to a halt, then after a pause:

"What do you advise?"

"Please help us," pleaded the girl. "Do something to save me from that awful madhouse. You are so much cooler than either of us. So much depends on our getting away that we are in no condition to think."

I became very much interested, not only from sympathy, but from the brain work involved in assisting this poor girl in making her escape. I always loved intricate problems and especially quick decisions.

"I am living," I said, "at a farmhouse near by. I think you had better come there with me and keep dark till you are supposed to have got away. I think I can fix it so that your identity will not be known there, and tonight, under cover of the darkness, you can walk to B. and take a train. Possibly I may furnish you with disguises."

"If you will do this," said the man, "I'll bless you forever."

The girl seemed to be too much affected to speak. She impulsively seized my hand and kissed it.

Fortunately for our concealment, the wood we were in extended to within a hundred yards of the farmhouse where I was staying. I conducted the couple to this rear point, and from there we passed through a long arbor covered with grapevines and entered the house. I introduced them to the family as friends of mine who had come to the country and were looking for a boarding place. I took them both up to my room, where they would not be seen if any one should call to look for them.

After a brief conversation apart between the lovers the man came to me and said that the girl felt the delicacy of her position and thought they should be married. I concurred in this, for I thought that marriage under the law would give him authority over his wife in precedence to her guardian. But on talking the matter over we all concluded that to bring in a clergyman at so critical a period might give the couple away. Indeed, they trembled during the day lest the family in the house, knowing of their presence, might reveal it to their pursuers.

I kept them in my room, and only once did they get a scare. A man drove by in a buggy, stopped, and I heard him ask the farmer if he had seen anything of two old men whom he described. The farmer said he had not, and the man in the buggy drove on.

When night came and the family in the house had gone to bed, I looked about the house and, returning, informed the couple that the coast was clear. Before leaving they both expressed their gratitude to me with tears in their eyes. The man begged me to go to the bridge the next day, secure the valise and bring it to my room to keep for its owner till it should be called for. I was flattered by the confidence reposed in me and made the desired promise. With this the girl flung her arms around my neck and kissed me. Then I put out the light, and, all of us moving on tiptoe, I led them out into the starlight. They started off in a direction away from where we had been in the morning.

Then I went upstairs to my room, not only feeling that a fine breach had been made in the monotony of my life, but that I had done what I could to right a great wrong. I lay awake for some time thinking of the pair pursuing their way through the darkness and sincerely hoped they would be so far away before morning that pursuit would avail nothing.

For my walk the next morning I had an object. I would go to the bridge, secure the valise hidden there, bring it to my room and keep it locked in my closet. There is something fascinating in possessing such a secret and especially so in having a treasure committed to one's keeping. I wondered what was the value of the bonds to which the man had referred. I resolved to make an inventory of everything the valise contained in order that there should be no doubt about the exact amount for which I was responsible. I was rather glad the young girl had held on to her jewels. There was a trifle more responsibility even in the bonds than I would, under less interesting circumstances, have cared to take.

On reaching the bridge I looked about me and listened to make sure no one was near to observe my movements, then went down and thrust my arm back into a pocket where I had seen the man put the valise.

No valise was there!

I confess I was somewhat surprised. When they left me they had moved away from the bridge. They must have changed their minds and returned. Or had the treasure been discovered?

Reluctantly I left the place and was walking up the incline when I heard a voice:

"Hands up!"

Not having been used to this order, I was gaping around to discover where the voice came from when a bullet, followed quickly by a report, sang over my head. This admonished me as to the meaning of the words. I put my hands above my head.

A man with a drawn revolver advanced from behind a tree and clapped a pair of handcuffs on me.

"Will you kindly inform me, sir," I asked, "what this means?"

"It means that you were looking for the swag captured before daylight yesterday morning in the —th National bank. I suppose some of your pals have taken it."

"Do you mean to tell me," I exclaimed, "that that eloping couple were bank robbers?"

"I don't know what you mean by an eloping couple, but two cracksmen disguised as old men were given the plunder. They afterward changed their disguise to represent a young man and a girl."

"Great heavens," I muttered to myself, "was that creature who was too virtuous to be going about unmarried with her lover a man?"

It was even so. I had been harboring two desperate criminals who had got away with $40,000 in bank bills. As to the "girl's" jewels, they were a myth. I spent several days in the care of the police, but finally on proving my respectability I was released. The couple I had harbored were later on captured with the swag on them.

I returned to the city, having had quite enough of my doctor's method for regaining my health. At any rate, I did not care to try again.

FAT IN ANIMALS.

Is by No Mean a Sign of Perfect Condition Despite Its Prevalence In Show Stock.

At the western stock show in Denver it was a fact freely commented upon that the winners in the fat steer classes on foot stood practically no chance in the carcass classes later, it seemingly being felt by the judge of the carcasses that those animals that were sufficiently fat to win in the ring were too fat to be freely marketable. This suggests several questions.

Isn't there, after all, in these excessively fat animals a lot of suet that the butcher can dispose of only by sending it out with some excessively lean piece of meat?

Does the housewife want a piece of meat surrounded by a two inch layer of fat? Aren't we at times overdoing the fattening of show animals?

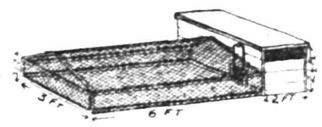
But, to pass on to a field where our feet are on a better trodden path, aren't the breeding animals in our large shows excessively fat? Certainly we must answer in the affirmative in a great many cases. Draft stallions have appeared in the ring (and some of them won premiums) that were so fat that it is doubtful if they ever would afterward make successful breeders. We are certainly all aware that if we would make a heifer barren about all we have to do is to get her excessively fat. It must be a well known fact among stockmen that these overfat animals are very susceptible to disease and that after the disease is contracted they die much more promptly than those in moderate condition. After all, must we not look upon over fatness as an abnormal condition and one not to be desired? Of course the average show visitor looks for fat only and can see no good in animals not fat. But, after all, isn't the show educational, and isn't it about time we started in to educate even the visitors that the fat animal is not necessarily the best animal? In other words, as has been so aptly stated by an eminent authority, "fitness and not fatness" should be our aim.

COOP AND RUN.

The Growing Chicks Can Be Kept In Healthy Condition, as It Is Easily Removed.

The coop illustrated herewith will be found very satisfactory for allowing chicks a runway with the hen while they are small. The coop itself may be built of any convenient size packing case, the bottom of which is removed and the top given a tilt and the front end made to overlap, where a ventilator of wire is placed. One strip of a side board cut diagonally will supply sufficient tilt to shed the rain.

The run is built on a framework of light wood, say, only one inch square and covered with wire. It is made hip roof style and sufficiently high so the hen can easily stand up in the center. If properly fastened on the wire makes the runway very firm, so that it can be easily handled by one man.



Chicken Coop and Run.

Where it joins the coop it is fastened with an ordinary latch, as shown. A slide in the side of the coop is opened when the hen and chicks are to come out and closed in the evening.

By moving the coop and run every day or so fresh grass can be secured and the coop always kept on clean ground. This is of great benefit to the chicks since they can be kept freer from vermin, the coop being kept cleaner than if it is allowed to stay long in one place. A lively brood of chicks will eat up all the grass in a run of this kind in a day or two. This coop will be found equally useful for chicks that are old enough to do without a brooder. After the chicks are six weeks old they may be removed to colony houses.

Increase Yield.

Do not reduce the acreage devoted to corn growing unless you have made provisions to increase the acre yield. It is very important that you have plenty of corn, and there is little danger of growing too much. A surplus is easily cared for.

FARM NOTES

If the bedsteads creak at each move of the sleeper, remove the slats and wrap the ends of each in old newspapers. This will prove a perfect silencer.

To remove any dish from a mold when cold wrap a hot cloth about the outside of the mold for a minute or two. To remove a hot dish wrap a cold cloth about it.

If the floors of the barn are of cement a small quantity of sand should be sprinkled on the floor before the cows are turned out or allowed to come in. This will prevent them from slipping.

To remove wall paper from the wall easily dissolve one-fourth of a pound of saltpeter in a gallon of water and with the solution wet one strip of paper at a time. The paper comes off very easily and in strips, as it was put on the wall.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910, by Anna Katharine Rohlfs

"Sit down," replied the district attorney gravely, with a gesture of dismissal to the officer. "Mr. Cumberland, we have spared you up to this time for two very good reasons. You were in great trouble, and you appeared to be in the possession of no testimony which would materially help us. But matters have changed since you held conversation with Dr. Perry on the day following your sister's decease. You have laid that sister away, the will which makes you an independent man for life has been read in your hearing, you are in as much ease of mind as you can be while your remaining sister's life hangs trembling in the balance, and, more important still, discoveries not made before the funeral have been made since, rendering it very desirable for you to enter into particulars at this present moment which were not thought necessary then."

"I CALL THIS HARD," HE BURST FORTH.

"Particulars? What particulars? Don't you know enough as it is to hang the fellow? Wasn't he seen with his fingers on Adelaide's throat? What can I tell you that is any more damaging than that? Particulars!" The word seemed to irritate him beyond endurance.

"We can understand," said the coroner, "why you should feel so strongly against one who has divided the hearts of your sisters and played with one if not with both. But there are missing links still to be supplied, and this is why we have summoned you here and ask you to be patient and give the district attorney a little clearer account of what went on in your own house before you broke up that evening and you went to your debauch and your sister Adelaide to her death at the Whispering Pines."

CHAPTER XII.

"MUST I TELL THESE THINGS?"

"SOMETHING went on at dinner time. It was not a usual meal," put in the district attorney. "You and your sisters"—

"Stop! Don't talk to me about that dinner. I want to forget that dinner. I want to forget everything but the two things I live for—to see that fellow hanged and to"— The words choked him, and he let his head fall, but presently threw it up again. "That dastard, whom may God confound, passed a letter across Adelaide into Carmel's hand," he panted out. "I saw him, but I didn't take it in. I wasn't thinking. I was"—

"Who broke the glasses," urged his relentless inquisitor, "one at your plate, one at Carmel's and one at the head of the board where sat your sister Adelaide?"

"Must I tell these things? Have it, then! Heaven knows I think of it enough not to be afraid to speak it out in words. Adelaide never had much patience with me. She was a girl who only saw one way, while I wanted pleasure, a free time and a good drink whenever the fancy took me. You know what I am, Dr. Perry, and everybody in town knows, but the impulse which has always ruled me was not a downright evil one, or if it was I called it natural independence and let it go at that. But Adelaide suffered. I didn't understand it, and I didn't care a fig for it, but she did suffer. God forgive me!"

He stopped and mopped his forehead. "That afternoon," he presently resumed, "she was keyed up more than usual. She loved Ranelagh, and he had played or was playing her false. She saw him look at Carmel and she saw Carmel look at him. Then her eyes fell on me. I was angry—angry at them all—and I wanted a drink. It was not her habit to have wine on the table, but sometimes when Ranelagh was there she did. She was a slave to Ranelagh. 'Ring the bell,' I ordered, 'and have in the champagne. I want to drink to our marriage and the happy days in prospect for us all.' It was brutal and I knew it, but I was reckless and wild for the wine. So, I guess, was Ranelagh, for he smiled at her, and she rang for the champagne. When the glasses had been set beside each plate she turned toward Carmel. 'We will all drink,' she said, 'to my coming marriage.' This made Carmel turn pale, for Adelaide had never been known to drink a drop of liquor in her life. I felt a little queer myself, and not one of us spoke till the glasses were filled and the maid had left the dining room and shut the door.

"Then Adelaide rose. 'We will drink standing,' said she, and never had I seen her look as she did then. She drank. We wouldn't call it drinking, for she just touched the wine with her lips, but to her it was debauch. Then she stood waiting, with the strangest gleam in her eyes, while Ranelagh drained his glass and I drained mine. Ranelagh thought she wanted some sentiment and started to say something appropriate, but his eye fell on Carmel, who had tried to drink and couldn't, and he bungled over his words and at last came to a pause under the steady stare of Adelaide's eyes.

"'Never mind, Elwood,' she said. 'I know what you would like to say. But that's not what I am thinking of now. I am thinking of my brother, the boy who will soon be left to find his way through life without even the unwelcome restraint of my presence. I want him to remember this day. I want him to remember me as I stand here before him with this glass in my hand. You see wine in it, Arthur; but I see poison. Carmel, you have grieved as well as I over what has passed for pleasure in this house. Do as I do, and may Arthur see and remember.'

"Her fingers opened; the glass fell from her hand and lay in broken fragments beside her plate. Carmel followed suit, and, before I knew it, my own fingers had opened and my own glass lay in pieces on the tablecloth beneath me. Only Ranelagh's hand remained steady. She held her breath, watching that hand, and I can hear the gasp yet with which she saw him set his glass down quietly on the board. That's the story of those three broken glasses."

The district attorney sought out and lifted a paper from the others lying on the desk before him. It was the first movement he had made since Cumberland began his tale.

"I'm sorry," said he, with a rapid examination of the paper in his hand, "but I shall have to detain you a few minutes longer. What happened after the dinner? Where did you go from the table?"

"I went to my room to smoke. I was upset and thirsty as a fish."

"Have you liquor in your room?"

"Sometimes."

"Did you have any that night?"

"Not a drop. I didn't dare. I wanted that champagne bottle, but Adelaide had been too quick for me. It was thrown out—wasted—I do believe, wasted."

"So you did not drink? You only smoked in your room?"

"Smoked one cigar. That was all. Then I went down town."

"May I ask by which door you left the house?"

"The side door—the one I always take."

"What overcoat did you wear?"

"I don't remember. The first one I came to, I suppose."

"But you can surely tell what hat?" They expected a violent reply, and they got it.

"No, I can't. What has my hat got to do with the guilt of Elwood Ranelagh?"

"Nothing, we hope," was the imperturbable answer. "But we find it necessary to establish absolutely just what overcoat and what hat you wore down street that night."

"I've told you that I don't remember." The young man's color was rising.

"Are not these the ones?" queried the district attorney, making a sign to Sweetwater, who immediately stepped forward, with a shabby old ulster over his arm and a battered derby in his hand.

The young man started, rose, then sat again, shouting out with angry emphasis:

"No!"

"Yet you recognize these?"

"Why shouldn't I? They're mine. Only I don't wear them any more. They're done for. You must have rooted them out from some closet."

"Mr. Cumberland,"—the district attorney was very serious—"this hat and this coat, old as they are, were worn into town from your house that night. This we know absolutely. We can even trace them to the clubhouse."

Mechanically, not spontaneously this time, the young man rose to his feet, staring first at the man who had uttered these words, then at the garments which Sweetwater still held in view.

"I don't know anything about it," were the words with which he sought to escape from the net which had been thus deftly cast about him. "I didn't wear the things. Anybody can tell you what clothes I came home in. Ranelagh may have borrowed"—

"Ranelagh wore his own coat and hat. Mr. Cumberland, you have told us that you didn't know at the time and can't remember now, where you spent that night and most of the next morning. All you can remember is that it was in some place where they let you drink all you wished and leave when the fancy took you, and not before. It was none of your usual haunts. You dreaded to have your sister know how soon you could escape the influence of that moment. You wished to drink your fill and leave your family none the wiser. Am I not right?"

"Yes. It's plain enough, isn't it? Why harp on that string?"

"You cannot remember the saloon in which you drank. That's possible enough, but perhaps you can remember what they gave you. Was it whisky, rum, absinth or what?"

The question took his irritable listener by surprise. Arthur gasped and tried to steal some comfort from Coroner Perry's eye, but that old friend's face was too much in the shadow.

"I drank—absinth," he cried at last.

"From this bottle?" queried the other, motioning again to Sweetwater, who now brought forward the bottle he had picked up in Cuthbert road.

Arthur Cumberland glanced at the bottle the detective held up, saw the label, saw the shape and sank limply in his chair, his eyes starting, his jaw falling.

"Where did you get that?" he asked, pulling himself together with sudden desperate self possession.

"That," answered the district attorney, "was picked up at a small hotel on Cuthbert road, just back of the markets, not far from the Whispering Pines."

"I don't know the place."

"It's not a high class resort, not select enough by a long shot to have this brand of liquor in its cellar. There were only two bottles of it left in the clubhouse when the inventory was last taken. These two bottles are now gone, and"—

"This is one of them? Is that what you want to say? Well, it may be for all I know. I didn't carry it there. I didn't have the drinking of it."

"We have seen the man and woman who keep that hotel. They will talk if they have to."

"They will?" His dogged self possession rather astonished them. "Well, that ought to please you. I've nothing to do with the matter."

A change had taken place in him. The irritability approaching to violence which had attended every speech and infused itself into every movement since he came into the room had left him. He spoke quietly and with a touch of irony in his tone.

"Then I have no doubt but you will do us this favor," volunteered Sweetwater in his pleasantest manner. "It's not a long walk from here. Will you go there in my company, with your coat collar pulled up and your hat well down over your eyes, and ask for a seat in the snuggery and show them this bottle? They won't know that it's empty. The man is sharp and the woman intelligent. They will see that you are a stranger and admit you readily. They are only shy of one man—the man who drank there on the night of your sister's murder."

"You're a ——" he began, with a touch of his old violence. But, realizing, perhaps, that his fingers were in a trap, he modified his manner again and continued more quietly: "This is an odd request to make. I won't go with you to that low drinking hell unless you make me, but I'll swear"—

"Don't swear." It is unnecessary to say who spoke. "We wouldn't believe you, and it would be only adding perjury to the rest."

"You wouldn't believe me?"

"No; we have reasons, my boy. There were two bottles."

"Well?"

"The other has been found nearer your home."

"That's a trick. You're all up to tricks"—

"Not in this case, Arthur. Let me entreat you in memory of your father to be candid with us. We have arrested a man. He denies his guilt, but can produce no witnesses in support of his assertions. Yet such witnesses may exist. Indeed, we think that one such does exist. The man who took the bottles from the clubhouse's wine vault did so within a few minutes of the time when this crime was perpetrated on your sister. He should be able to give valuable testimony for or against Elwood Ranelagh."

"This is awful!" Young Cumberland had risen to his feet and was swaying to and fro before them like a man struck between the eyes by some maddening blow.

"If I had only died that night!" he muttered, with his eyes upon the floor and every muscle tense with the shock of this last calamity. "Dr. Perry, let me go for tonight. Let me think. My brain is all in a whirl. I'll try to answer tomorrow." But even as he spoke he realized the futility of his request. His eye had fallen again on the bottle, and in its shape and telltale label he beheld a witness bound to testify against him if he kept silent himself.

"IF I HAD ONLY DIED THAT NIGHT!"

"Don't answer," he went on. "I may as well own the truth and be done with it. I was in the clubhouse. I did rob the wine vault. I did carry off the bottles to have a quiet spree, and it was to some place on Cuthbert road I went. But when I've admitted so much I've admitted all. I saw nothing of my sister's murder, saw nothing of what went on in the rooms upstairs. I crept in by the open window at the top of the kitchen stairs, and I came out by the same. I only wanted the liquor, and when I got it I slid out as quickly as I could and made my way over the golf links to the road."

The district attorney's voice sounded thin, almost piercing, as he made this remark:

MEMBERS ENROLLED IN LOCAL CHURCHES

At the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning seven new members were added to the church roll, three on confession of faith and four by letters from other churches.

Immediately preceding the communion at the First M. E. church five new members were received, three on probation and two by letter.

The new choir at the First Presbyterian seemed to please the large congregations which attended both services. The quartet, which is under the direction of Bert Harold, organist and choirmaster, consists of Miss Ruth Stadler, soprano; Mrs. Charles Kendall Mason, contralto; Harold Leadbitter, tenor; Russell A. Bliss, bass.

At the Park Avenue Baptist church yesterday before the communion service Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the pastor, extended the right hand of fellowship to eight new members.

Seven adult members were added to the Congregational church roll, yesterday, six from out of town churches and one by confession of faith, immediately preceding the communion service.

DUNELLEN DEFEATS LOCAL WEST ENDS

The Dunellen team defeated the West End A. C., of this city, at Dunellen, Saturday afternoon by the score of 6 to 3. Went, the star twirler for the Dunellen team, was unable to play on account of a sprained ankle and VanZandt, formerly of the Plainfield High School team, occupied the box. He held the Plainfield team to ten hits, all of which were well scattered. Conshay pitched a good game for Plainfield. The score:

What Chalmers Service Means

This monogram on the radiator stands for all you can ask in a motor car

What does automobile "service" mean? Here is what we think it means: Consistently good performance at all times, in all conditions of weather, on all sorts of roads.

We try in various ways to insure our customers this sort of service. First: by selling the right kind of a car (the Chalmers has proved that it is right in the hands of 15,000 owners). Then by co-operation with owners—both through the Chalmers factory and through our own service department.

We know that Chalmers cars will give satisfactory service to anyone. We spend a large sum of money each year to see that the cars we sell are so treated that owners get the maximum of efficient performance from them.

This is something for you to consider when buying a motor car. You must be sure that you will receive the proper attention from factory and dealer after your purchase is made.

PASSED OVER VETO

Mayor's Assertions as to "Dead Horse Bill" Caused Stir in Common Council.

BUXTON'S WARM STATEMENT.

"Absolute Falsehood" He Says Referring to One Part of His Honor's Message—It's Not Finished Yet.

Although Mayor G. W. V. Moy refused to approve the "dead horse" resolution, providing for a settlement with Fisk, Doer & Carroll for a team purchased for No. 4 engine house, the Common Council at an adjourned meeting, last night, passed the resolution over the city executive's veto, and at the same time, Councilman Taylor, chairman of the fire committee, took exception to certain statements in the Mayor's message to the effect that the horses were purchased by Mr. Buxton without the knowledge of the committee.

Mr. Taylor stated that the committee had been trying for several months to get a team and that the one in question was the third secured from Fisk, Doer & Carroll and that one of the animals contracted an illness and died. Mr. Taylor said that as to a violation of rule 31, to which Mr. Moy called attention in his veto, the committee instructed Mr. Buxton to get the horses and that the resolution was drawn by Judge Gilbert Collins and passed on his advice.

Mr. Taylor moved that the Mayor's objections be noted on the minutes, and then moved that the resolution be adopted notwithstanding his veto. The Mayor's message follows:

"I return without my approval the annexed resolution adopted by your honorable body, May 1, 1911, the reasons for my disapproval are:

"First, that the resolution ratifies the purchase of a pair of horses for the fire department by the fire and building committee, which does not agree with the facts, the said committee having no knowledge of the purchase of said horses until after one of said horses had died and the question of liability of the city for payment arose when it developed that Mr. Buxton of said committee on his own responsibility and without the knowledge or authority of the said committee had purchased the said horses.

"Second, conceding that the city had purchased said horses, such act would have been a violation of rule 31 of the Common Council, which provides that no committee or member of any committee except alms or police committee shall make any purchase or incur any liability in the name of the city and no purchase shall be made or liability incurred by the alms or police committees to any amount exceeding $30 without the previous permission by resolution of the Common Council, when in fact no permission to make such purchase had been given by the Common Council.

"Third, conceding that the Common Council had given permission to purchase a team of horses or that they have the right to ratify the purchase of a team for which no permission had been given, we must assume that it is intended that live horses are needed and I discover no authority for the appropriation of money belonging to the taxpayers of this city to be invested in dead animals, horses or otherwise.

"Fourth, I am of the opinion that the ratification of such peculiar transaction will establish a very bad precedent that may be referred back to and resorted to in the future. I wish to express my strong disapproval of such action."

After the meeting, Councilman Buxton, who remarked that he did not often talk for publication, informed the newspaper reporters present that that part of the Mayor's message referring to the statement that the horses were secured without the knowledge of the fire committee and until one of the horses died, the question of liability arose upon the discovery that Mr. Buxton had secured the horses on his own responsibility, was "an absolute falsehood." Mr. Buxton declared that the fire committee had full knowledge of the matter and that the Mayor was acquainted with the facts. He requested that such a statement be made public.

The fact that the Council passed the resolution over the Mayor's veto does not insure the settlement of the matter, for it is understood that Mr. Moy's signature must be affixed to the warrant before it can be paid.

Boys' Mission Band Elects.

The Boys' Mision Band, of Trinity Reformed church, held its annual meeting Sunday afternoon after Sunday-school, and elected these officers for the year: President, Harold Storr; vice-president, William Van Nest; secretary, George Hummel; treasurer, William Bach.

TWP. CLUB ELECTS

Anderson Again Heads North Plainfield Twp. Improvement Society.

PRESIDENT MAKES SPEECH.

Some Valuable Suggestions Advanced by "the Mayor"—The Annual Reports are Submitted.

Election of officers of the Improvement Society of North Plainfield Township was held last night at the town hall, it being the first meeting of the new fiscal year. These officers were chosen: President, W. de La R Anderson; first vice-president, Geo T. Hughes; second vice-president, Mrs. F. deL. Hyde; recording secretary, Francis E. Bodin; corresponding secretary, William Patte; financial secretary, L. H. Snowden; treasurer, John Mobus; board of managers, Rev. Dr. C. A. Eaton, Louis K. Hyde, Dr. Richard Moldenke, Edward T. Canning, Paul Kelm, Mrs. L. H. Snowden and George W. Winans.

Justice George H. Hughes, in speaking for the nominating committee, said that the committee had given the matter of nominations most earnest thought and attention for the past month, and that the ticket presened was one of the best that could be selected from the society. One office concerning which without exception was approved by all consulted in the matter was that of president. There had not been one dissenting voice.

Mr. Anderson speaking for the election of Justice Hughes, for vice-president, said there could be no one more fitting for or entitled to it by reason of his earnest work for the past year to this office than Justice Hughes. He has had the courage to take the floor against the combined society at times and argue against various projects the society was considering and by doing so in many instances helped in improving their final conclusions.

Mr. Anderson in his report as president said that he had discovered a method whereby the fines taken by the township police could be held in the township for its own use instead of going to the county as at present. It is that the voters of the township shall vote that a police department shall be established and a small appropriation voted to run that department. After this is done the township committee has the power to name one of the local justices as a township judge. Then under ordinance all the fines will be collected by the township. This will be a money making proposition, as the police force has taken in $46 in fines so far at the cost of only $10. Under the present system the township did not receive one cent of the $46.

He then spoke of having signs erected on the roads showing that the law was enforced against automobiles speeding and that there is an officer on duty. He urged the attendance of all at the rehearsal of the pageant to be given of the Indian legend of Watchung on June 8, 9 and 10, in the evening. He further suggested the fixing up of the town hall property, making it attractive and the oiling of the road between Watchung and the trolley.

Under new business the by-laws were amended to enable the society to elect trustees to vote the sociey's stock and the dues were raised to twenty-five cents a month. Charles P. Sebring, of Greenbrook, suggested that the society recommend the acceptance of the new road which has lately been put near the proposed site of the borough sewer bed, explaining that this would give a direct road to Somerville from the borough.

Miss Flora Bodenheimer and Mrs. F. Probst, were elected to membership. The ladies' auxiliary reported that forty dollars had been cleared at the recent supper. This money was turned over to the society to be applied against the mortgage. The meeting then adjourned and refreshments were served.

A New Circus Site.

Contracting agents for the Forepagh-Sells Brothers circus were in town today making arrangements for the shows visit here on June 9. The 'lot' man spent the morning seeking a suitable site and finally selected the "Count" J. K. Van Nest property, in the East End as the only available spot. It contains forty acres bounded by Leland avenue, East Front and East Second streets, directly on the main line trolley.

Ministers to Play Ball.

When the East Jersey Baptist ministers' Association holds its annual picnic at Scotch Plains on Tuesday, May 23, a baseball game between two nines composed of ministers will be a feature. Rev. G. R. Maguire, who is a rattling good pitcher, will be in the box for one team.

NOMINATES BERG FOR AYRES' PLACE

Mayor G. W. V. Moy sent to the Common Council at its adjourned meeting last night, his fourth appointment for overseer-of-the-poor to succeed A. D. Ayers. He named Dr. Joseph F. Berg, a retired physician, and a veteran of the Civil War. The appointment was referred to the alms committee by Councilman Herbert Buxton, who was acting-president, and as in the case of the other appointees it is not believed that he will be confirmed.

Dr. Berg has been a resident of this city for many years and is well-known. He served in the Civil War as a surgeon with considerable success and after returning from the war he settled here and practiced his profession until a few years ago. He has the endorsement of G. A. R. men for the position.

POLICE SCOUR STATE FOR FUGITIVE NEGRO

In every town in the State today the police are searching for a colored man, named Kelly, who outraged two white women shortly after midnight last night in their homes in Bernardsville. Prosecutor Pope, of Somerset county, telephoned Chief Kiely this morning to be on the look-out for the man.

According to the description furnished the police Kelly is twenty-five years old; five feet four inches in height and weight 160 pounds. He wears a gray suit, tan shoes and has a smooth face. When last seen he had not hat and was riding a Reading bicycle.

DISTRICTS' BOUNDS

Ordinance Re-Districting City Passed to Final Reading by the Council.

TO BE FOURTEEN DIVISIONS.

Measure Will Become a Law on Monday, May 22, Long After Date Provided by the Geran Statute.

Provisions for re-districting the city, according to the Geran election law, which provides that there shall not be more than 350 voters in each district, were incorporated in an ordinance introduced by Councilman F. L. Holt and passed on two readings at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night. This action was taken after the Councilmen had held a conference with the City Republican Executive committee at its headquarters in the Frost building.

There was considerable discussion at the conference, with the result that it was finally decided to establish fourteen districts in the city, four each in the First, Second and Third wards and six in the Fourth ward. The various districts are established as follows:

First ward—first district—Park avenue and the railroad, to Washington street, to East Front street, to Elm place, to brook, to Somerset street, to East Front street to Park avenue and point of beginning.

Second ward—first district—Park avenue and railroad, to Cedar brook, to Watchung avenue, to Franklin place, to East Seventh street, to Washington street to railroad and point of beginning.

Second district—Park avenue and Cedar brook, to point intersecting Putnam avenue as extended, to Franklin place, to Watchung avenue to Cedar brook and point of beginning.

DINNER PARTY FAVORS TELL OF ENGAGEMENT

Miss Mabel A. Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Hamilton, of Verdon street, gave a charming birthday dinner party to a gathering of young women friends at her home last night. Covers were laid for twenty-eight.

No intimation was given as to the real reason why the affair had been arranged and it came as a surprise. Pretty little favors in the form of a miniature basket holding a walnut were at each place. When the walnut shells were opened a card was found which announced Miss Hamilton's engagement to Edward R. Kirwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Kirwin, of Elizabeth. Congratulations were in order immediately afterward.

The dining room was prettily decorated for the occasion, the table being graced by cut flowers and candleabra. Demolli served. An informal musical program was enjoyed in conclusion.

Those in attendance were the following:

The Misses Katherine Chambers, Florence Baker, of Brooklyn, Hazel and Lucille Kirwin, of Elizabeth, Grace Merritt, Dorothy Musgrave, May and Gertrude Berkham, of New York, Lillian Fedderman and Ethel Clum, of Dunellen; Katherine Thines, of Trenton, Louise Tracy, of Albany, N. Y., Florence Smith, Lillian Hartfelder, May Hanlon, Mary Riley, Edna Ryan, Mamee Burke, Helen and Nan Rafferty, Helen Johnson and Marion Mortimer, of Plainfield, Mrs. M. E. Bolsterli and Mrs. Harry G. DeMeza, of the borough.

HOLY CROSS CHURCH CHOIR CONCERT ON MAY 30 FOR ITS CAMP FUND

Among the choirs of the city none have attained a higher degree of efficiency than the one at the Church of the Holy Cross. This boy choir has long had the reputation of being one of the best and under the capable leadership of William S. O'Brien, organist and choirmaster, the standard has been maintained. Mr. O'Brien has had considerable experience as an organist and choirmaster, having previously been at the Church of the Ascension, New Brighton, S. I.

The choir is planning to give a musical on May 30, the proceeds of which will go to the outing fund to take the choir to Hedges Lake, New York, for the annual summer vacation. The accompanying picture is an excellent one of the choir. Those in the top row of the picture, reading from left to right, are Harold Noble, Clarence Patrick, Lawrence Sutton, William Rowland, Rev. George A. Warner, rector; Russell Brakeley, crucifer; L. H. Jacoby, W. S. O'Brien, organist and choirmaster; Chester Chamberlain, Grant Boos, Robert Hebert, Ashley Burner. Those in the left wing of the picture are Allen Diman, William Thiers, S. M. Staats, Carl Noble, Fred Noble, Russell Vail and those in the right wing are Charles Kregar, Harold Woolston, George Westervelt, Herbert Stine and Lester Chandler. Those in the next row are Walter Thomas, Howard Dentz, Thomas Ball, Ronald Schuck, LeRoy Stewart, Chauncey Stewart, Evan Stevens, Fred Van Norden and those in the bottom row are Sheldon Coudrey, William Rilling, Elmer Perry, Clifford Ferris, Sterling Boos, Theodore Schneegas, Robert Ball, Alfred Smalley, Russell Allen and John Hull.

ELKS' MINSTRELSY

Annual Burnt Cork Performance Tomorrow Night Will be the Best Ever.

G. O. STEVENS INTERLOCUTOR.

Galaxy of Soloists—Brand New Songs and Jokes—Nothing About "Why Does a Hen Cross the Street."

When the admirers of the "Best People on Earth" gather to hear the annual minstrel show those who have not provided themselves with the necessary tickets for tomorrow night will have to wait outside until the show is over and try to get seats for the repetition of the performance on Thursday night. It is believed that the coming show will eclipse anything heretofore attempted by the local Elks and some of the topical verses are bound to awaken the latent risibilities of the audiences.

An unusually good program has been prepared under the tuition of Harry Wetton and it goes with out saying that the rendition of the songs and the antics of the familiar animal will make the audience forget their troubles, even including the servant problem and the aeroplane. Some of the songs to be sung are original and most of them are exceptionally fine, both musically and from the viewpoint of the commission form of government. It is not to be believed that any of the public officials will escape notice in the topical song and perhaps it will do everybody good.

The opening chorus, "We've Been Upon Parade" will convince the most skeptical that the members of the troupe have been upon their good behavior in learning their parts and that thereafter there will be nothing which can possibly prevent the success of the whole presentation.

"Ef ye aint sure whar ye gwine, don't go, but as Uncle Rastus says, be sure you's gwine ter de right place." As before, George O. Stevens will occupy the interlocutor's chair and if there is anything that has escaped him or the end men during the past year it won't be anything you know of.

Among the soloists are John Todd, Charles Ward, Edward Bennett, Harry Blimm, Johnny Campbell, "Bill" Smith, Elmer Cutting, B. F. Tallamy and John Cose, and if anybody missess getting into the Plainfield theatre either Wednesday or Thursday nights it will be because they didn't get their tickets in time. And that's so.

The olio numbers will be filled with mirth and melody. Harry Blimm and Edward Bennett will present their very laughable sketch "Is'e Your Friend." Van Eps Brothers with their banjos and mandolins are always welcome numbers on any bill.

The Elks Quartet have been rehearsing under the direction of William E. McClymont and their sketch "A Night at the Club," will be one of the exceptionally bright spots on the program. The quartet is composed of Elmer Cutting, Harry Messersmith, John Campbell and William G. Smith.

From year to year the Elks annual minstrel show has been on event for which the amusement loving public have waited and always has their waiting been amply repaid in pleasure received at the show and this year the committee promise the best effort they have ever made.

BOTH LEGS BROKEN

SANTI CONTI THE VICTIM.

Marsh Released on His Own Recognizance—May Have to Cut off Conti's Legs at the Hospital—Police Investigate.

A. L. C. Marsh, of Hillside avenue, an architect, driving his large touring car, and Santi Conti, an Italian shoemaker, riding his bicycle, collided on South avenue, opposite the Rushmore Dynamo Works, at noon, today. Conti was so badly injured that he may lose his legs, both being broken between the ankle and the knee. He was rushed to the hospital in the police patrol by Sergeant Overbaugh, while Mr Marsh was placed under arrest by Detective Sergeant J. J. Flynn, and taken to police headquarters. Later Mr. Marsh went to the scene of the accident with Chief Kiely.

According to the story obtained by the police, Mr. Marsh and the Italian were both going west on South avenue, it being the intention of the former to pass Conti. Just at the point of passing, Mr. Marsh claims the Italian pulled over almost directly in front of his machine and there was no possible way of his escaping a collision. The automobile hit Conti with considerable force, throwing him several feet. Both of the victim's legs were broken and he also suffered bruises and contusions. His bicycle was wrecked.

Mr. Marsh quickly stopped his machine and rendered assistance. The ambulance and police patrol were summoned, but the latter reached the scene first and took Conti to the hospital. Upon his arrival there the victim was removed to the operating room. Both breaks, it is said, are bad ones, and early this afternoon it could not be learned whether Conti would lose one or both of his legs. The man is also suffering severely from shock.

Mr. Marsh says that, according to the rule of the road, he attempted to pass the Italian on the left, but when the police reached the scene, they say that the automoblie was well over to the right of the road. The police are making a thorough investigation.

Conti, who is thirty-three years of age, resides at 948 West Third street. He has a shoe repairing shop on Berckman street and was evidently on his way home to dinner when he was injured. He is unmarried.

LACK OF WATER GIVES BARN FIRE BIG START

A delay of fully ten minutes in securing water resulted in serious damage by fire to Frank Linke's barn this morning. The structure was discovered to be ablaze at 1:30 and although there was only an incipient flame in one corner of a lean-to when the firemen arrived in response to an alarm from box 12, the entire structure was practically destroyed. The loss is about $1,200, three-fourths insured.

The origin of the fire is unknown and in several respects is similar to the blaze in the Kornfield barn a week ago Saturday night. The structure is located in the rear of the Linke store on Front street and an equal distance from Second street, adjoining the connecting alley. The horses and wagons were gotten ont in safety but most of the other contents were destroyed. The latter included a large quantity of hay and straw which sent clouds of smoke all over the business section. The hay had to be thoroughly gone over and the firemen worked until nearly four o'clock.

Chief Doane said today that the delay in getting water was due to men on the city sprinkling carts tampering with the hydrant gates. The ones that should have been opened were closed and vice versa. In speaking about it today the chief said:

"The men had to run along Front street and Second street from Madison avenue to Park, opening and shutting gates. When I arrived on the scene the blaze could have been put out in a few minutes with a couple of lines of hose but we had to stand by and see the flames spread, the chemical engine being unable to cope with them. The same delay, only not so serious, occurred at the Kronfield fire and the trouble will continue as long as the sprinkling cart men tamper with the gates."

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Raven took their departure Saturday for an extended trip abroad. They will be away until fall.

UNDERGROUND CROSSING.

Cranford to Pay $10,000 of $65,000 Cost.

At a recent meeting of the Cranford township committee the citizens instructed the committee to go back to the Central Railroad officials and ascertain if the company would not place an underground crossing under its tracks at the foot of Centennial avenue, providing the town would close the Lincoln and Elizabeth avenue grade crossing in the eastern section of the town. The Elizabeth avenue crossing is the oldest road in the town, and was once known as the Westfield and Elizabeth road, and crossed the railroad tracks nine times in seven miles.

The railroad has offered to put in the underground crossing if the town will pay $10,000 of the estimated $65,000 cost and close up the grade crossing. The citizens feel that the closing of the crossing is worth something, and as the railroad contemplates a terminal and extensive yards in the vicinity, it is believed the road would gladly build the undercrossing in order to acquire the Elizabeth and Lincoln avenue crossing.

The lineup presented by Manager Alberts at Scotch Plains, Saturday, was pleasing to the fans of that village, and they predict a winning aggregation. Many New Features in the Downie & Wheeler New Combined Double Circus.

Of all the multitudinous shows that have taken to the road this happy summertime, none are meeting with such cordial, enthusiastic receptions, from small towns to cosmopolitan cities, as the New Downie & Wheeler's World's Best Shows, true to its name, is of a magnitude easily seen, comprehended and admitted. Introducing the stars of the world's arenas in amazing and incredulous feats of athletic and aerial achievements. The very air is filled with flying forms, flashing like meteors in star-lit heavens, swinging and swaying, soaring and sailing, keeping the lofty canvas dome alive with activity, and looking down upon a myriad of masters of acrobatic art. Here, there and everywhere—singly and in groups, until the vast arena upon the ground and in the air presents a bewildering scene.

Every morning at 10:30 o'clock the most gorgeous and longest free street parade will be given. A mighty moving panorama of the glories of the earth. A dazzling world of bewildering sights, big, beautiful and brilliant.

The Downie & Wheeler's World's Best Shows will exhibit in this city rain or shine, on Wednesday, May 10.

BOOM FOR WILSON

Martine's Party Tells Taft Jersey Governor Will be Next President.

VISIT TO THE WHITE HOUSE.

Jersey Senator Gives a Big Dinner at the New Willard to Delegation of His Constituents.

The Woodrow Wilson Presidential boom was given additional impetus yesterday, and on the very threshold of the White House, at Washington, D. C., too, when Senator Martine, of New Jersey, and a delegation of Jerseyites called upon President Taft and paid their respects.

In the party were State Senators, prominent attorneys, leading Democratic editors, and Governor Wilson's private secretary. Their leader and governor being out West, the Jersey Democrats came over from their State to be the guests at dinner of Senator Martine.

Senator Harry V. Osborne, of Newark, who happens to represent the biggest constituency of any State Senator in the United States, was the spokesman of the party. Of course, Senator Martine did the introducing, but it was the younger statesman who revealed the real, true feelings of the visitors.

"We are for Governor Wilson for the Presidency," said Mr. Osborne. "When the country knows our man as we have worked with him and aided him in his reforms know him, the country will respond to his candidacy as to that of no other man in history."

Senator Martine said that New Jersey would furnish the next presidential candidate on the Democratic ticket and next President of the United States. President Taft welcomed the visitors, but did not seem perturbed over their hopefulness.

Those presented to the President by Senator Martine were: Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to Governor Wilson; Senator Osborne, James Kerney, editor of the Trenton Times; Alexander Simpson, of Jersey City; Captain Ralph Donges, of Camden; George E. Cutley, of Jersey City; Judge Peter F. Daly, of New Brunswick and County Clerk Bernard Gannon, of Perth Amboy.

Senator George Silerz, of Middlesex and Mayor H. Otto Wittpen, of Jersey City, who came to Washington with the New Jersey party on Saturday, were unable to be introduced to President Taft because of the necessity of returning home before the visit to the White House.

Besides those mentioned above, the following were the guests of Senator Martine at the dinner given by him in the Presidential Suite of the New Willard Motel: Representatives Gardner, Scully, Wood, Tuttle, Hughes, McCoy, Townsend and Kinkead; Martin P. Devlin, of Trenton, member of the Mercer county Tax Board; James M. Baker, Assistant Senate Librarian; Theodore Swayze, of the Treasury department; Captain Frank E. Evans, secretary to Senator Briggs; H. F. J. Drake, Dudley F. Malone, assistant Corporation Counsel of New York; Francis Oliver, secretary to Senator O'Gorman; W. W. St. John and E. Jos. Aronoff.

Apprentices Called Out.

The masons and hod-carriers made a new move in the local strike, yesterday, by calling out the apprentices. They had been allowed to remain at work until the bosses made the open shop declaration. The strikers have also appointed walking delegates and will explain the situation to all incoming men answering the bosses advertisements for help.

Smoke but No Fire.

Someone saw smoke issuing from the top floor of the Brokaw garage on East Fourth street at 6 o'clock last night, and turned in an alarm from box 21. The firemen found that an employe had been trying out an automobile engine and the smoke came from it.

Funeral of John R. Butler.

The funeral of John R. Butler was held at his late home on East Fifth street, this afternoon. Dr. C. M. Anderson conducted the service in the presence of a gathering of friends. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being three sons, Clarence, John and Frank Butler and William Angell.

SHADE TREE LECTURE BY STATE'S FORESTER

The North Plainfield Shade Tree Commission has arranged with Alfred Gaskill, the State forester, who has had large experience, to give a free public illustrated lecture at the Park Club, Tuesday evening, May 16 at 8:15 o'clock. The commission is informed that the lantern slides are most interesting and a large attendance is anticipated. It is hoped that it may result in an awakening of general interest in the subject of the planting, care and preservation of shade trees.

The commission has, for the past two years, conducted its work without seeking any financial assistance from the borough. It has thus naturally been obliged to rely upon the owners or occupants of real property to care for the shade trees adjoining their representative residence.

It is now a recognized fact that shade trees have not only an aesthetic, but an actual financial value—that they increase real property values in the community. Besides the minor pests which injure trees of other varieties, the elms are especially subjects of invasion and will be destroyed in great numbers by the elm leaf beetle, unless properly sprayed.

The commission has obtained unusually low rates for such spraying, and will relieve owners of all inconvenience, by transmitting their orders. It will also be glad to obtain and furnish free of charge, information upon any question relating to the planting or care of trees, shrubs or plants, whether for street planting or the home grounds.

The sale of seats for "The Henrietta," to be presented at the Plainfield theatre, May 18 and 19, by the Park Comedy Club, opened at the theatre at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Prior to the commencement of the sale, William N. Runyon, at the request of the club, personally inspected the box-office to see that no reservations had been made before hand. He satisfied himself that everything was all right and so declared to those in line waiting to secure tickets. The sale was a large one, insuring capacity audiences at both performances.

There are, however, many good seats left for both nights. The play will be given for the benefit of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield and the prospects are the league will receive a large sum as a result of the affair.

NEW REAL ESTATE OFFICE—Will open up my new office on Monday morning at No. 155 North avenue, ground floor. Have already purchased a good size book for the purpose of listing every property in Plainfield. My object is to fill it full of the conditions of your property, including the size of mortgage on same; then to leave the book to my grandchildren to read. I am the man who has been working in a four-dollar capacity to fight nervous prostration for the last four years and in those conditions have earned the title of selling and exchanging more property than any two agents in Plainfield. Now I am better and am ready for business. If you are coming to see me let me tell you something. Don't come near me if you expect me to handle your house, if it is sprinkled with signs or one sign which reads for sale by any broker, unless you want to sell out for 50 cents on the $1.00, for I want you to known that my feeling for you is the same as yours is for me, where you want to include me under any old broker. And let me tell you that these old signs are what make Plainfield real estate sell for less money than it does in any city or town along the Central, notwithstanding it has the name of "City Beautiful." Your any old broker means that some of them should be selling peanuts, instead of offering your property or spoiling the sale of it. Have sold seven properties in the last two weeks. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on the plan "that my time is yours." My office is not as it will be when the store front is changed, but will answer the purpose for a short time. 4 29 12

VACCINATED, HE MAY LOSE ARM

Vaccination performed by the ship's surgeon on the Lusitania on a young Swedish immigrant, Carl Gustafson, about two weeks ago, may cause the loss of the young man's arm, or may cause death. Gustafson is now a patient in the Mountainside Hospital, Montclair, where, it is said, his arm is swollen to three times its nomal size, and that he is suffering from a high fever. Gustafson's condition is considered to be critical.

At the request of his uncle, Rev. Axel Peterson, pastor of the Swedish Baptist church, Montclair, Gustafson, who is seventeen years old, left his home several weeks ago to come to America. First going to England, the youth took passage on the Lusitania, which arrived in New York, Friday, April 28. The lad was met at the dock by his uncle, who took him to his home at 9 Trinity place, Montclair.

The youth complained that his arm was very sore. In explanation, he said that the ship's surgeon had vaccinated all third-class passengers who could not show marks on their arm of a successful operation, he being one of the number.

MEREDITH DEFENDS STATE SCHOOL SYSTEM

Predicting that the future would see a system of public instruction that would include not only religious but home training, County Superintendent of Schools Albert B. Meredith, former principal of the Plainfield High School, speaking in the Vincent Methodist Episcopal church in Nutley Sunday night defended the schools against the charge that they were Godless. Mr. Meredith's subject was the "Relation of the Bible to Instruction in the Public Schools."

Mr. Meredith said he regarded the topic form two distinct viewpoints. One, he explained, was the theory of education in a large sense, and the other the actual working of the educational system. This theory, he remarked by the way, was from twenty-five to fifty years ahead of the practise.

The charge had been made, Mr. Meredith said, that the present system of public schools was Godless and he stated as an obvious fact that the schools were very one-sided. This condition was a reaction, he claimed.

In the medieval times all schools were of religious character and under the control of the church, the speaker explained. They tended to give an education for a life to come. The schools of today had swung to the other extreme, he said. They were free from all church influence and tended to give an education for this life only. The present system was not false, he declared, only incomplete. This condition would be remedied, he predicted, as the recognition of the fact that religion and education were correlative and had a common object, became more common.

After a definition of just what the word "education" meant when used in its best and widest sense, Mr. Meredith approached the question of whether the Bible should be taught in the public schools. That it should always be kept there and read, he agreed, but it should not be taught.

"Let the Bible be its own spokesman, let it be taught in the church and the home," Mr. Meredith remarked, "but let the spirit and not the letter be taught in the public schools."

It was absolutely impossible to detach religion and real education, Mr. Meredith went on, for education was religion and religion was certainly education. Many persons could not see this connection, he said, but it was a fact that the Bible had had a great effect on education as it is today. In closing, Mr. Meredith dwelt on the responsibility of the teacher as the point of contact between "Education" and the child, and recommended the advancement of religion in the schools by the "attraction of contagious example."

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Men's Bible Conference class of the First Baptist church will have charge of the prayer meeting tomorrow night.

The Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. church will meet Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, when the members will hear something about the approaching picnic.

The first quarterly conference of the First M. E. church was held in Vincent chapel, last night, Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent, being in charge.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church, will observe its anniversary next Sunday evening and Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of this city, will make the adress. There will be special music by the quartet choir.

The Rahway Field Club cancelled its game with Dunellen at a late hour Saturday. A team from Plainfield was played instead and the locals won out. VanZandt pitched for Dunellen as Wendt sprained his ankle Friday afternoon. The home team will cross bats on the Madison avenue grounds next Saturday with the Y. M. C. A. team, of Newark.

WHERE BEES ARE VALUABLE.

Orchardists Should Acquire These and Poultry and Thereby Increase Their Profits.

On account of the high cost of living and the unrest in the cities many men would gladly move to the country and run a fruit farm were it not that expenses incurred in orcharding cut a big notch in the profit. One man thinks he has solved this problem by adding poultry and bees. With the help of the family he says he can easily manage these and still have just as much fruit to sell. Of course a fruit farm upon which small fruits are grown may not, in some respects, offer very tempting inducements. It should be remembered that but a few months are devoted to bearing and ripening fruit, and a long time intervenes from the ending of one season to the beginning of another. During this interval the ground devoted to vines may be occupied by poultry.

It is true, poultry will destroy all the blossoms and ripening fruit that they can reach, but the careful worker has managed this by arranging his patches so the poultry can be kept out. The orchard of standard trees is fenced off from the vines, and the fowls can run there any time of the year, for the ground is vacant so far as the land is concerned, being occupied only above the reach of fowls. The vine patches, which are divided with a cheap fence, are laid off so that one side of each adjoins the orchard.

Strawberries are earliest gathered. When the crop is off he lets the poultry in. This gives them fresh range. He still cultivates the vines, and freshly turned earth is only the more inviting. Next in season is the raspberry, then the blackberry. Into each field in turn he allows the fowls to go, and the reward for the occasional change from one field to another is healthier poultry and a fuller egg basket.

He says no fruit grower should allow the land where there are trees and idle plants to be useless. Poultry do not deprive the land of anything, nor do they need any more care when located in the orchard than elsewhere, and every one knows that bees add to its value.

The flock of pure bred fowls more than pays the expenses incurred in the orchard. And when the owner considers the value of the fresh eggs and the fat, juicy chickens and honey for his table the flock and swarm have cost him almost nothing. The bees not only secure and store away honey, with which he supplies his own table and several customers, but assist in the matter of fertilizing the blossoms. So by raising these three crops, which do not come in conflict with one another, on the space required for the orchard, his work is made more interesting as well as much more profitable.

MEAT IN WARM WEATHER.

Its Proper Keeping Has Always Been a Problem to Farmers—Good Advice From Experienced Man.

Here is the advice of an experienced man for keeping meat in warm weather:

I prepared a wooden box six feet long by four feet wide and about four feet high. I then had made a tin box of a size six inches smaller all the way around than the wooden box.

I then put a thick layer of cottonseed hulls on the bottom of the wooden box and along the sides, packing ice between the hulls and the tin box and using a liberal amount of coarse salt. It took only 200 pounds of ice to answer this purpose, and this amount has never failed to last from a week to ten days even in the warmest weather. Particular care, however, must be exercised in packing the hulls tightly around the ice and in the crevices between the chunks.

I then kill my hogs in the morning and have them salted down by noon. While it is warm the salt will stick better. When night comes I "spread" the meat and the next morning pack it in the tin box.

I have done this for some time now and have yet to lose a single piece of meat. During warm weather I killed several hogs that averaged over 280 pounds.

It may be that, the publication of this account of my experience in curing meat may be of assistance to other farmers who are at a loss what to do in warm weather.

Bookkeeping Essential.

Many a well to do farmer can boast that he has made a financial success in life without keeping books, and merely because of his success his words carry weight. Yet he should know, if he does not, that this success was attained in spite of his methods and not because of them.

Don't Set First Eggs.

The first eggs laid in the spring are often infertile, and it is inadvisable to set them. The cause is often attributed to the fact that the hens are too fat and inactive. After awhile the eggs will be all right.

Watch For Ailments.

Don't let disease get a start of you. Fight it in the early stages and you will find it much easier than to wait till it gets hold of all your flock.

ROAD IS ELIZABETH'S NOT UNION COUNTY'S

In a lengthy opinion submitted to the Board of Freeholders at the monthly meeting in Elizabeth County Attorney William R. Codington, of this city, states that the section of the west side of Westfield avenue, between Orchard street and Bayway, is under the jurisdiction of the city of Elizabeth and not the Board of Freeholders, as has been contended by property-owners in Roselle, El Mora and other places.

This decision settles a long standing controversy. At the last meeting of the Board of Freeholders there was present a delegation of citizens from Roselle who tried to compel the freeholders to see to it that the road in question was put in good condition. At that time some of the visiting citizens told the freeholders that the road had not been repaired in years, but the board was of the opinion that it had no right to repair the part of the road in the municipalities of Elizabeth and Roselle. After a long discussion, during which the citizens threatened to take the matter to the courts, it was referred by the board to the County Attorney for his opinion in the matter.

Rural mail carriers are delayed these days because of the order to weigh and count every piece of mail matter handled during the month of May.

Woodbury has the commission government bee buzzing and the Men's League has engaged E. Spencer Miller, of Philadelphia, to make an address on the subject Monday evening, May 15.

As a result of a small cut on the hand, received while performing a minor operation, Dr. David H. Ackley, of Trenton, is suffering with blood poisoning and will have to lose one of his fingers.

Bernard Bell, son of C. L. Bell, of North avenue, Cranford, was injured about the head and face Sunday as the result of a collision with a milk wagon while he was riding a motorcycle on North avenue west.

Attacked by a vicious dog while he was on his way home from Sunday school Sunday afternoon, William Wethshire, fifteen years old, of 806 Carpenter street, Camden, was bitten on the right wrist. The wound was cauterized at Cooper Hospital.

Robert Loindeck, a Wallington butcher, marched into the Holland church, at Passaic Sunday morning, swinging a heavy club on his shoulder. The man nearly broke up the services by his actions. He was taken to Bergen county and held on charges of insanity.

The Trenton Chamber of Commerce is erecting a mammoth electrical sign on the Pennsylvania Railroad's old bridge across the Delaware River. The location is such that the sign will attract the attention of all passengers crossing the new bridge. The sign is simply the word "Trenton" in letters fifteen feet high.

Run down by a trolley car at Cove road, in Pensauken township early Sunday morning, Thomas Courtney, fifty-two years old, of Moorestown, was so badly injured that his right leg had to be amputated at the Cooper Hospital. He was also injured about the body and sustained a lacerated scalp.

Plans to obtain the necessary 1,600 signatures of voters to a petition asking for a special election to determine whether the city favors a commission form of government were made last night in a meeting of the Government by Commission Association in Firemen's Hall, Bayonne. Many well known women aided in getting signers.

With several hundred young women from all sections of the city in attendance, a meeting was held Sunday afternoon at the Apollo Theatre, Atlantic City, for the purpose of forming a Young Woman's Christian Association. The project is backed by many of the most influential women in the resort and there is every indication of success. Miss Sara Carman, Des Moines, Ia., spoke on "The Aristocracy of Health."

Following the discovery of evidence that several attempts were made to fire the apartments of Joseph Weptha, of Rosz place, Passaic, late Saturday night Weptha was arrested by Police Captain Schmidt and locked up on a charge of insanity. Weptha, it is asserted, stuffed newspapers into the window sills along the walls and various other places about his apartments and the attention of the firemen was called to the matter.

Rev Hugo F. W. Grotefend, who has just become pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical church, will be known as the militant preacher of Trenton. Previous to entering the ministry Mr. Grotefend served in the German army for upward of ten years. He is organizing the boys of his congregation into a semi-military league. He will drill them in military tactics and provide facilities for baseball, basketball and football for them, in addition to establishing a gymnasium in the church.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910, by Anna Katharine Rohlfs

"I am entered by an open window. Why didn't you go in by the door?"

"I hadn't the key. I had only abstracted the one which opens the wine vault. The rest I left on the ring. It was the sight of this key lying on our hall table which first gave me the idea. I feel like a cad when I think of it, but that's of no account now."

Flushed, he slowly sank back into his seat. No complaint now of being in a hurry or of his anxiety to regain his sick sister's bedside. He seemed to have forgotten those fears in the perturbations of the moment. His mind and interest were there; everything else had grown dim with distance.

"Did you try the front door?"

"What was the use? I knew it to be locked."

"What was the use of trying the window? Wasn't it also, presumably, locked?"

The red mounted hot and feverish to his cheek.

"You'll think me no better than a street urchin or something worse," he exclaimed. "I knew that window. I had been through it before. You can move that lock with your knife blade. I had calculated on entering that way."

"Mr. Ranelagh's story receives confirmation," commented the district attorney, wheeling suddenly toward the coroner. "He says that he found this window unlocked when he approached it with the idea of escaping that way."

Arthur Cumberland remained unmoved.

The district attorney wheeled back.

"There were a number of bottles taken from the wine vault. Some half dozen were left on the kitchen table. Why did you trouble yourself to carry up so many?"

"Because my greed outran my convenience. I thought I could lug away an armful, but there are limits to one's ability. I realized this when I remembered how far I had to go and so left the greater part of them behind."

"Why, when you had a team ready to carry you?"

"A—I had no team."—But the denial cost him something. His cheek lost its ruddiness and took on a sickly white which did not leave it again as long as the interview lasted.

"You had no team? How then did you manage to reach home in time to make your way back to Cuthbert road by half past 11?"

"I didn't go home. I went straight across the golf links. If fresh snow hadn't fallen you would have seen my tracks all the way to Cuthbert road."

"If fresh snow had not fallen we should have known the whole story of that night before an hour had passed. How did you carry those bottles?"

"In my overcoat pockets—these pockets," he blurted out, clapping his hands on either side of him.

"No."

"Was it dark?"

"I guess not; the links were bright as day, or I shouldn't have got over them as quickly as I did."

"Quickly? How quickly?" The district attorney stole a glance at the coroner, which made Sweetwater advance a step from his corner.

"I don't know. I don't understand these questions," was the sullen reply.

"You walked quickly. Does that mean you didn't look back?"

"How look back?"

"Your sister lit a candle in the small room where her coat was found. This light should have been visible from the golf links."

"I didn't see any light."

A few more questions followed, but they were of minor import and aroused less violent feeling. The serious portion of the examination, if thus it might be called, was over.

The coroner glanced meaningly at the district attorney, who, tapping with his fingers on the table, hesitated for a moment before he finally turned again upon Arthur Cumberland.

"You wish to return to your sister? You are at liberty to do so. I will trouble you no more tonight. Your sleigh is at the door, I presume."

They watched him go, each as silent as he. The coroner tried to speak, but succeeded no better than the boy himself. When the door opened under his hand they all showed relief, but were startled back into their former attention by his turning suddenly in the doorway with this final remark:

"What did you say about a bottle with a special label on it being found at our house? It never was, or, if it was, some fellow has been playing you a trick. I carried off those two bottles myself. One you see there; the other is—I can't tell where, but I didn't take it home. That you can bet on."

One more look, followed by a heavy frown and a low growling sound in his throat—which may have been his way of saying goodby—and he was gone.

A few more words, some things said as to the morrow, and Sweetwater was also gone. The district attorney and the coroner still sat, but very little passed between them. The clock overhead struck the hour. Both looked up but neither moved. Another fifteen minutes; then the telephone rang. The coroner rose and lifted the receiver. The message could be heard by both gentlemen in the extreme quiet of this midnight hour.

"Dr. Perry?"

"Yes; I'm listening."

"He came in at a quarter to 12, greatly agitated and very white. I ran upon him in the lower hall, and he looked angry enough to knock me down, but he simply let out a curse and passed straight up to his sister's room. I waited till he came out; then I managed to get hold of the nurse, and she told me this queer tale:

"He was all in a tremble when he came in, but she declares he had not been drinking. He went immediately to the bedside, but his sister was asleep, and he didn't stay there, but went over where the nurse was and began to hang about her till suddenly she felt a twitch at her side and, looking quickly, saw the little book she carries there falling back into place. He had lifted it and probably read what she had written in it during his absence.

"She was displeased, but he laughed when he saw that he had been caught and said boldly: 'You are keeping a record of my sister's ravings. Well, I think I'm as interested in them as you are and have as much right as you to read as you to write.' She made no answer, for they were innocent enough, but she'll keep the book away from him after this—of that you may be sure."

"And what is he doing now? Is he going into his own room tonight?"

"No. He went there, but only to bring out his pillows. He will sleep in the alcove."

"Drink?"

"No, not a drop. He has ordered the whisky locked up. I hear him moaning sometimes to himself, as if he missed it awfully, but not a thimbleful has left the decanter."

"Good night, Hexford."

"Good night."

"You heard!" This to the district attorney.

"Every word."

Both went for their overcoats. Only on leaving did they speak again, and then it was to say:

"At 10 o'clock tomorrow morning."

"At 10 o'clock."

CHAPTER XIII.

ON IT WAS WRITTEN—

SWEETWATER'S night's rest had not benefited him. He had seemed natural enough all through the lengthy conference, but a half hour later any one who knew him well would have seen at a first glance that his spirits were no longer at par.

When at 2 o'clock he entered the clubhouse grounds it was without buoyancy or any of the natural animation with which he usually went about his work. He wandered down on the golf links. Taking out his watch, he satisfied himself that he had time for an experiment and immediately started for Cuthbert road. An hour later he came wandering back on a different line. He looked soured, disappointed. When near the building again he cast his eye over its rear and gazed long and earnestly at the window which had been pointed out to him as the one from which a possible light had shone forth that night. There were no trees on this side of the house—only vines. But the vines were bare of leaves and offered no obstruction to his view. "If there had been a light in that window any one leaving this house by the rear would have seen it unless he had been drunk or a fool," muttered Sweetwater, in contemptuous comment to himself. "Arthur Cumberland's story is one lie. I'll take the district attorney's suggestion and return to New York tonight. My work's done here."

Yet he hung about the links for a long time and finally ended by entering the house and taking up his stand beneath the long narrow window of the closet overlooking the golf links. With chin resting on his arms, he stared out over the sill and sought from the space before him and from the intricacies of his own mind the hint he lacked to make this present solution of the case satisfactory to all his instincts.

What was that he saw in the vines—not on the snow of the ground, but halfway up in the tangle of small branches clinging close to the stone of the lower story, just beneath this window?

He surely could see—something that glistened, something that could only have got there by falling from this window. Could he reach it? No; he would have to climb up from below to do that. Well, that was easy enough.

With the thought, he at once rushed from the room. In another minute he was beneath that window; had climbed, pulled, pushed his way up; had found the little pocket of netted vines observable from above; had thrust in his fingers and worked a small object out; had looked at it, uttered an exclamation curious in its mixture of suppressed emotions and let himself down again into the midst of the two or three men who had scented the adventure and hastened to be witnesses of its outcome.

"A vial," he exclaimed, "an empty vial, but"— Holding the little bottle up between his thumb and forefinger he turned it slowly about until the label faced them.

On it was written one word, but it was a word which invariably carries alarm with it.

That word was poison.

Sweetwater did not return to New York that night.

TRY A PRESS WANT AD.

"A VIAL," HE EXCLAIMED.

"I regret to disturb you, Arthur, but my business is of great importance and should be made known to you at once."

Sullen and unmollified, the young man thus addressed eyed apprehensively his father's old friend, placed so unfortunately in his regard, and morosely exclaimed:

"Out with it! I'm a poor hand at guessing. What has happened now?"

"A discovery—a somewhat serious one, I fear; at least it will force the police to new action. Your sister may not have died entirely from strangulation. Other causes may have been at work!"

"Now, what do you mean by that?" Arthur Cumberland was under his own roof and in presence of one who should have inspired his respect, but he made no effort to hide the fury which these words called up. "I should like to know what deviltry is in your minds now. Am I never to have peace?"

"Peace and tragedy do not often run together," came in the mild tones of his would be friend. "Mr. Ranelagh's assertion that he found Miss Cumberland dead when he approached her may not be, as so many now believe, the reckless denial of a criminal disturbed in his act. It may have had a basis in fact."

"I don't believe it. Nothing will make me believe it," stormed the other, jumping up and wildly pacing the drawing room floor. "It is all a scheme for saving the most popular man in society. But you haven't told me your discovery. It seems to me it is a little late to make discoveries now."

"This was brought about by the persistence of Sweetwater. He seems to have an instinct for things. He was leaning out of the window at the rear of the clubhouse—the window of that small room where your sister's coat was found—and he saw, caught in the vines beneath, a little bottle an apothecary's vial. It was labeled 'Poison' and it came from this very house."

"How do you known that vial came from this house?"

Dr. Perry looked up, astonished. He was prepared for the most frantic ebullitions of wrath, for violence even or for dull, stupid, blank silence. But this calm, quiet question of fact took him by surprise. He dropped his anxious look and replied:

"It has been seen on the shelves by more than one of your servants. Your sister kept it with her medicines, and the druggist with whom you deal remembers selling it some time ago to a member of your family."

"Which member? I don't believe this story; I don't believe any of your"— He was fast verging on violence now.

"You will have to, Arthur. Facts are facts, and we cannot go against them. The person who bought it was yourself. Perhaps you can recall the circumstance now."

"I cannot." He did not seem to be quite master of himself. "I don't know half the things I do; at least, I didn't use to. But what are you coming to. Are you going to call it suicide? You can't, with those marks on her throat."

"We're going to carry out our investigations to the full. We're going to hold the autopsy, which we didn't think necessary before. That's why I am here, Arthur. I thought it your due to know our intentions in regard to this matter. If you wish to be present you have only to say so; if you do not you may trust me to remember that she was your father's daughter as well as my own highly esteemed friend."

Shaken to the core, the young man sat down.

"My duty is here," he said at last "I cannot leave Carmel."

"The autopsy will take place tomorrow. How is Carmel today?"

"No better." The words came with a shudder. "Doctor, I've been a brute to you. I am a brute! I have misused my life and have no strength with which to meet trouble. What you propose to do with—with Adelaide is horrible to me. I didn't love her much while she was living, but if I could have saved her body this last humiliation I would willingly die right here and now and be done with it. Must this autopsy take place?"

"It must."

"Then tell them to lock up every bottle the house holds or I cannot answer for myself. I should like to drink and drink till I knew nothing, cared for nothing, was a madman or a beast."

"You will not drink." The coroner's voice rang deep; he was greatly moved. "You will not drink, and you will come to the office at 5 o'clock tomorrow. We may have only good news to impart. We may find nothing to complicate the situation."

Arthur Cumberland shook his head. "It's not what you will find"— said he, and stopped, biting his lips and looking down.

Twenty-four hours later, in the coroner's office, sat an anxious group discussing the great case and the possible revelations awaiting them. The district attorney, Mr. Clifton, the chief of police and one or two others among them Sweetwater, made up the group and carried on the conversation. Dr. Perry only was absent. He had undertaken to make the autopsy and had been absent for this purpose several hours.

Five o'clock had struck, and they were momentarily looking for his reappearance, but when the door opened, as it did at this time, it was to admit young Cumberland, whose white face and shaking limbs betrayed his suspense and nervous anxiety.

The door opened again and the coroner appeared, looking not so much depressed as stunned. Picking out Arthur from the group, he advanced toward him with some commonplace remark, but desisted suddenly and turned upon the others instead.

"I have finished the autopsy," said he. "I knew just what poison the vial had held and lost no time in my various tests. A minute portion of this drug, which is dangerous only in large quantities, was found in the stomach of the deceased, but not enough to cause serious trouble, and she died, as we already decided, from the effect of the murderous clutch upon her throat. But," he went on sternly as young Cumberland moved and showed signs of breaking in with one of his violent invectives against the supposed assassin, "I made another discovery of still greater purport. When we lifted the body out of its resting place something besides withered flowers slid from her breast and fell at our feet. The ring, gentlemen—the ring which Ranelagh says was missing from her hand when he came upon her and which certainly was not on her finger when she was laid in the casket—rolled to the floor when we moved her. Here it is. There is one person here, at least, who can identify it. But I do not ask that person to speak. That we may well spare him."

He laid the ring on the table, not too near Arthur, not within reach of his hand, but close enough for him to see it. Then he sat down and hid his face in his hands. The last few days had told on him. He looked older by ten years than he had at the beginning of the month.

The silence which followed these words and this action was memorable to everybody there concerned. Some had seen and all had heard of young Cumberland's desperate interruption of the funeral and the way his hand had invaded the flowers which the children had cast in upon her breast. When at last Arthur looked up it was with a dazed air and an almost humble mien.

"Providence has me this time," he muttered. "I don't understand these mysteries. You will have to deal with them as you think best."

Turning away, he made for the door. There was in his manner desperation approaching to bravado, but no man made the least effort to detain him. Not till he was well out of the room did any one move; then the district attorney raised his finger, and Arthur Cumberland did not ride back to his home alone.

J. E. MCCREA, LINCOLN'S MESSENGER, IS DEAD.

John E. McCrea, a Civil War veteran, who acted as a personal messenger for President Lincoln in carrying messages to General Sherman during the famous march to the sea, and who served as one of the guard of honor at Lincoln's funeral, died in his home, 65 Eliabezth avenue, Newark, Sunday. For more than fifteen years Mr. McCrea had been supervisor in the street, water and lighting departments.

After recovering from a serious illness with erysipelas, Mr. McCrea suffered a relapse two weeks ago and Saturday he was stricken with apoplexy, which resulted in his death.

Born in New York sixty-nine years ago, Mr. McCrea came to Newark in 1876 and had remained in Newark since. He was well known in fraternal circles and was an active Republican. He served in the war with the Seventh Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry. After being in active service he received his special detail as Lincoln's messenger in 1864, being ordered to the White House.

The above ordinance was advertised and it is the intention of the Council to pass the same on third reading at a meeting to be held Monday evening, May 22. This will not strictly comply with the law, but under conditions it would be impossible to adopt the ordinance on last reading and have it in effect by May 15, as provided for in the law, for it has to be advertised for two weeks.

Special Excursions Barred?

One of the questions the State Utilities Board will be asked to decide today for the railroad companies is whether or not special excursions are allowed under the new utility laws. Some of the railroads have interpreted the act to prohibit all special rate excursions, such as are run to the shore resorts during the summer.

The Sunday-school of the First M. E. church will hold its bi-monthly meeting in Vincent chapel, this evening.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. HENRY P. PUGH

The funeral of Mrs. Henry P. Pugh was held at the late residence on West Fourth street, yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, there being a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. C. S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, conducted the service, during which he spoke of the admirable Christian qualities of Mrs. Pugh and of her devotion to her home and church. There were many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends.

The pall-bearers, all relatives of Mrs. Pugh, were her son, Roy Pugh and three sons-in-law, Rev. George S. Bolsterle, of West Leyden, N. Y., Harry W. Fraleigh, and J. P. Kirch, of this city. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

As some of the contestants have already lost two games, the number will be reduced still further after this round has been played. The contest will be finished in about ten days.

FOR SHELTER HOME

Mrs. Van Hoesen, Plainfield S.P.C.A. Agent, Makes an Appeal for Funds.

A REFUGE FOR ANIMALS.

Contributions Already Received Are Acknowledged—Any Donations Will Be Accepted Gladly by the Society's Agent.

As agent of the Plainfield S. P. C. A., Mrs. Stephen H. Van Hoesen, today, made the following appeal for funds for a shelter home for animals:

"The marvelous growth of Plainfield is a matter of pride to our city. As any community grows the work for the humane society to do is increased, and the resources for the maintainance of this grand organization must correspondingly be increase if it is to cope with its added burden. Some cities have recognized this need and there people have come forward and generously responded to the call for funds to carry on the work and to enable the S. P. C. A. to reach out and augment its facilities to deal with cruelty and to practically give aid in needy cases.

"This is what the Plainfield Society intends to do provided the money can be obtained. Plainfield for her own sake as well as for the sake of the defenseless animals should not be behind in this work. For sometime there has been felt the need for an animal shelter and clinic for horses. I often see a case which needs to be taken to just such a place; if given a little rest and medical attention it could be restored to its owner in working condition, thereby helping both man and beast.

"The society, of course, would like to own a piece of property for this purpose, but that at present at least, is out of the question, but it does seem it is not asking too much to expect funds enough to rent a place and erect some sheds and kennels and provide food for the sick and poor animals of the city and our territory until they can be given a humane death or returned to their owners well. This is help which human beings owe to the dumb creatures for their services to us. It is obvious that it is essential to have a refuge as near the city as possible, so that sick or lame animals shall not have too far to go, and also that other animals may as easily as possible be taken or sent there.

"It is not the purpose of such a shelter to keep alive such animals as should be killed, but so long as they do live they should receive intelligent care and kindness, and when they must be killed be humanely put to death. Cats would not so frequently be abandoned if they could be taken to some place of refuge, and hungry, homeless cats necessarily are unhappy and often disturb our slumber. Hungry felines too sometimes catch birds, which we wish to protect, homeless dogs allowed to roam at large very often couse serious trouble. The effect of such a place on children would be for good, instead of stoning a homeless creature as sometimes we regret to say they do, they could be taught a lesson in kindness by taking the animal to the shelter or calling upon some one to do so. The principle of kindness to animals instilled in a child's mind is going to make him a better citizen.

"Most cities have homes of various kinds for people but no city or large town should feel that it has done its duty along the line of charity until it has one place at least for sick, homeless or lost animals of all kinds. When a man is able to pay a nominable sum for the care of his horse he will be expected to do so, but sometimes he cannot even pay a little, and meanwhile the poor beast should not be obliged to suffer so greatly on account of the poverty of its master. An objection to help human beings sometimes is made that they have squandered what they had or in other ways are not deserving, but this charge can never be brought against our dumb friends. Can we not in imagination put ourselves for a moment only in the place of a sick, homeless, hungry or abused dumb beast?

"Oh, it would mean so much to them to have a little straw for a bed, a square meal and kindness, and it takes so comparatively little to make an animal happy. My plea is for funds to provide a shelter for those that cannot speak for themselves. The following are those who have very kindly responded to my appeal:

LEWIS C.J. RANDOLPH IS CALLED BY DEATH

Lewis C. J. Randolph, aged 77 years, died at 9 o'clock this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Herman A. Weber, on West Front street. He had been ill for some time with Bright's disease and had been confined to his bed for the past month under the care of a nurse.

Mr. Randolph was a farmer and before coming to Plainfield resided on a large farm in Piscataway township. He was a member of the First Baptist church, and a regular attendant at the services. His wife died several years ago. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Weber. The funeral will be held at the late residence, 538 West Front street, Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, will officiate.

Knights of Columbus Carnival.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, has completed arrangements for its annual carnival to be held on the vacant lot, West Front street and Grant avenue, May 29-June 3. Mt. Zion's New Pastor.

Rev. Littleton Sturgess, who was pastor of the A. M. E. church, Morristown, for the past four years, has been sent to the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, this city, to succeed the late Rev. J. T. He was pastor of the church at Atlantic Highlands five years, going from there to Morristown.

PLAYGROUND BEQUEST TO BE PAID THE CITY

Acting upon the instructions of Joseph P. Tate, executor of the estate of Mrs. M. E. Edgerton, the Councilmanic finance committee, through Councilman F. E. Mygatt, offered a resolution at the adjourned meeting of the Council last night, providing for the general release and refunding bond in the matter of the bequest of $5,000 to the Playground Commission, and the mayor and clerk were instructed to execute the same so that the money can be paid over to the commission. The Council was instructed in the matter by W. A. Coddington, whose letter of advice accompanied the communication. The letter was filed.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Gloak and adopted, Monday evening, June 5, was fixed as the time when bids will be received for macadamizing certain streets as provided in an ordinance recently adopted. This improvement calls for the issuing of bonds.

The Commercial Mills in a communication to the Council stated that the city had made a mistake in the concern's bid for furnishing the best oats, received a week ago, that the price should have been $1.04 and not 99 cents as announced. The concern said that owing to changes in the market prices it would be impossible to furnish the best oats for less than $1.04. The matter was referred to the fire and building committee. A communication from W. M. Stillman regarding a tax matter, was referred to the finance committee.

Violated Health Ordinance.

Arrested on complaint of Health Inspector Addis, John Neadle, a wholesale groceryman on Liberty street, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in court this morning. Neadle was accused of violating the health ordinance in allowing fruit and vegetables to decay in the rear of his store. He was fined $5, which he paid.

CONSTITUTION TALK

Prof. E. M. Sait Lectures on America's Instrument of Government.

LONG CONSIDERED SACRED.

Equal Suffrage League Hears Instructive Discourse on Document Framed by Fathers of the American Republic.

Prof. E. M. Sait, of Columbia University, lectured on "The Constitution of the United States," before the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, last night, in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, which were most generously loaned for the occasion. In beginning his interesting and instructive discourse the professor said it was obviously impossible in an evening to consider the Constitution itself, the study of which document occupies a full year at Columbia. He called attention to the fact, however, that the Constitution as written in 1787 was one thing; as it has been worked out quite another; while it bids fair to develope into a third thing equally distinct and different.

One phase of the development is quite interesting, and that is the growing spirit of criticism manifest in many quarters. The conception of the Constitution in the mind of the student of today, he declared, is not the same as that held formerly, not even as recently as ten years ago. While foreigners have pointed to defects in our Constitution, we have regarded it with almost worshipful admiration. It has been part of our National patriotism to be satisfied and more than satisfied with it.

At first, the Constitution, he said, was much assailed. Thomas Jefferson and Patrick Henry were among those who attacked it vehemently. Later, universal homage was accorded it, until it became paramount to lese majeste to criticise it. William H. Gladstone characterized it as "the greatest instrument ever struck off by human brain," and de Torqueville said it "remedied the wrongs of mankind without drawing a tear or shedding a drop of blood." For a century such exaggerated praise made professors afraid to attempt any criticism under pain of instant dismissal from their colleges. However, more recently the course of events have forced the development of criticism leveled against the Constitution.

The convention which met in 1787 to frame the Constitution, the lecturer declared, was composed of a group of men never equalled elsewhere in the world as representatives of broad culture and experience in life. They were not the men for most part who had fought the Revolution.

Problems had arisen with were unable to cope. The questions of national bankruptcy and economic prosperity were to be handled and only the most experienced, and most practical men could do so. The crisis demanded men of broad learning, not theorists. Theory has been the ruin of many governments. For example, Abbe Sieyes supplied France with new constitutions as often as occasion arose, and while they were all most able, all were absolutely impossible to put into practice. Philosophers have never been good constitution builders. We see the Republic of France at present existing under a constitution drawn up by men who wished to create a monarchy. Government is a living thing, an organism dependent on environment, and connected with all living things. Therefore, the Constitutional Assembly was composed of practical experienced men, some of whom were formerly Tories, and only six of whom were signers of the Declaration of Independence. They were men of the wealthy, propertied class, and therefore imbued with the necessity of safe-guarding the rights of property.

The Constitution of the United States is a tissue of compromises. The little states feared lest the big states should overpower them, so they were accorded equal representation in the Senate to satisfy them. Then the big states feared the little states which were more numerically, so the House of Representatives was arranged to suit the big states. The North claimed representation in accordance with the whole free population; to equalize matters the South demanded the right to count each negro as three-fifths of a man. The interests of the North were commercial, so it stood for regulation of commerce. To offset this, the agricultural South demanded a guarantee of the slave trade.

These three great compromises are generally conceded but the Constitution is filled with others not so frequently noted. In the provisions made for the election of President, it was arranged that should no one man receive a majority vote of all

ESCAPED FROM ASYLUM PICKED UP BY POLICE

George Coon, who was arrested last October charged with an attempted assault on Mrs. Martin O'Loughlin, at a lonely spot on Park avenue at night, escaped from the State asylum at Trenton several days ago and was picked up last night by Patrolman McDonald while wandering about the same neighborhood where the assault on Mrs. O'Loughlin was attempted.

Coon was brought to police headquarters and incarcerated. He was arraigned this morning before Judge William G. DeMeza charged with being disorderly, and insulting women in the street. He was remanded until tomorrow morning and in the meantime the Somerset county authorities were notified of the capture.

Coon is demented and is a dangerous character to be at large, it is said. When asked by the court whether he had been home he said he hadn't arrived there yet, but expected to go home today. He will probably be taken back to Trenton.

COLLISION THEY SAY NOT MARSH'S FAULT

Chief Kiely said this morning that he had made a thorough investigation of the accident in which Santi Conti was badly injured yesterday, with the result that unless Conti dies there will be no action taken against A. L. C. Marsh, whose automobile struck the man. According to an eyewitness of the accident Conti was wabbling on his wheel and Mr. Marsh, the police say, used every effort to stop his car which was going at 12 miles an hour, but was unable to prevent the man from getting directly in front of the car. An examination of the ground where the accident took place showed that the brakes had been put on the car and the wheels dragged in an endeavor to make a stop.

At the hospital it was said this afternoon that Conti was improving slowly and that amputation, which was feared yesterday, would not be necessary. No statement has been taken from the injured man by the police so that his version of the accident is not yet obtainable. He does does not talk English.

HOSPITAL GOVERNORS THANK MR. ACKERMAN

At the May meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital the medical report for the month of April showed 38 patients in the wards and private rooms on April 1, and 87 admitted during the month, making a total in wards and private rooms of 125. Of these, 60 were discharged cured, and 23 improved. There were 5 deaths. There were 14 ambulance calls, and 1291 total patient days treatment. Total patients treated in all departments during the month, 217. In the dispensary, 92 patients were treated, and 10 in the tuberculosis pavilion.

The legislative committee reported that an amendment had been secured to the Act of 1886, increasing the amount which cities may appropriate for hospitals from $1,500 to $10,000. A vote of thanks was extended to Senator Ackerman for the help wich he gave the legislative committee in this matter. A vote of thanks was also extended to the pupils of the Hartridge School for their gift of $385, being the proceeds of the fair held on April 8 for the benefit of the children's ward fund.

A resolution was adopted appropriating $300 a year as a salary for the pathologist and bacteriologist. The application of the Anti-Tuberculosis League for permission to inaugurate a day camp, as an experiment in the educational work conducted by the league, was granted. The application of the league for a renewal of the present agreement with the hospital for another year was also granted. These requests had the unanimous endorsement of the Medical Board.

The annual election of governors was held, resulting in the election of seven governors to serve for a period of three years, and leaving one vacancy to be filled at the next meeting. The following were elected: James W. DeGraff, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Henry L. Hall, Percy H. Stewart, Samuel Townsend, John M. Whiton and Henry L. DeForest. Mr. DeForest is a new member and takes the place of H. W. Beebe, who declined a re-election.

OHIO RIVER VICTIM PERHAPS KNOWN HERE

The body of a man apparently fifty years of age, the clothing of which contained a card bearing the inscription, "Charles Hartman, Local Union, No. 80, I. A. T. S. E. Elizabeth-Plainfield," was found in the Ohio River on the outskirts of Cincinnati, yesterday afternoon. It was discovered by boys fishing off a bridge and was taken in charge by the police. The man weighed about 200 pounds and the clothing was neat and of good material. There were no other means of identity beyond the card.

Local No. 80 is an organization of theatrical stage employes from Elizabeth and this city, the initials standing for "International Alliance Theatrical Stage Employes." "Jack" Hogan, of the Plainfield theatre staff, is a former president of No. 80 and was seen by a Daily Press reporter today but did not know of any member named Charles Hartman. There was a William Hartman, he said, who belonged to the Trenton local and who worked in Elizabeth at odd times. He was known as "Sunny" and was about forty years of age. The last the Plainfield man heard of him he was a member of the stage crew at the State Street theatre, Trenton.

PLAN REVIVAL MEETINGS AT CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Rev. G. W. Bailey, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, announces a series of "Great Soul Saving Meetings," to be held at the church every evening from May 14 until June 2. Mr. Bailey will be assisted in the services by Rev. W. H. Skipwith, who is said to be the "only international singing evangelist the race has."

Mr. Skipwith has conducted meetings in the largest colored churches in this country and recently toured Europe. There will be special music at these services by a chorus choir and all members and friends of the church are invited to attend any and all meetings.

Robert L. Pierce Stricken.

Constable Robert L. Pierce, of New Market, who is widely known in Plainfield, suffered a severe stroke of paralysis at his home, late last night, and is reported to be in a serious condition. One side is affected and his speech is also badly impaired. Dr. Whitford, of New Market, is in attendance.

ENTRIES FOR MEET

Five Races at Watchung Hunt Club's Annual Meet on Saturday.

FAST HORSES IN ALL CLASSES.

Three Cash Purses Offered in Each Event—Al. Pinkerton's "Booger Red" to Be on Track Here for First Time.

Judging from the entries the annual spring steeplechase meet of the Watchung Hunt Club to be held at the driving park, Saturday afternoon will be the best in the history of the club. Every one of the five races are filled with some of the best entries in this part of the country, and lovers of this kind of sport will have an exceptional opportunity to see fine racing. The purses are all well worth trying for and the club has made an unusual effort to make this the banner meet.

One of the big features of the meet will be the appearance in the fifth race for the Westfield purse, of Al. Pinkerton's "Booger Red," probably one of the fastest horses for a half-mile stretch in this section of the country. Today this horse will try to break the record at Belmont Park.

Those who are familiar with horses will recognize in the following entries a particularly strong list:

First race—one mile—Oak Tree purse. For three-year-olds and upwards. Purse $125, of which $15 to the second horse and $10 to the third: Norwood, Meno, Good Riddance, Harold A. Frank, Nosegay, Prince Ching, Meach Hill Smug, Punch, Left, Elmer C., Al. H. Woods, Adele C.

Second race—one mile and a half—Plainfield purse. Hurdle, for three-year-olds and upwards. Purse $125, of which $15 to the second horse and $10 to the third: Meno, J. W. S., Faultless, Artilleryman, Macedona, Cannaynola, Nester, Flim Flam, Felix Isman.

BURGLARS AT WORK AT SCOTCH PLAINS

The homes of Ira G. Walker and Thomas J. Nichols, on Mountain avenue, Scotch Plains, were entered sometime between midnight Monday and 2 o'clock Tuesday morning and in both houses the burglars found little to carry away, having confined their operations to the lower floors in each place. The loss at Mr. Walker's consisted of a couple of nail files and a razor, while at Mr. Nichol's there was taken a suit case containing a set of books belonging to the Board of Education, which were recovered and a few trinkets of little value.

Marshal Rabig has a good description of the two men who are suspected of both burglaries and they have been traced to Somerville, where it is expected they will be apprehended today. The suit case containing the clerk's books was found in the bushes alongside the road leading to Plainfield.

Entrace was gained to both residences by forcing windows on the ground floor. Marshal Rabig stopped two suspicious characters on Mountain avenue earlier in the evening, but they gave a good account of themselves.

DRIVER'S RIB BROKEN WHEN HORSE RAN AWAY.

Roy Updike, a driver of one of Neuman Bros. delivery wagons, was badly injured by being thrown from the wagon on West Front street, this morning, when the horse he was driving ran away. It was said that the animal became frightened at an elephant which was being driven to the circus grounds at Grant avenue and took the bit in his teeth. Updike was unable to stop the animal and was thrown out on the road, sustaining severe lacerations and possibly a broken rib.

The horse was stopped by men attached to the circus.

Will Help Fresh Air Work.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church held its monthly business meeting, last night, but only routine business was considered. The reports showed the society to be in good condition. The social committee met afterward and decided to try and raise a stated sum of money for the county fresh air work, by subscription. The society voted $10 toward the fund for purchasing new dishes.

BORNMANN CHANGES PLEA TO NON VULT

In the Somerset County Court, this morning, John Bornmann, of Warrenville, former custodian of Warren township school funds, pleaded non vult to indictments for embezzlement and malfeasance of office. He had previously pleaded not guilty and his trial was to have commenced today, but Judge Clarence Case agreed to accept the change. At the request of the defendant's counsel, Alvah A. Clark, sentence was deferred for one week.

In addressing the court, Mr. Clark said he wished the delay because he could show later that Bornmann was innocent of any wrong inetnt and that he practically received no money belonging to the township. He has made restitution so far as possible, it was stated, and in every way sought to make amends. The exact amount involved has always been in dispute.

Mr. Bornmann's wife and daughter and numerous friends were in court.

AUTOMOBILE SPEEDERS ARE SCORED IN COURT

"Speeding by automobiles must stop in this city," declared Judge DeMeza this morning when two violators of the speed regulations were arraigned before him. The accident of yesterday noon in which an Italian bicycle rider nearly lost his life was awakened the police and the court to the fact that some drastic measures must be taken to protect pedestrians and others who are not automobilists.

Hiram A. Woodruff, of Westervelt avenue, North Plainfield, who was a arrested by Patrolman Messler, received a suspended sentence after getting a lecture on fast driving from the court. Messler claimed that Mr. Woodruff went a quarter mile in 41 seconds on Park avenue on Sunday.

P. Frank Stone, of West Front street, was another of those haled before the court. He, too, escaped with a suspended sentence. In his case it was a matter of avoiding a collision and the court took this into consideration.

Miss Gertrude Bowlby, of Crescent avenue, was arrested last evening charged with overspeeding. She was arrested by Patrolman Saffron who declared that he was nearly run down by the woman before she came to a stop. He escaped by jumping from his wheel on Park avenue, where the speeding was being done.

Last night a watcher counted twelve automobiles passing Front and Somerset streets without their tail lights burning. Several numbers were taken and it is likely the drivers of the cars will hear from the police.

MARTINE BIOGRAPHY NINETY-EIGHT WORDS

One of the first tests to which new members of the Senate or House at Washington, D. C., must submit, after taking their seats, is to write their biographies for the Congressional Directory—for, contrary to the popular belief, the biographies printed in the directory are not eulogies penned by admiring editors thereof, but every one himself writes the account of his career that appear in the official listings.

Senator James E. Martine met the test with one of the shortest biographies that has appeared in the directory; it fills seven lines, and is modest and of a character to class him among that comparatively short list of public men who did not take advantage of the opportunity to indulge in considerable self-advertising. Thus he writes about himself:

"James E. Martine, Democrat, of Plainfield, was born in the City of New York, August, 1850; attended the public schools, but, owing to the death of his father, was compelled to leave school at the age of 13 years; is by occupation a farmer; is married; never before held a public office; at the primary election for United States Senator he received 48,458 votes, to 39,554 for Edward C. Stokes, 38,818 for Charles N. Fowler and 36,240 for Franklin Murphy, Republicans, Frank McDermit, the other Democratic candidate, receiving 15,575 votes. His term of service expires March 3, 1917."

But the writing of brief biographies was not monopolized by Senator Martine, for of the New Jersey members elected to the House last November, not one used more than ten lines: Congressman Scully, seven; Congressman Tuttle, six; Congressman Townsend, ten, and Congressman McCoy, ten.

SINK TEST WELL

Middlesex Water Company Boring for Water on Park Ave. Over City Line.

PUMPING STATION IS PROBABLE.

Plainfield-Union Water Company Extends its Mains—More of Its New Wells Are Now in Use.

The Middlesex Water Company, which has acquired by purchase a twenty-six acre tract of land on Park avenue, just over the line in Middlesex county, has undertaken the work of sinking a test well on the tract for the purpose of ascertaining the possibilities for a water supply at that point. A preliminary survey assured the concern that the prospects for water there are good and within a short time it will know exactly whether it will be worth while sinking additional wells.

The tract is near the property of the Woodbrook Farms, and the company has been preparing for some time to sink a test well. If there is as much water there as indicated by the preliminary survey, a pumping station will be established and the mains throughout the county will be connected.

The Plainfield-Union Water Company has been laying a large water main from its pumping station in the Netherwood section through Leland and Woodland avenues passing the property of the Plainfield Country Club, extending as far as South Plainfield. This will afford the country club an opportunity to connect and secure a more abundant water supply, and the main will also give consumers in the intervening territory between this city and South Plainfield, an abundant supply with good pressure.

Seven of the new wells at the Netherwood plant are now working and there appears to be a satisfactory supply. The work of improvement is still going on, and when completed the company will be in better condition than ever to supply its customers with water. Some of the old wells are not being used at present, the supply being pumped from the seven new ones, recently completed.

The annual meeting of the directors of the company, which include former Senator John Kean and Frank Bergen, was held at the local office on North avenue, last night. Only routine business was transacted.

MISS LOUISE BIRD P. H. S. VALEDICTORIAN.

Principal Lindsay Best anounced the names of those who had attained the highest standing in the High School at assembly this morning. Miss Louise Bird will be valedictorian. The standing of Miss May Day and Miss Helen Pearce was so close that it was impossible to do otherwise that divide the honors of salutatorian. Miss Day will deliver the salutation and Miss Pearce the salutatory address. Miss Ruth Stryker received honorable mention. All these young women have high standings for their four years of study.

Removing Another Landmark.

The work of removing another old landmark in the city will soon start in the demolition of the old frame building on East Second street, next to the Salvation Army, where Charles H. Hand plans to erect a three-story brick building. This property was occupied for years by William Vail, father of W. Budd Vail, and owned by Joseph T. Vail, who disposed of it to Mr. Hand. The latter made a contract with Alex. Kane to remove the old dwelling and the work of removing the same will be started in a few days.

To Put Him Out of Misery.

Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen obtained an order from Antonio Sachi, an Italian pedler this morning, to take away the horse he was driving and have it destroyed. The animal was brought around to police headquarters by Patrolman Saffron yesterday afternoon. Saffron found it wandering around the street at Park avenue and Randolph road. It is in a pitiable condition and will be put out of his misery this afternoon. Sachi bought the horse two years ago for $3.50 and it is believed to have been half starving ever since.

Men's Club to Entertain.

The final entertainment of the Men's Club of the Congregational church will take place on Tuesday evening next at 8 o'clock in the church parlors. Miss Ruth Harris, soprano soloist of the First Baptist church will sing and Walter David, humorist and impersonator, will entertain. It will be "ladies' night."

NEW QUEEN CITY HOTEL WILL BE ONE OF THE FINEST IN THE STATE

When the Queen City Hotel is opened two weeks hence Plainfield will have one of the finest hostelries in the State. Proprietor Peter Floersch said this morning that there will be nothing left undone to make the guests comfortable and the cuisine will be equal to that of Shanley's or Martin's in New York, minus the exhorbitant prices. Two chefs who have been with Mr. Floersch for the past five years will be in charge of the kitchen and besides these Mrs. Floersch, than whom there is no better hotel woman in the country, will supervise personally the conduct of this end of the business.

The newly altered hotel will contain thirty-nine rooms, completely refurnished. Solid oak fruniture and the best bedding that money can buy will be used. Running water, telephones and Tungsten lights will be found in every room and a service equal to any New York hotel will be obtainable.

Mr. Floersch has already received applications enough to fill the hotel and he will be put to it to accomodate those who want to engage rooms. Uniformed bellboys and special attendants have been engaged and uniforms are now being made for them. Special waiters, long accustomed to high class trade have been engaged for the dining-room and this part of the service is calculated to be the finest Plainfield has ever known.

No expense has been spared in preparing for the innovation. In the main office there will be a rotunda, writing desks for transient and permanent guests; long distance telephone booths, with special trunk line wires; a compartment safe made especially to accommodate travelers who wish to entrust their valuables to the safekeeping of the house and in fact every known convenience for the traveler.

When the dining room is opened local people will see a marvel of neatness and attractiveness. For the business man who is unable to go home for dinner special provisions are to be made. Prompt service will be the keynote of the dinner hour and the viands will be of the best.

The new hotel will be run on the European plan. There will be a private dining room where those who want seclusion may be accommodated without any extra expense. J. A. Staats, who has been working hard for the past year in remodelling the old Iroquois is beginning to see the fruits of his labors. This morning he said that the hotel would be conducted strictly in accordance with the ideas promulgated by Mr. Floersch who has a reputation wich extends from Atlantic City to the other end of the State. Mr. Floersch hopes to open the new bar room on Saturday next and make a formal opening of the entire building within two weeks. There is every indication that the venture will be a success.

TO AILING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Plainfield.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretion when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, backache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that helps sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Plainfield woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Earnest Dorflinger, 400 Clinton avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I hold just as high an opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills today as I have for years. The cure they made in my case has been permanent and consequently I am glad to confirm my former testimonial." (Statement given January 19, 1911.)

On August 28, 1905, Mrs. Dorflinger gave the following account of her experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. "The first symptom of kidney trouble in my case was a dull, heavy pain in my back and head. This was followed by a tired, languid feeling and I knew that my kidneys were gradually giving out. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and getting a box at Randolph's Drug Store, I began their use. Before long my condition improved and I continued taking Doan's Kidney Pills until I was cured."

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The "open shop" declaration has been made by local contractors after the refusal of masons and hod-carriers to return to work at the present scale of $4.80 and $2.80 a day. Outside men are to be brought to the borough to fill the vacancies. One contractor declared he had secured enough masons to care for all the work he has on hand.

HANDLING OF DYNAMITE.

Trenton, May 10.—At the suggestion of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners, N. B. Nece, of Manahawken, appeared before the board yesterday to give further particulars regarding a complaint he had preferred against the Tuckerton Railroad Company for the manner in which it handles explosives. Mr. Nece objected particularly to a shipment of dynamite, which, he said, had been transported in a car attached to a passenger train. In addition to the ordinary risks attendant upon such a shipment, he argued, the lives of passengers had been needlessly endangered.

The railroad contended that the only times at which it handles dynamite there are wrecks along the coast to be destroyed. Under these circumstances, the railroad submitted, it would be a hardship to compel the running of a special train for such small shipments as are made. The board took both the complaint and answer under consideration.

HALF FARE FOR CHILDREN.

Public Utilities Rules That Special Rates are Legal.

Trenton, May 10.—Following a conference with legal representatives of the transportation companies yesterday the Board of Public Utilities Commissioners ruled that the sale of special passenger tickets for school children and those employed in charitable work will not be regarded as conflicting with the statute, pending an official determination of the point of issue. The full text of the ruling follows:

"The continuance of existing rates, which have the sanction of custom, where such rates are presumably of assistance in facilitating education and the administration of charities, and thus in line with public policy, will not be regarded as conflicting with the statute prior to the hearing and determination of specific cases involving the points at issue."

Caruso Faces Operation.

Milan, May 10.—Professor Della Vedova, who operated on Signor Caruso, the noted tenor, in 1906 and again in 1908 for polypus of the larynx, says the singer's present trouble is due to the same cause and a third operation is indispensible. The doctor blames Caruso for overstraining his voice, but is convinced that he will recover it after another operation.

SEEK GRADE CROSSINGS.

Central Railroad Places Blame on City of Elizabeth.

Trenton, May 10.—In making answer to the complaint of the city of Elizabeth, filed with the State Public Utilities Commission, complaining of the dangerous conditions that exist in Elizabeth and vicinity on the line of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, and suggesting a remedy whereby it will be impossible to have a repetition of the accident which took place some time ago at the Elizabeth avenue crossing, when three persons were killed, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in an answer filed with the commission yesterday, has come out in a very bold manner and puts the proposition of abolition of grade crossings squarely up to the local authorities where dangerous conditions exist through grade crossings.

The Central Railroad Company charge that they have been for several years vainly importuning the officials of Elizabeth to co-operate with them for the abolition of grade crossings in that city. The company says it was willing to pay the greater part of the expenses for the abolition of grade crossings. The answer of the company practically puts the whole matter of grade crossings in Elizabeth up to the authorities of Elizabeth and the State Board of Public Utilities Commissioners.

CAT IN ORGAN.

Congregation Wondered Why Hymns Suddenly Ceased.

Cranford, May 10.—A story is being told here of how a pussy cat stopped an organ from playing hymns in the First M. E. church last Sunday. When Miss Mendell, organist of the First M. E. church, played the prelude in the morning the organ worked all right. When the first hymn was given out the organ refused to work and the congregation sang the hymn and the next one without the organ accompaniment.

During the second hymn Miss Mendell heard a gentle meow from the inside of the organ. Judge W. W. Mendell, the oldest living member of the church, and B. F. Randolph, superintendent of the Sunday-school, made an investigation and found a large maltese cat belonging to Postmaster J. E. Warner, who lives near the church, calmly sleeping in the organ. The two man grabbed the cat and removed her outside the building, after which the organ worked satisfactorily.

Trolley Service Regulation.

Trenton, May 10.—A public hearing was given by the Board of Public Utilities Commissioners yesterday upon the application of the New Jersey Rapid Transit Company for a modification of a previous order regulating the running of cars through Edgewood, Ramsay, Allendale, Hohokus, Orvil, Saddle River and Glen Rock. The company asked for a modification of the order so as to permit the running of two or three cars under the multiple unit system instead of separately. Facts brought out during the discussion made it seem probable that an adjustment of the differences could be arranged which would be satisfactory to both sides.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Kenney, of Sandford avenue, celebrated their wedding anniversary on Friday.

the electors, the House of Representatives should elect the President. And in this case the whole numbe of representatives of the several states should cast but one vote for their state. Thus the smaller states hoped to hold in check the big ones.

All these compromises take the form of checks and balances. The President is elected for four years, the Representatives for two, the Senators for six, Judges of the Supreme Court are appointed for life. Once elected or appointed there is no possible way of dislodging any of them during their tenure of office. It therefore follows that it is next to impossible to get control of the House and the Senate at the same time. It amounts to a vicious system intended by the makers of the Constitution to prevent popular control of the government. The records we have of the transactions of the Constitutional convention show clearly how carefully the wealthy class composing it sought to exclude the common people from any share in the government. They conceded just enough to get the Constitution ratified by the various states and no more. Gerry, of Connecticut said, "We have to concede the people enough to inspire them with the necessary degree of confidence." Other members voiced the sentiments that "The worst of all political evils is democracy," and "Political evils are due to the turbulence of democracy."

Alexander Hamilton advocated the election of the President for life, he in turn to appoint Governors of the states for life; the Senate and Supreme Court to hold office similarly. He desired a Senate composed of a few moneyed men as "the mass of people was turbulent and changing." Gouverneur Morris desired the formation of an "aristocratic body to keep down the turbulence of democracy."

We must note these great facts: First; The Constitution was built on a reactionary basis. A great change must inevitably come. The system of checks and balances, and the exclusion of the people from the government have got to go. A constitution should facilitate popular government. It is an entirely wrong idea to hold back changes.

Second; Economic things joined us together. At the time of making the Constitution, the government was on the verge of bankruptcy, it could not pay its debts; it could not borrow money abroad, and had no power to levy taxes on the people or force money on them. The states were appealed to but would not give money. Moreover, there were no interstate commerce laws. New Jersey farm produce sent into New York was taxed a custom duty. To retaliate, New Jersey taxed New York $1,800 on Sandy Hook Light House. Commercially, the states were thirteen different nations instead of one.

In 1785 Virginia and Maryland held a convention to determine certain rights relating to the Potomac River. They found they could not decide them without calling in representatives from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and other states, which was done in 1786. This suggested to Alexander Hamilton the advisability of a convention to discuss everything concerning all the states, which resulted in the Constitutionel convention of 1787 being held in Philadelphia. It was the outcome of commercial necessity. Environment was the greatest motive force, for environment forced economic union.

It resulted in a central government with no control over commerce, and economically our centralized political institutions are just where they were then. In Canada, the central government controls commerce; in South Africa the separate states have been eliminated entirely. For lack of that central control we are facing problems which have been long ago solved in other parts of the world.

Our theory of separate powers is an invention of Montesquieu, whose writings greatly influenced the makers of our Constitution. It was due to an error of observation of England's three branches of government. With a President elected for four years, legislature and senate elected for varying terms, none of whom can be dislodged, and federal judges appointed for life, it follows that there must inevitably be a constant warring. The three branches do not cooperate, they can not co-operate. Therefore, we cannot get reforms. No branch can exercise tyranny but we cannot have popular rule. It is a mistake in political philosophy which was accidentally adopted. The people cannot make themselves felt.

Were the Contitution followed the government simply would not go. But it is not. Of late years the President has become a great party leader. The Constitution provided that the President be elected by indirect vote. Actually he is elected by popular vote, and so becomes the representative of the nation.

It was the design of the Constitution to make the Senate serve as a check up the House of Representatives. But an Upper House has never been proved to be a good thing.

The Judiciary was appointed with the idea of guarding the Executive from the Legislative branch. Ours is the only Judiciary in the world who can say an act of legislature is invalid. The object originally was to prevent the intrenchment of popular government on reactionary powers. Nine men trained in the law, and in most pedantic thought, untouched by the people at large, can adjudge an act of Congress or of a State unconstitutional. Behind them is only the opinion of the people. They are above the law. While criticising the situation, one must admire the honesty and integrity with which our Supreme Court has sought to meet its problems.

Two Bids Were Submitted.

The Commercial Mills, one of the bidders for the contract of furnishing oats for the city departments, submitted two bids, one fo 99 cents a bushel for what is known in the trade as "standard oats," and another of $1.04 for what is known as No. 2 white, the best quality. An impression was given, it is said, that the Commercial Mills had changed its bid, but this is not so. It offered to furnish the same oats as used last season for 99 cents, but also submitted another bid of $1.04 for the best quality.

Traffic Congestion Relieved.

Maintaining a rigid rule of "to the right," which went into effect on Monday morning, the traffic policemen have managed to reduce the traffic congestion in the center of the city to a minimum. Patrolmen Messler and Saffron have been kept busy regulating the traffic in the central part of the city during the day and McDonald and Dobson at night.

An Entertainment.

An entertainment will be given in the Sunday-school room of the Seventh Day Baptist church tomorrow evening by the Christian Endeavor Society of the church for the purpose of raising funds to purchase and erect swings and see-saws and other simple playthings for the children. There will be several novel features to the entertainment and a pleasant time is expected.

Is a Practicing Physician.

IF you have never had a bank account you cannot understand the feeling of independence and happiness that comes with the possession if one.

A great writer has said that many people with good incomes are more unhappy than beggars because they live beyond their means. If you have never had a bank account you realize the truth of this assertion and cannot understand the feeling or independence and happiness that you may so easily enjoy.

The Difference in a Good Piano and a Poor Piano

Most people know that there are all kinds of pianos from bad to best. Those about to purchase who have friends that own a

HALLET & DAVIS

Piano are fortunate, as they have an opportunity to judge what real piano value is.

Ask a Hallet & Davis owner, there are over 75,000 in America, if he ever found a piano he liked as well as his Hallet & Davis, and then ask what the price of his piano is and be agreeably surprised.

No question that the Hallet & Davis piano is as high grade a piano as is possible to make, but many wonder how it is possible to sell them at so moderate a price.

Here are the important reasons: 1st. The enormous annual output; 2nd. Ample capital, allowing the purchase of supplies in largest quantities; 3rd. 75 years experience which has taught the right way to build pianos; 4th. The company owns the finest piano factory in the world, equipped with the newest machinery throughout; 5th. The highest business efficieney is secured by the personnel of the officers of the company, who represent generations of piano builders.

The style B Hallet & Davis sells for $365, other upright styles up to $500. Why pay more, when you can buy nothing better? Why pay less, when for this amount of money you can buy the best? Don't buy a piano with your eyes shut. Remember a good piano will last a life time.

Come in and see the new styles or write for our booklet about pianos which should be in the hands of every piano buyer

HARRY LAMONT AT PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Harry Lamont, who with his wife, Flo Lamont, is one of the hits of the present bill at Proctor's theatre, is no stranger to Plainfield and has many friends in the city and borough. Mrs. Lamont is a cousin to Edward and Leonce Texier, of Chatham street, and frequently visited them at their former home in Watchung. He resides at Johnstown, N. Y., but is there very little of the time because of his vaudeville engagements. He begins a long tour over the western circuit in a short time.

The act presented by Mr. Lamont and his wife comprises character singing and impersonations, closing with a steam calliope imitation that never fails to "bring down the house." The team receives a half dozen encores every time it is given. Another number by Mr. Lamont, a French character song depicting a Parisian dandy telling of his flirtations, is one of the best things seen at Proctor's in months. Mrs. Lamont divides honors with her husband through knowing how to use an unusually clear and sweet alto voice.

MISS RAFFERTY BRIDE OF WILLIAM BURKE.

Miss Margaret Rafferty, of West Third street, will become the bride of William Burke, also of West Third street, this afternoon at St Mary's church. Rev. Bernard M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, will perform the ceremony. William Burke, of Newark, a cousin of the groom will be best man and Miss Mame Mackey, a friend of the bride, will act as bridesmaid.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents on West Third street, and the couple's wedding trip will be to Niagara Falls, where a week will be spent. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Burke will live in the borough.

Alexander Doig Surprised.

Alexander Doig, of Stebbins place, was given a surprise party at his home last evening, the occasion being the anniversary of this birthday. There were about twenty-five friends present and the evening was spent in dancing, enjoying vocal and instrumental music and about midnight refreshments were served. All wished Mr. Doig many happy returns of the day and the company joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne," before going home this morning.

Funeral of Edward Almgren.

The funeral services of Edward Almgren, who died at his home in Jersey City, a few days ago, were held yesterday afternoon at the home of his brother-in-law, William Albert, 127 Berckman street. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiated. There was a large attendance of friends and relatives. The burial was in the M. E. church cemetery.

George Hook Arraigned.

George Hook, the alleged burglar, who is accused of having broken into the drug store of Cadmus Brothers at the corner of Watchung and North avenues, on April 23, pleaded not guilty before Judge Atwater in the County Court at Elizabeth, this morning and his trial was set down for a week from today. Bail was fixed at $200. Former Judge William N. Runyon is counsel for Hook.

"The Plainfield" Moves.

Mrs. Emma J. Berrian, who has conducted "The Plainfield," a boarding house at 515 Park avenue, for several years, has purchased the brick house at the southwest corner of Madison avenue and Sixth street from Mrs. I. M. Van Syckle and will conduct there a boarding house for a few select guests. m-w-s

Planning for Children's Day.

E. church, held its regular business meeting in Vincent chapel, last evening, when reports for the past month were presented and plans were discussed for the observance of Children's Day, June 11. The school was shown to be in good condition and growing rapidly.

Funeral of Mrs. Dunham.

The funeral of Mrs. Eliza M. Dunham, who died at her home on Cottage place, was held in Bethel chapel yesterday afternoon. It was attended by a large gathering of friends and was conducted by Rev. F. D. Tildon, assisted by Rev. G. F. Bailey. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery.

NEW REAL ESTATE OFFICE—Will open up my new office on Monday morning at No. 155 North avenue, ground floor. Have already purchased a good size book for the purpose of listing every property in Plainfield. My object is to fill it full of the conditions of your property, including the size of mortgage on same; then to leave the book to my grandchildren to read. I am the man who has been working in a four-dollar capacity to fight nervous prostration for the last four years and in those conditions have earned the title of selling and exchanging more property than any two agents in Plainfield. Now I am better and am ready for business. If you are coming to see me let me tell you something. Don't come near me if you expect me to handle your house, if it is sprinkled with signs or one sign which reads for sale by any broker, unless you want to sell out for 50 cents on the $1.00, for I want you to known that my feeling for you is the same as yours is for me, where you want to include me under any old broker. And let me tell you that these old signs are what make Plainfield real estate sell for less money than it does in any city or town along the Central, notwithstanding it has the name of "City Beautiful." Your any old broker means that some of them should be selling peanuts, instead of offering your property or spoiling the sale of it. Have sold seven properties in the last two weeks. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on the plan "that my time is yours." My office is not as it will be when the store front is changed, but will answer the purpose for a short time. 4 29 12

A REAL FARM FOR SALE—I say it is a real farm because it will produce more than any farm near Plainfield or City Beautiful. It is also a real lot proposition, because the depot is on the ground. D. SCIENTIFIC MYSTERIES.

The Problems of Mind, Life, Gravitation and Electricity.

A most remarkable state, condition or point in nature, the absolute zero of temperature, has been reached to within three degrees. This is considered to be a great scientific achievement. Hydrogen gas was solidified into pure white ice, and this was employed in the process of cooling helium, and all works of the hand of man were surpassed. The temperature sank lower and lower until a point only three degrees from absolute was reached, but the obdurate helium did not even liquefy.

The imagination, however vivid, cannot encompass what this intense cold implies. It may be the death of the activity of matter—that is, a state of rest so far as chemical reaction is concerned. Thus if the true zero of nature can be reached it may obtain that matter will put on new aspects and hitherto unknown properties, or it may expire, become chemically inert, totally devoid of heat and lifeless.

Still even then the standing mystery ever confronting man, always awaiting explanation, gravitation, will act. Nothing known can affect the universal attraction, forever directly as to mass, whether hot or cold.

However, the three degrees may never be overcome, or, indeed, they may, for it is now thought that science has no limits, the scientific mind being capable of solving all problems—so saith some mentologists.

The capital problem is first to discover what mind is, then life, next gravitation, next electricity, and reach a climax in finding how it is that gaseous masses glow and issue light when existing in frigid voids at zero absolute.

There is no solution in sight for any of these perplexing problems and harassing. No progress whatever has been made in finding what mind is, the reason being doubtless that mind is unable to think of itself. On trial it will be soon discovered that one is unable to set up a train of reasoning regarding his own or another's mind. "His own" implies an owner, but no fact as to who this owner is has ever been discovered. Humans are not perfect. —Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Belled the Boundary.

"Artificial boundaries" are generally invisible. But a highly artificial one forces itself upon the notice of the traveler by rail between the Lake of Lugano and Lake Maggiore. The frontier between Italy and Switzerland is followed for a considerable portion of the journey, and it is marked by a lofty barrier of wire netting hung with bells for the purpose of preventing smugglers from getting into Italy without attracting the attention of armed defenders of Italian revenue. In extreme contrast with this is the natural boundary between Italy and France provided by Mont Blanc, which in spite of its naturalness is so vague that it is still undetermined, though scarcely worth disputing, whether the summit of the mountain is Franco-Italian or all French.—London Chronicle.

Mortification Well Earned.

An Englishman, alone with Richardson, the novelist, said to him, "I am happy to pay my respects to the author of 'Sir Charles Grandison,' for at Paris, and at The Hague, and, in fact, at every place I have visited, it is much admired."

Richardson appeared not to notice the compliment, but when all the company were assembled addressed the gentleman with, "Sir, I think you were saying something about 'Sir Charles Grandison.'"

"No, sir," he replied. "I do not remember ever to have heard it mentioned."—From Orvine's "Cyclopedia of Anecdotes."

Remarkable.

"One of the astronomers claims that he has charted 60,000 new worlds."

"By George, it's remarkable!"

"Not so very when you consider the fact that he has the use of the largest telescope in the world."

"I wasn't thinking of that. What I consider strange is that with so many other worlds in existence the lady who is acting as stepmother for my children had to light on this one."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Memory Resents Distrust.

I remember telling the bishop of Ripon that I envied him his splendid memory. "I seem to remember a thing quite well," I told him, "then I get frightened."

The bishop said: "That's the worst thing you can do. Memory is a very delicate organ and resents distrust."—Ellen Terry in McClure's Magazine.

A Matter of Luck.

"Bad luck is sometimes good luck."

"Ridiculous!"

"Not at all. Did you ever get a club to fill a heart flush and afterward discover that some one else had a full house?"—Detroit Free Press.

A Legal Compliment.

"Yes, young Coke handled the case magnificently. He proved beyond the possibility of a doubt that the accused man wasn't guilty."

"But he was guilty, of course."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Keen Sense of Smell.

The aborigines of Peru can in the darkest night and in the thickest woods distinguish respectively a white man, a negro and one of their own race by the sense of smell.

When our hopes break let our patience hold.—Thomas Fuller.

This Boiler is a Coal Saver
Why? Because it is a BOYNTON and has the BOYNTON square fire pot, which increases fire surface about 25% over other boilers of like diameter.
The BOYNTON "square pot" is the greatest improvement yet devised in heating systems. It is square at the corners, hence clears free of cinders and ash each time the grate is turned. That means a live fire, always, and plenty of draft. See your dealer about the

THE painter, the architect and the builder, after careful tests and examinations, are able to tell you that Bridgeport Standard Prepared Paint is the best for you to use in decorating your home.
It has the "body," the "covering" quality, the ability to stand up under all sorts of adverse weather conditions; it is the most economical because it requires less of it to do the work.
You can buy cheap paints; you can buy paints that sell at a less price per gallon, but you pay for them in extra labor and in the greater quantity used, and the necessity for more frequent painting.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 14, 1911.

Topic.—The universal duty of making pledges.—Ps. lxi, 5-8. (Led by the lookout committee.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

There is abundant evidence in the Scriptures that vows or pledges are acceptable to God and helpful to man. It was not an unusual thing for the most consecrated godly men to make vows unto God, and in many instances the people of God are exhorted to vow unto Him. Testimonies are also to be found showing that God heard the vows and had respect unto them. The psalmist in the topical reference gives us such testimony when he says, "For thou, O God, hast heard my vows." Whatever vows he had made in the past had been accepted, and he was thus encouraged to make still further requests.

The universal duty of making pledges is suggested by the fact that there seems to be an instinct in man to make pledges or vows under certain conditions. When some special favor has been received or some forbearance exercised on man's behalf he desires to show his gratitude, to do something that he would not ordinarily have done, and he makes a vow unto God, sacredly promising to offer some gift or to perform some service, or perhaps even more naturally and more frequently the vow is made in the hope of some benefit desired, and its fulfillment is conditional upon a petition being favorably answered. This natural tendency of man to make vows is universal and strongly indicates that it is his duty to do so—that God expects it of him. God does expect us to make pledges unto Him and especially that we should take His Son, Jesus Christ, as our Saviour and pledge to Him ourselves and our all. Until we thus consecrate ourselves to Christ we have not fulfilled the desire of God concerning us.

The duty of paying vows, of keeping pledges, should be apparent to all. It is emphasized in the Scriptures. "When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it, for He hath no pleasure in fools." "Defer not to pay it." There may be no intention of breaking the vow, but how easy it is to defer the payment! But there should be no postponement. Delay in the performance of duty never makes it easier or more agreeable. The sooner we do that which ought to be done the better. There is always danger in delay. The passing of time lessens the force of duty upon us, while, on the other hand, if we promptly and cheerfully face the duty of the hour, incurred by solemn promise, we will likely be surprised at the ease with which it may be performed.

The psalmist kept his pledge. He paid his vows promptly and cheerfully. "I will sing praise unto Thy name, that I may daily perform my vows." As Endeavorers let us keep the pledge that we have given to Christ as it pertains to the society and all its works. As Christians let us redeem our vows of personal consecration to Christ in the daily life that we are living, and if in time of distress or trouble we have made special vows unto God let us not defer or refuse their payment.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. xxviii. 18-20; Josh. xxiv. 14, 15; Job xxii. 27; Ps. xxii. 25; l, 14; cxvi. 12-19; Isa. xix, 21; Eccl. v. 1-5; Jonah ii, 1-10; Acts xviii, 18.

Coming Back.

A graphic phrase has recently come into vogue. We have heard much of late of athletes who can "come back" after defeat and loss of vigor and regain their old power and success on the football field or the baseball diamond.

It has been said a thousand times that Jeffries, the brutal prizefighter, whose hopes of gain through the moving pictures of the fight were blasted by the Christian Endeavorers, couldn't "come back" to fighting trim after his years of luxurious living and dissipation.

The phrase is even applied to politics, and there are many guesses as to whether a certain ex-president can "come back" to power and popularity after the defeat of his party at the polls.

My question today is, Can a decadent Christian Endeavor society "come back?"

The causes for decadence in a Christian Endeavor society are obvious. They are the following:

1. Denominational opposition, which has transformed some thousands of societies into strictly denominational organizations, thus withdrawing them from the interdenominational fellowship.

2. Another cause of decline is lack of spiritual life in church and community. The only remedy for this is a revival of religion, or at least of spiritual interest even if there is no widespread evangelistic effort.

3. The removal of influential young people from the community who go away to college or elsewhere sometimes leaves a society leaderless for a time, and naturally the society suffers.

4. The indifference or hostility of the pastor deadens and sometimes kills a society. But a pastor often gets a new vision of the possibilities of a society or he does not always stay with the same church.

The moral of all this is that there is no hopeless situation for a society of Christian Endeavor.—F. E. Clark, D

CHAPTER XIV.

RANELAGH RESUMES HIS STORY.

FOR several days I had been ill. They were merciful days to me since I was far too weak for thought. Then there came a period of conscious rest, then renewed interest in life and my own fate and reputation. What had happened during this interval?

I had a confused memory of having seen Clifton's face at my bedside, but I was sure that no words had passed between us. When would he come again? When should I hear about Carmel and whether she were yet alive or mercifully dead, like her sister? I might read the papers, but they had been carefully kept from me. Not one was in sight. The nurse would undoubtedly give me the information I desired; but, kind as she had been, I dreaded to consult a stranger about matters which involved my very existence and every remaining hope.

I would risk one question, but no more. I would ask about the inquest. Had it been held? If she said yes—ah, if she said yes!—I should know that Carmel was dead, and the news, coming thus, would kill me. So I asked nothing and was lying in a sufficiently feverish condition when the doctor came in, saw my state and, thinking to cheer me up, remarked blandly:

"You are well enough this morning to hear good news. Do you recognize the room you are in?"

"I'm in the hospital, am I not?"

"Hardly. You are in one of Mr. O'Hagen's own rooms." (Mr. O'Hagen was the head keeper.) "You are detained now simply as a witness."

I was struck to the heart, terrified in an instant.

"What? Why? What has happened?" I questioned rapidly, half starting up, then falling back on my pillow under his astonished eye.

"Nothing," he parried, seeing his mistake and resorting to the soothing process.

"Send for Mr. Clifton," I said. "He's my friend; I can better bear"—

"Here he is," said the doctor as the door softly opened under the nurse's careful hand.

With a gesture to the nurse the doctor tiptoed out, muttering to Clifton as he passed some word of warning or casual instruction. The nurse followed, and Clifton, coming forward, took a seat at my side. He was cheerful, but not too cheerful, and the air of slight constraint which tinged his manner as much as it did mine did not escape me.

"Tell me why they have withdrawn their suspicions. I've heard nothing, read nothing, for days. I don't understand this move."

"You're stanch," he began. "You have my regard, Elwood. Not many men would have stood the racket and sacrificed themselves as you have done. The fact is recognzed now, and your motive"—

I must have turned very white, for he stopped and sprang to his feet searching for some restorative.

"Perhaps I had better wait till tomorrow before I satisfy your curiosity," said he.

"And leave me to imagine all sorts of horrors? No! Tell me at once. Is—is—has anything happened at the Cumberlands'?"

"Yes. What you feared has happened. No, no; Carmel is not dead. She is holding her own—just holding it—but that is something in one so young and naturally healthy."

I could see that I baffled him. It could not be helped. I did not dare to utter the question with which my whole soul was full. I could only look my entreaty. He misunderstood it, as was natural enough.

"She does not know yet what is in store for her," were his words, and I could only lie still and look at him helplessly. "When she comes to herself she will have to be told, but you will be on your feet then and will be allowed, no doubt, to soften the blow for her by your comfort and counsel. The fact that it must have been you, if not he"—

"He!" Did I shout it, or was the shout simply in my own mind?

"Yes—Arthur. His guilt has not been proved; he has not even been remanded; the sister's case is too pitiful and Coroner Perry too soft hearted where any of that family is involved. But no one doubts his guilt, and he does not deny it himself. You know—probably no one better—that he cannot very consistently do this in face of the evidence accumulated against him, evidence stronger in many regards than that accumulated against yourself."

Arthur! A booby and a boor, but certainly not the slayer of his sister, unless I had been woefully mistaken in all that had taken place in that clubhouse previous to my entrance into it on that fatal night. As I caught Clifton's eye fixed upon me I said: "Don't speak of me. I'm not thinking of myself. You speak of evidence. What evidence? Give me details. Don't you see that I am burning with curiosity? I shan't be myself till I hear."

"It all came about through you," he went on. "You told me of the fellow you saw riding away from the Whispering Pines at the time you entered the grounds. I passed the story on to the coroner and he to a New York detective they had put on this case. He and Arthur's own surly nature did the rest."

I cringed where I lay. This was my work. The person who drove out of the clubhouse grounds while I stood in the clubhouse hall was Carmel, and the clew I had given, instead of baffling and confusing them, had led directly to Arthur.

Seeing nothing peculiar—or, at all events, giving no evidence of having noted anything peculiar in my movement—Clifton went evenly on, pouring into my astonished ears the whole long story of the detective's investigations.

Instinctively I did not feel as certain of Arthur's guilt as Clifton did. I knew Arthur even better than I did his sisters. He was as full of faults and as lacking in amiable and reliable traits as any fellow of my acquaintance. But he had not the inherent snap which makes for crime. He lacked the vigor which—God forgive me the thought—lay back of Carmel's softer characteristics.

The episode of the ring confused me. I could make nothing out of it, could not connect it with what I myself knew of the confused experiences of that night. But I could recall the dinner and the sullen aspect, not unmixed with awe, with which this boy contemplated his sister when his own glass fell from his nerveless fingers. My own heart was not in the business—it was on the elopement I had planned—but I could not help seeing what I have just mentioned, and it recurred to me now with fatal distinctness. The awe was as great as the sullenness. Did that offer a good foundation for crime? I disliked Arthur. I had no use for the boy, and I wished with all my heart to detect guilt in his actions rather than in those of the woman I loved, but I could not forget that tinge of awe on features too heavy to mirror very readily the nicer feelings of the human soul. It would come up, and under the influence of this impression I said:

"Are you sure that he made no denial of this crime? That does not seem like Arthur, guilty or innocent."

"He made none in my presence, and I was in the coroner's office when the ring was produced from its secret hiding place and set down before him.

"ARE YOU SURE HE MADE NO DENIAL?"

There was no open accusation made, but he must have understood the silence of all present. He acknowledged some days ago, when confronted with the bottle found in Cuthbert road, that he had taken both it and another from the clubhouse just before the storm began to rage that night."

"The hour; the very hour!" I muttered.

"He entered and left by that upper hall window, or so he says, but he is not to be believed in all his statements. Some of his declarations we know to be false."

"Which ones? Give me a specimen, Charlie. Mention something he has said that you know to be false."

"Well, it is hard to accuse a man of a direct lie. But he cannot be telling the truth when he says that he crossed the links immediately to Cuthbert road, thus cutting out the ride home of which we have such extraordinary proof."

Under the fear of betraying my thoughts I hurriedly closed my eyes. I was in an extraordinary position myself. What seemed falsehood to them struck me as the absolute truth. Carmel had been the one to go home; he, without doubt, had crossed the links as he said. As this conviction penetrated deeply and yet more deeply into my mind I shrank inexpressibly from the renewed mental struggle into which it plunged me. To have suffered myself—to have fallen under the ban of suspicion and the disgrace of arrest—had certainly been hard, but it was nothing to beholding another in the same plight through my own rash and ill advised attempt to better my position and Carmel's by what I had considered a totally harmless subterfuge.

Forced by doubt to open my eyes, I met Clifton's full look turned watchfully on me. The result was calming. Even to my apprehensive gaze it betrayed no new enlightenment. My struggle had been all within. No token of it had reached him.

This he showed still more plainly when he spoke.

"There will be a close sifting of evidence at the inquest. You will not enjoy this, but the situation, hard as it may prove, has certainly improved so far as you are concerned. That should hasten your convalescence."

"Poor Arthur!" burst from my lips, and the cry was echoed in my heart. "What sort of man would you make him out to be when you accuse him of robbing the wine vault on top of a murderous assault on his sister?"

"I know. It argues a brute, but he"—

"Arthur Cumberland is selfish, unresponsive and hard, but he is not a brute. I'm disposed to give him the benefit of my good opinion to this extent, Charlie. I cannot believe he first poisoned and then choked that noble woman."

PERTH AMBOY FINDS HIGH SCHOOL EASY

The Perth Amboy High School baseball team came to town yesterday and went away with a Plainfield High School ball stowed away in a grip. Along with several bad blunders, in the ninth session there came a batting fest which looked for all the world like a Garrison finish and the local boys succumbed to the tune of 12 to 6.

A number of substitutes were on the lineup and VanDeventer, who was on the mound for P. H. S. suffered severely at the hands of the Perth Amboy batters. In the eighth Clarke banged out a three bagger with Denny and Hanrahan on the bags. Coley, guardian of the first sack for the visitors made a home run in this inning. A triple play marked the fielding of the home team in the seventh. With a man on second and another on third, Hunt, of Perth Amboy lined out to center. Good caught the ball low from the ground tossed it to second and Grisley lined it home in time to stop the runner from third. It was the first triple play of the season.

The lineup:

Perth Amboy—Spencer,p; Johnson, c; Colby, 1b; Therklesohn, 2b; Hunt, 3b; Browning, ss; Levy, lf; Char, cf; Pfeiffert, rf.

Dr. Groszmann Explains the Binet Method of Testing the Child.

ADDRESSES BOROUGH TEACHER

The Results of Investigation Show High Average of Mentally Defective Pupils Who Can Be Helped.

Dr. M. P. E. Groszmann, of Watchung Crest, gave a very interesting address to the teachers of North Plainfield borough yesterday on the Binet method of testing the stage of mental development in children. The last Legislature of this State passed a law requiring schools to employ suitable tests to determine what children are backward, and such children must be taught by a separate teacher for whom a special State appropriation shall be made. In order that the borough schools may be prepared properly to take up this work in the fall Superintendent Krebs invited the doctor to explain the Binet test, which is the one usually employed.

Dr. Groszmann began by pointing out the fact that age in years is by no means synonymous with age in development; that a pupil twelve years old chronologically may be either ten or fourteen in point of maturity. The labor laws, he said, should be based on the maturity age of children, and not on the chronological age. When a child is behind his grade, it is a sign that his maturity has not advanced with his years. When buying a suit for a boy, parents will buy a twelve-year size if it fits the boy, even though he may be ten or fourteen in age.

Investigations made in New Jersey have thus far failed to find a single feeble-minded child that did not come from a family in which there was a taint somewhere. The Binet test applied in a certain city of this State of ten thousand people, on fifteen hundred pupils showed that three per cent. forty-eight pupils, were feeble minded, and should not be in public school at all, and that sixteen per cent. in addition were below normal, and should be in special classes.

Tests applied in the Rahway Reformatory, the doctor said, brought forth the fact that a criminal of 19 responded to the tests for five-year-old normal children. Vineland is the only State institution for feeble minded children. This is totally inadequate for the needs of the case. Hundreds of feeble minded children are refused admittance for lack of room; and there is not in the State any institution for feeble minded adults. These therefore remain at Vineland just as long as possible. It is probable that in all schools there are at least ten per cent. of abnormal children. Many of these are savable and may become valuable members of society if properly treated. In the industries much is made of waste materials. Some of these, as coal tar, are more valuable than the original product. Likewise some of these subnormal children may become more useful members of society than some who are normal.

Dr. Groszmann showed that the Binet tests are intellectual only, not motor, physical or medical. They should therefore be supplemented by other tests to bring out more complete information repsecting the condition of the child. At the close of his address Dr. Groszmann showed articles used by him to test the senses of the children.

YOUTHFUL THIEVES IN PROBATION OFFICER'S CARE.

Pleading guilty to stealing a wheel belonging to A. L. Clement, of West Front street, in the County court, at Elizabeth, yesterday, Vincent Conway, the fifteen-year-old New York boy was placed in the hands of the probation officer and will have to pay a fine of $25.

Conway is the son of a New York policeman and his father testified that the boy had become incorrigible through keeping bad company. He pleaded with the court to be lenient with the boy and succeeded in saving him from being sent to the reform school at Jamesburg.

Work on College Progressing.

The work of restoring Mt. St. Mary College is progressing satisfactory, although it is doubtful whether the structure will be ready for occupancy in the fall ,when the college year begins. According to the new plans, the building will be considerably larger, an annex being provided for on the east end, and this will require more time to complete the work. The building will be practically fire-proof, making the repetition of the recent fire impossible.

WOMEN RAISE $600 FOR MISSIONARY WORK

Under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Societies of the Park Avenue Baptist church, the annual missionary rally was held in the church last night. The edifice was thronged with worshippers and as a result $600 was raised for missions, a considerable more than the amount apportioned to the church to contribute to this object.

The feature of the service was the missionary address by Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the pastor, who gave a thrilling description of conditions in Africa, telling of the work being done there by missionaries. He also displayed more than one hundred curios collected by himself while in Africa and explained their uses.

Another feature was the singing of African hymns by a double quartet of young people from the church. Miss Ruth Gabriella Maguire also sang several selections and gave recitations to the delight of the audience. At the close of the service Mr. Maguire made the appeal for subscriptions to the missionary fund and $600 was realized.

RETAIL COAL DEALERS TO VISIT THE MINES

The retail coal dealers along the line of the New Jersey Central, between Elizabeth and Somerville, are planning a two-days' excursion to the coal mines of Pennsylvania. The arrangements are in charge of Joseph Harrigan and Hugh V. Todd, and it is expected that fully sixty dealers and a few invited guests will enjoy the trip. The party will engage a couple of special coaches and will travel in style. Upon reaching the coal mining regions, the party will be the guests of the mine operators, who will provide an entertainment worth while.

The affair is called a "campaign education," and the party will be honored by the presence of Carroll Moore, of New York, the general eastern representative of the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Company, who will personally conduct the tour. So far as known this will be the first trip of the kind ever planned by the retail coal dealers and they are looking forward to it with a great deal of pleasure.

JUDGMENTS GIVEN IN DISTRICT COURT

Several judgments were rendered by Judge William Newcorn in the District court this morning among them being that of Catherine McClymont against John M. C. Marsh on contract, for $23.90; Joseph Kingston vs. Mary C. Claassen for $33.41; W. A. Coddington against Florence Dobbs, of Westfield for $10.

Joseph W. Manhattan won his case against W. H. Foster, who claimed that the contract for sidewalks on his property on Hillside avenue had not been properly fulfilled.

The case against Charles H. Lyman brought by William H. Abbott was not tried owing to the absence of a jury. V. W. Nash, Jr., represented Joseph Manhattan in the third suit, in which Mr. Foster paid the costs before leaving court.

Auto Thief Guilty.

Nathan F. Lewis, who was arrested here two weeks ago charged with stealing automobile parts from a garage in Cranford, against whom there are additional charges in this city, pleaded guilty before Judge Atwater, in Elizabeth yesterday and will be sentenced next Wednesday. He is believed that Lewis can account for several thefts of Bosch magnetos taken from various garages in Union county.

Rode Bikes on Sidewalks.

Two more bicyclists were arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning charged with riding on the sidewalks of the city. Charles Harrison, of West Front street, and Peter Simmons, colored, of Plainfield avenue. Each was fined $3 and warned.

DENTISTS HEAR TALK ON THE RIGGS DESEASE

Riggs disease, its cause and cure, was the topic of a paper presented at the quarterly meeting and banquet of the Plainfield Dentists' Society, at The Homestead, last night, by Dr. Hutchins, of New York city. Following the paper there was an informal discussion of the topic, which proved of great benefit to the dentists.

The meeting followed the regular banquet, which was prepared and served by Mrs. Henry Johnson. The dentists also discussed plans for the annual meeting and election to be held Wednesday night, June 14. Thoes present last night included Dr. Hutchins, of New York; Dr. C. M. F. Egel, of Westfield; Dr. Naylor, of Somerville and Drs. Leonard, F. W. French, Clive Monfort, W. E. Stelle, George Moore, Charles E. Moore, Frank T. Clawson, Guy Hillman, Charles Davis, O. B. Whitford and Raymond B. Stevens.

RUNAWAY STOPPED BY WALTER GLAENTZER.

Walter Glaentzer, the sixteen-year-old son of Mrs. Edith Glaentzer, of West Front street, stopped the runaway horse which threw Roy Updike out on the road, instead of the circus men to whom credit was given yesterday.

According to Mrs. Glaentzer, the boy ran from the yard where he was attending to some planting, when he heard the clattering hoofs of the frightened animal. He dropped the trowel and as the horse passed young Glaentzer jumped for the bridle rein. He caught it and clung to the reins until the horse stopped. It was a brave act and probably saved some of the children, who had been attracted to the circus grounds at Grant avenue.

After the Wrong Man.

Through an error of the police in looking up the number of the automobile in which a driver on Sunday used vile language to a patrolman, who ordered him to the right side of the road, the name was given as W. H. Pugh, of Asbury Park. It should have been Lewis Huber, of Peapack, who will be summoned to court tomorrow.

NEWARK STARS DEFENDANTS.

Press Bought by Publishing Company, It is Alleged, Does Not Do Required Work—Trial Before Judge Atwater.

Claiming that the Potter Printing Press Company had failed to make out the proper pleadings, the Newark Daily Advertiser Publishing Company publishers of the Newark Star, refused yesterday to proceed with the trial of a case involving the purchase, by contract, of a $15,000 newspaper printing press. Action was brought in the Circuit Court before Judge Vail, of Elizabeth. The Potter Printing Press Company of this city, is the plaintiff in the case, and when the opening argument was made to the jury by Attorney Hichens, of New York, it developed that the case was to be tried on a specific contract instead of common count as set forth in the plaintiff's pleadings. It was necessary for the court to postpone the trial until June 14.

When the first witness was called for the Potter Printing Press Company, Attorney Hardin, for the defendant, raised the argument against the manner of the pleading and the particulars upon which the case was to be tried. He argued that inasmuch as the attorney for the plaintiff pointed out to the jury the separate provisions contained in the specific contract, it would be necessary for him (the defendant) to frame up a different defense. He further argued that before the case could be tried the plaintiff would have to amend the declaration, and if this be done, it would be necessary to postpone the trial until proper defense is put in.

Judge Vail looked at the circumstances in the same light. He ruled that should the plaintiff desire to amend, the defendant should be given a chance to prepare his defense accordingly. The court then ruled that the case go over until June 14, giving the plaintiff, in the meantime, five days in which to serve the amended declaration upon the defendant. Attorneys for both sides say that the case will take three days to try.

In February, 1909, the Newark Advertiser Publishing Company made a contract with the Potter Printing Press Company wherein the latter agreed to deliver, install and put in working order, a forty-eight-page printing press, with a capacity of 50,000 twelve-page pepers, or 12,500 forty-eight-page papers, in an hour. Among the agreements in the contract was one which allowed the press to be used for thirty days on trial, and if found satisfactory, the Nework company was to pay $15,000 and give in exchange a $5,100 Hoe newspaper press. According to the plaintiff, the new press was used daily for six months, but no money was paid. Against the charge that the machine is defective, Attorneys Hitchens and Carey, for the plaintiff, put up the argument that if the press turned out but one edition it is evidence of its satisfaction.

Besides the printing press, the Potter Printing Press Company also delivered a quantity of sterotyping machinery which has never been paid for, it is alleged.

WALPOLE IS GUILTY; SENTENCE MAY 24

He pleaded guilty to the allegation and will be sentenced on May 24. W. A. Coddington was his counsel.

The case against Louis Heims, whose place, "The Maples" at Terrill road and south avenue, which was raided the same night, has not yet come before the court.

After a very successful season in which Jonas Lie has been honored by art organizations both here and abroad, he will hold an exhibition of his paintings in Plainfield. It is now nearly three years since Mr. Lie has shown his works publicly in Plainfield and in that time his name has become not only a matter of course at all art exhibitions, but his work has given him a place in the front ranks of American painters.

In Philadelphia, Mr. Lie was represented by a larger number of pictures than any other painter and he has now pictures in the exhibitions in Pittsburg, Chicago, Cincinnati, Baltimore, Buffalo, St. Louis, Worcester and Indianapolis.

There will be shown at The Seminary, this city, at the forthcoming exhibition, about twenty-five large and small pictures. One of Brooklyn Bridge, painted this winter will be shown publicly for the first time, the others have been shown during the season in some of the large exhibitions, but all are new to Plainfield. The exhibition will open Tuesday, May 16, with a reception and will remain open, afternoons and evenings until May 31, except May 24. The entrance will be on Arlington avenue.

It cost Albert Saunderson, colored, of East Second street, five dollars to get drunk and disorderly at the corner of Park avenue and Second street yesterday. Patrolman Messler arrested Saunderson after a complaint had been lodged with Detective Sergeant Flynn in which another colored man complained that Saunderson had struck him with a piece of brick. Saunderson denied the charge but Judge DeMeza did not believe him.

WILSON AUTHORIZED TO GET A FIRE TEAM

The Councilmanic fire and building committee met representatives of the National Fire-Proofing Company, and also masons and carpenters at a conference last night, it being for the pupose of suggesting an amendment to the building code pertaining for hollow tile. This is practically a new material in present day construction ,and the section in the code covering the point did not go far enough. An amendment was proposed which defines the material, size, method of use, etc., so that it will meet all possible objections. This will be offered at a future meeting of the Council.

While the meeting was called chiefly for the above purpose, it also resulted in Councilman W. W. Wilson being authorized to secure a team of horses for No. 4 Engine House in the Netherwood district. Mr. Wilson left the city today for that purpose and if possible he proposes to secure a team that will meet the requirements. According to resolution of the Council an amount not to exceed $750 can be expended for a pair of horses.

MAYOR HAS SIGNED THE BUILDING CODE

Mayor G. W. V. Moy yesterday affixed his signature to the new building code, which was recently passed by the Common Council on third reading and it is now a law. There was a report that Mr. Moy might not sign the code, but when questioned about it recently said that he expected to approve it.

"I can see no good reason for not approving the code," said Mr. Moy. "Several inquiries concerning it have been made since it was passed on third reading, but no complaints have been received and I take it for granted that it will be a good thing for the city, although it appears to me to be far in advance of the times.

"I don't want anyone to get the idea that I am an obstructionist in any sence. But when I disapprove an act of the Common Council I will have a good reason for doing so every time. I will never veto any act unless there are sufficient reasons for it as will be seen by my acts in this respect this year."

SENTENCE SUSPENDED ON A NEWARK SPEEDER

Frank L. Apgar, of Newark, who was accused of having driven his automobile above the speed limit on Sunday near Grant avenue on West Front street, appeared in court this morning, with a witness, Oscar A. VonBocks, also of Newark, and denied the charge. He was found guilty but sentence was suspended.

Patrolman Saffron demonstrated in court how the speedometer used on Apgar's car could be made to register any way the operator desired to have it work. Apgar said he was not going over twelve miles an hour. Saffron claimed that he was going at least twenty miles an hour when told to stop. Judge DeMeza lectured Apgar and let him go.

BURNT CORK SHOW

TOPICAL SONG IS A WINNER.

George Stevens Makes a Big Hit Imitating Senator Martine—Good Sketch Given by Bennett and Blimm.

The first performance of Plainfield Lodge of Elks' annual minstrel show was given at the Plainfield theatre last night. Talented end men and a competent singing chorus made up a first part that was on par with the usual high standard set by the antlered entertainers. The olio following was also furnished by the members, receiving genuine and unstinted applause. A large audience was present and the sale of seats for tonight when the show is to be repeated, indicates a capacity attendance.

An overture from Harry Wetton's superb orchestra of twelve pieces, opened the performance. When the curtain arose it revealed the chorus clad in natty white suits, seated in a cafe at Atlantic City, supposedly following the parade at the convention in July. On suggestion from Joseph C. Martin, the proprietor, George O. Stevens, is called in and gives permission for a little jollification. He declared his waiters are very talented and calls them in to help out. Mr. Stevens remains to act as interlocuter.

The entrance of the end men-waiters was an effective bit of work and started the fun-ball rolling. These entertainers were "Jack" Todd, Harry N. Blimm, "Johnny" Campbell, Edwin H. Bennett, John H. Cose and Charles J. Ward. A swinging medley of popular airs led up to an end song, "You'll Come Back," by Johnny Campbell, that brought him a big hand. It was his first attempt locally on the end and his reputation is now made. Harry Blimm rendered "The Alamo Rag," as only "Blimmy" can and he had to respond to a double encore. "Charlie" Ward did as well with "Vos is los mit Louie," as he did in other years. with "What's the matter with Heinze," and "The Leader of the German Band." It was one of the best numbers of the evening. "Banty" Bennett was as funny as ever with "Lovey Joe," a corking good coon rag with catchy but difficult swings. "Banty" handled it like a veteran.

The state of affairs Plainfield has gotten into, municipally speaking, was told about by John H. Cose in his topical song, "Things are different now." It is one of the best compositions of this kind that former Judge W. N. Runyon has ever put out, the "gentle knocks" bringing in the overseer appointment blockade, the fire horse proposition, the Sunday closing ordinance, the Utility law, compelling police and firemen to pay on trolley cars and several others. Eight verses were sung but even then the audience was worse than Oliver Twist ever dared to be and continued to call for more. Mr. Cose will give new verses tonight. The last end song was rendered by "Jack" Todd, "If he comes in, I'm goin' out." "Toddie put it over with an accompaniment of steps that was good to look upon.

The solo numbers interspersing the end songs were all effectively given and were as follows: "Good bye, my love, good bye," Bertram F. Tallamy; "Bedouin Love Song," William G. Smith; "Because of you," Elmer D. Cutting. The finale was a swinging number, "On the Boulevard," by Harry Messersmith, dressed as a French dandy.

The jokes cracked by the ends were all good and contained local hits. One of the best was told by Harry Blimm, at the expense of a fellow-member's mother-in-law produced a roar of laughter.

In the second part, Messrs. Bennett and Blimm presented an original sketch, "I'se your Friend," that is one of the best things they have ever gotten off. It give both an excellent opportunity to display their talent and is a sure cure for the blues. The Van Eps Brothesr, with William MacClymont at the piano, tickled banjos in their inimitable style and were recalled several times. The closing number was entitled "A Night at the Club," and featured the Elks' quartet composed of Messrs. Smith, Cutting, Campbell and Messersmith. The setting was decidedly pretty and showed the interior of the Elks' club room with dimmed lights and a log fire. Each member of the quartet gave a solo, accompanied by William MacClymont, and finished up with a harmony-filled medley. The vocalists received merited applause.

JERSEY CONGRESSMEN SOLID FOR FREE WOOL

The wool question is still pestering the Democratis side of the House at Washington. It seems possible now that the ways and means Democrats may decide to report out a bill providing for free raw wool despite the opposition of Speaker Clark, Majority Leader Underwood and their followers, and there is much worry in consequence.

The New Jersey Democrats caucused yesterday afternoon and voted unanimously for free wool. One New Jersey member who said he was in favor of the removal of the tax was not entirely satisfied that the loss of revenue could be made up. All the others, however, were without reservation in favor of the resolution offered by Representative Edward W. Townsend, of Montclair, which was declaring for free wool.

It is the impression that the action of New York and New Jersey Democrats will be followed by similar votes by delegations from other States.

The present wool tariff brings in about $40,000,000 a year.

When the Democrats of the New York delegation met yesterday morning in the rooms of the foreign committee, of which Representative Sulzer is chairman, they very soon discovered an overwhelming sentiment for free wool. Only four delegates, Representatives Forner, Ayres, Connell and Underhill, opposed the proposition. These four said that should the majority party in the House decide at a regular caucus to go in for the free wool propaganda they would fall in line.

LIVELY ROW OVER SALOON LICENSE

Elizabeth, May 11.—Claiming that a remonstrance against the granting of a saloon license to Frederick Ratti, of 95 Bayway, was a forgery, Excise Commissioner Bye, last night declared that after an investigation he made last Saturday he was convinced that the objections to the Ratti license were really induced through petty jealousy and spite and he stood to vote for the license.

"I heard that six or seven of those whose names appeared as remonstrants did not sign it, but that you signed it for them," said Mr. Bye to Max Fern, who was present at the meeting. This charge Fern vigorously denied, asserting that all signed the remonstrance legally and were not coerced. The application was finally granted by a unanimous vote, but not until there had been several sensational statements.

The first was made by Albert Bender, when he declared that he, as counsel for the remonstrant, stood ready to prove that Ratti was prepared to trasfer the license at once to a man named Schuba for $600 and that the contract embodying this agreement has already been drawn. This statement Ratti denied and he promised the board on getting his license that he would not transfe it within the year.

Fern attacked Ratti, saying that he compelled his tenants to buy $2 and $3 worth of liquor a week from him when he held a license a year ago, and that when they did not do so he either ejected them or raised their rent. He also asserted nearly every signer favoring the petition lived in Ratti's "row."

Bye, continuing his statement, said that a butcher named Shapiro, who was not a citizen, signed the remonstrance. Fern insisted that it was his brother who signed it and Bye again reiterated the charge.

Employees of the Colwell Lead Works, who are on strike, appeared before the board in behalf of Ratti, saying that he invited them to enter his place to hold their meetings, while Jerry Bentley, "the king of Bayway," refused them his hospitality. It was "spitework," they insisted. They declared further that they could prove the remonstrance was forged by Fern and his friends. To this Fern made no reply. Fern offered to deposit $200 with the city attorney as a guarantee that he could prove that the property owners didn't want the saloon.

Fern, in answer to a question by Commissioner Devine, denied that he told women the petition for a remonstrance was a petition for a school.

As there was no legal objections to the granting of the license the board voted unanimously for it, City Attorney Connolly informing them that they were the sole judges of what should be done.

ROBBINS CIRCUS HAS GROUP OF WELL KNOWN PERFORMERS.

Plainfield people are soon to have a chance to see a circus, for the Frank A. Robbins Show will be here on Tuesday, May, 16, giving two performances and a street parade. The latter will start from the show grounds promptly at ten o'clock in the morning. Mr. Robbins comes here this year with a show which is practically new, although some of the best features of last year's performance have been retained.

The show has about one hundred performers, three bands, a big group of clever clowns, and a number of educated animals. There is a fine menagerie, and the latter is one of the largest carried by any show on the road, aside from the big three ring aggregations. Mr. Robbins has been running his circus for thirty-one years, which he considers his best recommendation. It is his practise never to advertise anything that is not with the show, and it is his constant aim to give the people their money's worth.

The big waterproof canvas used by the Robbins Show seats over three thousand people. There is a roomy menagerie tent, and the doors will open one hour earlier so that the public can view this feature before the main show starts.

Jim Emery, the former third baseman for the Plainfield Baseball Club, is now playing at Point Pleasant, Va. It is expected he will return home within a short time.

Jack Martin is making good in the south, where he is leading the league in batting. He is popular with the fans.

It certainly looks natural to see "Dave" Driscoll playing first base, and Cosgrove is also a welcome figure in the outfield.

Somerville, with a large band of rooters, will be here on Saturday, May 20, for a game with the Plainfield Baseball Club, at Crescent Oval. The Somerset county boys will come down loaded for bear. Jimmy Clinton is pitching for the team.

The Ridgewood A. C. will play the Plainfield team on Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon. The team is one of the strongest in this part of the country, including many well known players. Nat Strong is the business manager.

The Far and Middle West appear to contain the only big universities that are ambitious regarding foreign baseball tours. Announcement comes from the University of California that there is a possibility of that university sending a baseball team to Japan. The Californians are to make the trip at the invitation of Waseda and Kei-O universities. The trip, however, will not be made until 1912. Although no definite announcement has been made that the team will be sent to Japan, the project leaked out. The athletic authorities at California wished to keep the matter one of secrecy until definite action was taken and the trip made a certainty. It is said on the coast, however, that the trip is a surety.

The fact that the trip is a certainty is due to the fact that the Japanese universities are to pay the American team's full expenses. The Japanese collegians are to get the sole proceeds of the gate returns. If California goes to Japan it will be the fourth team sent there by an American college. Washington, Wisconsin and Chicago have met the Japanese ball tossers on foreign soil.

Baseball is flourishing in Japan, and the Japanese feel that if they are able to meet American collegians in a series of games the meeting will further help them to learn every angle of our national game. Both the Waseda and Kei-O nines are at present in this country making tours. The Waseda team is making a four months' trip. While here it will play most of the large college nines.

If California decides to make the trip it will be the longest one that college has ever attempted. The All-American university football tour summer to Australia was a longer trip, but the team was not made up wholly of University of California players.

It is said that the games to be played on the Island Empire will include engagements at all the big cities and with the leading Japanese university teams. It is planned to have the team leave this country some time next May. It will not return until September. On the return the management plans stopping off at Honolulu to play several games there as well as at Hilo.

Provisions will be made to take fifteen men, including a coach and a manager. The duties of the manager, however, will cease just as soon as the team arrives in Japan. While the squad is en tour through the Island Empire it will be under the personal direction of Prof. Sherayama of the University of Waseda.

The crack "All-Plainfield" baseball team is organizing for the season. This will be the team's third year and they have never been defeated. Most of the old bunch of stars are with the team this year, but Franklin and "Kid" Miller, who have joined the 'Plains team, will have to be replaced. The team still has a few open dates which may be filled by addressing Leo Ayres, 302 Orange place.

On Crescent Oval this afternoon the P. H. S. team will cross bats with their old rivals, the North Plainfield High School team. The game begins promptly at 3:30 o'clock. It is the first game of the series between the two teams and a hot contest is sure to result.

GOLF.

The formal opening of the social season at the Plainfield Country Club will take place Saturday afternoon and evening. Several private teas and luncheons will be given during the day and in the evening. Superintendent John Hilton will serve dinner to about two hundred members and guests.

The event at the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday, will be an 18-holes medal play, handicap, for Classes A and B.

There will be the weekly competition for the President's and golf club cups at the Park Golf Club, Saturday. Judging by the entries last week this will be one of the most popular competitions this season.

Recent rains have put the local golf courses in fine condition and have assisted the green-keepers materially in their preparation of the grounds.

The list of events scheduled at the local golf clubs this season is perhaps the most attractive in years and should result in increasing the interest in the game.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

The most popular of all exponents of Irish comedy, Chauncey Olcott, will be the attraction at the Plainfield theater Thursday, June 1, in Augustus Pitou's superb production of Rida Johnson Young's new Irish play, "Barry of Ballymore," which is winning new honors and incidentally, some golden rewards, for its owners.

APPROVE NEW WING FOR STATE HOUSE.

With Acting Governor Ackerman presiding, the State House Commission Tuesday approved the plans of State Architect Poole for the addition to the western end of the front wing of the Capitol at Trenton.

The Legislature appropriated $60,000 for the structure.

Bids will be advertised for at once and the structure will be built this summer. The addition will be three stories in height, will add forty-one feet to the westerly end of the front wing and will in all respects match the present structure.

The addition will give needed room to the department of the State Treasurer, State Comptroller, Court of Chancery, and the State Library. Next year it is expected that a similar addition will be built to the easterly end of the front wing.

The new doors to be placed in the Temple Baptist church to divide the primary and junior department rooms have arrived and are now being put in position.

THE FORUM.

Answers Mr. Atterbury.

Editor, The Daily Press:—

I have just returned from Wyoming, and noticed in your paper that one of our citizens, a very able lawyer, is trying to educate the public on the Tariff question. Some few of the people to whom he talked, might have believed him, but of course, a great majority who listened to his talk probably did not believe a word he said, and if quoted correctly in your paper, in the writer's opinion, he has a great deal to learn about the Tariff question.

It is very easy for anyone with the gift of gab to get up and talk in a general way that the Tariff and everything is all wrong, and has nothing to do with wages, etc., without getting down to facts and figures. The theory of it is beautiful, but the practical workings is another question.

It is a great pity that President Taft did not discover some of these gentlemen prior to having the Tariff Commission appointed. It would certainly have saved the country a lot of money, as this gentleman knows it all.

Now, most of us are not so learned, and only know a few things and one of the things that the writer knows is that his remarks about tin plate, are all "tommy-rot," and to back up this assertion, I will state that before the passage of the McKinley Bill, America produced no tin plate. The McKinley Act put a sufficient duty on it to encourage the establishment of the industry and provided that unless a certain quantity was produced in America with (I think) six years, it would be put on the Free List.

The result of this wise legislation was that in 1907, we produced about a half million tons, and tin plate became not only cheaper in America than before it was produced here, but the rest of the world benefited, because through the loss of the American market, the Welsh tin plate manufacturers competed more strenuously for what was left in the other markets of the world, and today there is practically no tin plate imported into America, and the workingmen are certainly benefited by the Tariff in this instance.

The one thing I always marvel at is the cool assurance and courage of these chaps in prophesying what blessings would follow the removal of the Protective duties, while utterly ignoring the benefits of a Protective Tariff, daily exhibited right before their eyes.

There is no doubt that a Protective Tariff increases prices in this country, (no protectionist denies that) but it does not increase them to the extent that it increases wages.

Manufacturers' profits in all countries are probably substantially the same in the same industries, because industry must be carried on at a profit or perish. Therefore, the wage earner is the chief beneficiary of the Protective Tariff.

That the American wage earner is much better off than his European brother is easily proven.

For instance, the "Bradford (England) Observer Budget," of April 15, 1911, gives the Board of Trade's official report of its exhaustive inquiry made regarding prices of the necessities of life, rents, and rates of wages in the principal industrial towns of the United States compared with England.

Without going into detail, this report shows:

Wages in America, 230,In England 100; rent in America 207, in England 100; food in America 138, in England 100.

Combingin rent and food, the report in this summary finds that it costs the American working man 52% more than the English working man, but as his wages are more than two and a quarter times as great, he certainly can afford it.

Facts like these make some people's theories perfectly ridiculous.

I suppose this gentleman thinks that if the Tariff was greatly reduced or we had Free Trade, the wage earner would be able to buy his clothes cheaper, and my contention is that if the above was to happen, he would not be able to buy as good clothes as he is wearing now, and some of them would not be able to buy them at all, and to prove this, I will state that the following are figures showing the importation of shoddy and waste, which go into clothing:

4 years of McKinley Bill, 1891—1894, 908,923 lbs. 4 years of Wilson Bill, 1894—1897, 86,263,630 lbs (increase of 9390%) 4 years after Wilson Bill, 1898—1901, 1,791,373 lbs, and the reason for this increase of shoddy and waste during the Wilson Bill, was simply because so few of our wage earners were employed, that they were compelled through lack of money to buy clothes that were adulterated.

So far as the Tariff and its effect on wages is concerned the crying need of the times is the truth, and the elimination of the uninformed social and political agitator, who constantly feeds the discontent he wallows in creating.

Very truly yours,
H. M. STOCKTON.

Bicycle Rider Hurt.

John Mulatti, an Italian, thirty years old, of Rock avenue, tried his best to ram a Netherwood trolley car this morning just before 8 o'clock and suffered in consequence. His forehead was cut and he received several bruises about the body. When picked up he was somewhat dazed but was able to go home. No blame is attached to the trolley crew.

WOMEN'S "GROWLER" PARTY IN BOROUGH.

Mrs. John Keiderling and her sister Hannah Meadows, had a "growler" party at their home on upper Grove street, yesterday afternoon. The neighbors complained of the noise they made and Marshal Keller went to the place to quiet them. They continued their racket and when he placed them under arrest they proceeded to claw him. The officer had a hard time getting the two women locked up. Their trial was held over until tomorrow morning.

Edward Vail, a neighbor, came down to court this morning, to see that the persons got fair play, as he explained it. He had a fair-sized edge on and refused to leave the court room when Chief Weiss told him there would be no case. He was locked up and will be on hand tomorrow.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church held its monthly business meeting last night, followed by a social hour.

BOROUGHITE HURT IN RESISTING ARREST.

Hary Connett, of Harmony street, returned from the circus last night, in an intoxicated condition. His wife unbraided him and a fight started. The woman ran to police headquarters and Connett followed on the run.

Marshal Kiernan was in the station and when he attempted to arrest the husband, he grabbed a railing and resisted. It required the aid of Marshal Pope to get him in a cell. His head was so badly cut in the scuffle Dr. Adams had to be called to attend him.

SANTI CONTI IN CRITICAL CONDITION.

It was said at the hospital this afternoon that Santi Conti, the Italian who was injured in a collision with A. L. C. Marsh's automobile on Monday, is in a critical condition and that while he may live another day his death may occur at any moment.

No warrant has been issued for Mr. Marsh and probably none will be unless Conti's injuries prove fatal.

SUCH THINGS CAN BE.

There was a crowd around two men who stood on the corner and were having a hot dispute, and pretty soon a red-headed man came running across the street and elbowed his way into the mass and excitedly inquired of a party:

"What is it—murder?"

"Naw—an argument."

"About what?"

"The Panama canal."

"But what's there to argue about?"

"Why, one guy argues that we should build forts and defend it, and the other guy says we should depend on men-of-war."

"So that's it, eh? Who's ahead?"

"Nobody, yet. They have each called the other a liar and a fool."

"But no fighting?"

"No."

"And there won't be none?"

"Don't look like it."

"And here's a hundred dubs of you standing around to listen to an argument and two blocks down there is a saloon burning up and they are rolling forty kegs of beer out on the sidewalk, and not a cop around to keep an eye on 'em!"—New Orleans Picayune.

A NEW ATHENS IN AMERICA.

Indicative of the degree of prosperity reached by the Greeks in America is the announcement of a plan to build a Greek city on Lng Island for Greeks exclusively. The plans include a Greek church and a Greek university.

There are now 300,000 Greeks in the United States, 30,000 of whom are in and near New York. They naturally desire a college where their children may learn the Greek language, study the Greek literature and nourish a national complacency of spirit—never small in this race.—Chicago Record-Herald.

HERE AND THERE.

A novelty in shoes introduced in Germany has partitions to separate the wearer's toes. The interior of these shoes terminates in soft pads pressing against the foot, so that the thrust in walking is taken at the base of the toes is thus prevented. It is claimed that the deforming of the foot now so common will be avoided by this arrangement, and that walking will be made more comfortable.

A clock in St. Petersburg has ninety-five faces, indicating simultaneously the time at thirty different spots on the earth's surface, besides the movements of the earth and planets.

A rather curious development is seen in the latest style of locomotives on the Southern Pacific which are run cab first, the smoke stack end bringing up the rear.

A Detroit woman who has sued her husband for divorce on the ground of cruelty alleges that he gave her no Christmas present.

THE NEW FIGURE.

Figures—as figures—are no more. They make excellent clothes-props, or pillow-case advertisements. But as figures their day is done.

Venus has no wvanished. Not by sleight-of-hand or force of circumstances, but by hard word of mouth. The decree of Fashion has gone forth, and Venus has bowed to the inevitable. Not only has she mislaid her arm; she has now lost her shape. The curves and contours of yesterday have becomes the lines and angles of today. Women have gone back a decade. They have discarded their corsets and curves; their broad shoulders and narrow waists. They are now perpendicularll parallel, from head to heels. In brief—they are waistless.

We do all we can nowadays to hide our figures. If nature has blessed—or cursed—us with a few fascinating curves, we rush to the nearest Disappearing-Figure-Factory and purchase a casing to fill the unnecessary spaces.

Mrs. Henry Bergen, of Arlington avenue, is seriously ill at her home with an attack of pleurisy.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire has rented his summer home in Cleveland, Ohio, and plans to take his wife and daughter with him on his trip to California in June.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire will preach Sunday morning on the subject: "The Two Johns," and in the evening on "Our Great Burden Bearer."

SLEEP IN DOSES.

If you wish to be perfectly fit and healthy don't take your sleep in "one long dose."

Instead of, say, always going to bed at 11 p. m. and rising at 7 a. m., divide your sleeping hours into two portions, as, for instance, from 6 p. m. to 8:30 p. m. (first sleep(and from 2 a. m. to 6:30 a. m. in the second sleep.

This method of sleeping in "watches" gives the brain—for all those who do mental work—just the stimulus needed, and promotes fresh energy and vigor to both mind and body.

A doctor who is a serious advocate of sleeping in watches gave the above interesting theory.

"Every man and woman whose work requires a large expenditure of mental energy should divide his or her sleeping hours into two," he said.

"I am acquainted with many people who now always take their sleep in two 'doses,' and they will tell you what a vast improvement it is on the usual rule of one long sleep in the twenty-four hours.

"The ideal times of sleep for the brain worker are the afternoon and the early hours of the morning. Of course this program could only be carried out by the woman whose time is her own.'

YOUR OLD RAINCOAT.

Don't throw away that old raincoat of waterproofing. You can use it yet.

Rip it apart and wash it thoroughly, and then fashion it into:

A large apron for household use, good for scrubbing and washing wear.

A chemistry apron for the daughter in high school.

Dusting cap and sleeve protectors.

Cases for sponges, brushes and toilet articles.

A cover to tie over the laundry basket.

Veal and Ham Pie.

Cut two pounds of veal cutlets into squares, cut also a pound of cold boiled ham into small pieces and place in alternate layers in the bottom crust. Betwee the layers mix and scatter pepper, salt, a teaspoonful of savory herbs and a minced hard boiled egg. Add a half pint of water and the top crust and bake one and a half hours. When done pour in through a funnel a pint of hot stock that is rich enough to jell when it gets cold.

To Keep Lemons Fresh.

Place lemons in a vessel filled with cold water as soon as they come from the grocer's. Keep in an ordinary cool place and the lemons will keep perfectly for surprisingly long time. I have kept them fresh and hard in this way for six weeks.—Harper's Bazar.

ARTERY OF HER LEG PIERCED BY CHISEL

Mrs. Peter Floersch, wife of the proprietor of The Queen City Hotel, while superintending the work of putting things to right in the reception corridor this morning accidentally stepped on the handle end of a chisel and the sharp end turned over quickly and struck the leg just above the ankle severing an artery. Mr. Floersch, who was nearby, hastened to his wife's assistance and "first aid to the injured" remedies were secured from Schreiner's drug store. Before the flow could be stopped, Mrs. Floersch lost about three quarts of blood.

In the meantime, efforts were made to secure a physician, but nearly an hour elapsed before one could be found. Dr. P. J. Zeglio was finally located and he responded at once. Mrs. Floersch was removed to her room by attaches of the hotel and made as comfortable as possible until the physician arrived. Mrs. Floersch will be confined to her room for several days. She is in a greatly weakened state owing to the great loss of blood, but throughout she did not lose her nerve and withstood the ordeal remarkably well.

NEW REAL ESTATE OFFICE—Will open up my new office on Monday morning at No. 155 North avenue, ground floor. Have already purchased a good size book for the purpose of listing every property in Plainfield. My object is to fill it full of the conditions of your property, including the size of mortgage on same; then to leave the book to my grandchildren to read. I am the man who has been working in a four-dollar capacity to fight nervous prostration for the last four years and in those conditions have earned the title of selling and exchanging more property than any two agents in Plainfield. Now I am better and am ready for business. If you are coming to see me let me tell you something. Don't come near me if you expect me to handle your house, if it is sprinkled with signs or one sign which reads for sale by any broker, unless you want to sell out for 50 cents on the $1.00, for I want you to known that my feeling for you is the same as yours is for me, where you want to include me under any old broker. And let me tell you that these old signs are what make Plainfield real estate sell for less money than it does in any city or town along the Central, notwithstanding it has the name of "City Beautiful." Your any old broker means that some of them should be selling peanuts, instead of offering your property or spoiling the sale of it. Have sold seven properties in the last two weeks. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on the plan "that my time is yours." My office is not as it will be when the store front is changed, but will answer the purpose for a short time. 4 29 12

A REAL FARM FOR SALE—I say it is a real farm because it will produce more than any farm near Plainfield or City Beautiful. It is also a real lot proposition, because the depot is on the ground. D. THE HAND OF BUDDHA

By ALLEN A. BROWN

When John Lawrence was in China he sent me, among other curios, a quaint little box of carved ivory. It was a beautiful specimen of the carver's art—an airy fabric of delicately wrought flowers, queer birds and impossible fishes. If the box really had an opening the fastening was so artfully concealed that I could not find it.

One night some months later, on returning home from the theater, I found my studio brilliantly lighted and Lawrence occupying a big chair before the smoldering fire.

"I returned today," he said in reply to my delighted greeting. "Been waiting here since 9 o'clock for you. Your man said you had gone to the theater."

"Yes," I replied, donning a dilapidated smoking coat. "I have been to see 'Nanette' and incidentally saw Miss Farnham."

"We are to be married in May," he said without turning his head.

I swallowed my astonishment, for I had not known they were engaged and, in fact, was deeply interested in pretty Miss Farnham myself. In spite of my chagrin I managed to congratulate him warmly, and, joining him before the now replenished fire.

"Where is that ivory box I sent you, Dick?"

Surprised and somewhat embarrassed, I made no reply, but went to the cupboard and brought the heavy little box to the table.

"What the deuce is the matter with you?" he asked sharply as the box struck the table with a hollow, empty sound.

"Just what I want to know," I replied crossly.

He stretched out his hand for the box and tried to raise it from the table, and then, as if surprised at its resistance, he arose and lifted it with both hands, looking at me queerly. As he dropped the box and we heard the hollow rattle as it struck the table we both laughed nervously and resumed out seats, he staring into the fire with wide open, startled eyes. Presently he spoke:

"That box was given to me by a wealthy Chinaman whom I have good reason to believe hated me intensely—perhaps with reason. It was such a dainty bit of carving that I could not resist accepting it. In fact, I really could not do otherwise without infringing their elaborate social laws. When he gave it to me old Van Ping told me of another pretty bit of carving, owned by his brother, a Chefu merchant. He gave me a strip of red paper covered with hieroglyphics and told me that on presenting it to his brother, the merchant, I could obtain the cherished curio. I went to my room in Parkerson's bungalow—you know I was staying with Parkerson—and placed the box before me on the table. It did not weigh more than a few ounces. A moment later my China boy entered and uttered a cry of fear when he saw the box, which he seemed to recognize. He threw himself upon his knees and begged me to take the box away; that it was accursed and that ill luck would fall upon me and all my house if I harbored it a moment. When I laughed at him and told him about the ivory hand that had been promised to me I thought he would go out of his mind. He pleaded that I would at least send the box to America before going down to Chefu after the other curio. Perhaps I was a little impressed by his actions; but, anyway, my curiosity was aroused, and so I agreed, and he happily packed the little box among your case of goods and watched with great satisfaction while the coolies rolled the case into the hold of the ship. The day after that I went down to Chefu and secured the 'hand of Buddha,' as the old man called it. He was a sly old beggar and up to some devilry, I was positive, though not a muscle of his oily, yellow countenance moved when I presented my letter. The hand I have brought home with me, and, in spite of my China boy's warning that I would suffer unimaginable ill fortune if I ever brought the two objects, the hand and the box, together, it is my intention to do that very thing tonight. The hand is packed in my bag, and I want you to come around to my rooms now and bring the box, and we will find what in the devil that old rascal was up to if it wasn't all bosh."

I assented reluctantly enough, for I was rather bored by the mysterious box and just a bit down in the mouth about the news of his engagement.

"Now that you have consented," he said coolly, "I'll read you the letter which Van Ping sent to his brother. Of course these chaps exercise a lot of hocus pocus in all their affairs, and I was somewhat amused at the idea of their evident desire to work me up into a fright. After the old merchant had read the letter I had it translated. It seemed to throw the translator into a spasm as he read it." He drew from a letter case a thin strip of red paper and slowly read: "'Give to the accursed American the hand of Buddha. He has the sacred box. The serpent grows rapidly.'"

The clocks were striking 2 as we left my studio and made our way through the deserted streets to Lawrence's rooms. The unusual events of the evening had combined to upset my nerves, and it was with a vague feeling of dread that I accompanied him on what seemed a fool's errand. Yet there was a decidedly uncomfortable feeling that I could not suppress. Twice I looked behind me quickly, and twice I saw nothing but the long, sharp shadows cast by the electric lights. Lawrence seemed unconscious of my mental excitement, for he strode quietly by my side with bent head and hands in his pockets. It was a relief to get into the warmly lighted vestibule, for there I no longer heard the imaginary soft pad-pad of feet behind us. I had carried the box in a hand bag, and its weight was such that I was glad to turn it over to my host, who excused himself and disappeared into the smoking room. Presently he returned.

I saw that something was on his mind.

"See here, Dick," he began seriously, "Grace—Miss Farnham—is not aware of my return. If I should be taken ill or anything she must not know the circumstances. Give her this letter, which will explain enough. If nothing happens forget it all like the good fellow you are." And as he clasped my hand and looked into my eyes I knew that he had guessed my secret.

"Now for the hand of Buddha," he cried, with a laugh, and together we entered the handsome smoking room. It was a large room, crowded with treasures from every quarter of the globe. In the middle of the room stood a small ebony table, the top inlaid with squares of ivory like a checkerboard. On it stood the hand of Buddha. It was the size of an infant's hand and carved from a solid piece of ivory, yellowed with unknown age. The curved, long nailed fingers clasped the stem of a delicately carved flower. It was a horrible object. It looked like a dead hand.

I could not repress my excitement as Lawrence locked the door and bade me bring him the box from a divan where he had placed it. I was surprised to see that his face was white and strained and that his hands trembled as he took the box from my grasp. He placed it on the table, and we took up our station near the door, both looking eagerly at the table. The air seemed heavy with some strong perfume, but that was undoubtedly the result of the long closed room with its sandalwood furniture and scented hangings.

Suddenly the table seemed to sway slightly and the hand toppled over, striking the box, and then Lawrence sprang back, with a hoarse shout, as the curved fingers loosened their hold on the flower and twined around and clung to the box. Gropingly they crawled over the carved flowers and birds; then, as we gazed breathlessly, a faint vapor curled around the edges of the box. It grew in volume, and I heard Lawrence unlock the door behind us. Then the lid raised. At first I could not see the object that protruded itself. Then its horrible form grew on my sight. The long, sinuous body of a serpent as large around as my arm issued from that tiny casket. Its red fangs were like crimson stains on the milky whiteness of its skin. It raised itself far above the table, the hideous head swaying to and fro, its green eyes gleaming like jewels in the semidarkness of the room and piercing the faint vapor that surrounded it. The incense seemed overpowering, and I felt that I was losing consciousness when Lawrence raised a revolver.

My hand was on the knob when he fired. A crimson stream flowed from the hideous thing, but still it raised its length into the air. Lawrence fired again and yelled for me to open the door. As I did so I heard a strangled cry and turned to see Lawrence falling to the floor, the white serpent coiled tightly around his body. Grasping a Turkish scimiter that hung on the wall beside me and mad with rage and grief, I thrust the gleaming knife again and again into the sinuous body of the reptile, which never relaxed its hold, its head still uplifted, with red fanged mouth and jeweled eyes. Suddenly everything turned black before me, and I lost consciousness. When I regained my senses the light was still burning dimly. The window draperies were stirring softly, and, to my joy, I heard Lawrence's voice calling in strained, unnatural tones. He was slowly struggling to his feet, and I arose and went to his assistance. His face was ghastly, and around his throat, above his low collar, was a dull purple line. He pointed to the floor as he sank feebly into a chair. The white serpent was gone, but on the dark rug lay a long chain composed of countless small disks of ivory strung together on a silken cord. The scimiter lay beside it, the blade spotless and shining. The air was still heavy with a strange, subtle perfume that clouded our senses and rendered the occurrences of the past hour unreal. On the table lay the ivory box empty. The hand of Buddha was gone. Near the open window and in the shadows of the stirring draperies lay a green silk cap in the middle of which was sewed a curious jeweled button, insignia of a mandarin's rank. As I leaned over to pick it up a yellow hand with curving, clawlike nails darted across the low sill and then disappeared into the outer shadows bearing the green cap.

Lawrence lived a week, and before he died he told me the story of Van Ping, and then I knew that the punishment that had been meted out to my friend was well deserved, and I could not avenge him because of that other one who had been justly avenged.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS.

Are Middies Snobs?

Social life at the United States Naval Academy, as reflected in the academy hops, is being investigated by the Navy Department in order to discover if snobbery has crept into the institution. The investigation is based on the complaint that Miss Mary H. Beers, daughter of Professor Beers, head of the English department of Yale, was a recent victim of snobbery at the academy. It is said that Miss Beers' escort at a hop was given an intimation by a midshipman that her presence there was not desired because of her position as a governess in the family of Lieutenant Tarrant, of the navy. The investigation is the result of a request of Congressman Korbly, of Indiana. He asked the Secretary of the Navy to investigate that peculiar social system at the academy that makes unwelcome at a social function an estimable and talented girl who happens to be earning her own living. The matter was referred to Superintendent Bowyer, of the academy, who reported on the facts. This report was forwarded to Lieutenant Tarrant, now on the Michigan, for a statement as to the status of Miss Beers in his family. Lieutenant Tarrant's reply has not yet reached the department.—Philadelphia Ledger.

When a Servant is a Lady.

A few weeks ago at the Annapolis Naval Academy one of the midshipmen invited to, and introduced at a dance a woman who was employed in the household of one of the officers. It seems that another midshipman complained to one of the officers that a nurse girl had been invited to the dance. As a result the officer rebuked the midshipman who had brought her. The woman's name was Miss Beers and it later developed that she was a graduate in household science of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, and a daughter of Professor Beers, of Yale University. Now Professor Beers had once been a respected instructor of President Taft and a letter from him to the President about the discourtesy to his daughter brought from the President to the head officer of the Naval Academy, a demand that he apologize for the incident, both to Miss Beers and to her father. The rebuke was unquestionably deserved but suppose the lady had been Miss Smith, and nobody's daughter in particular, would not the case have been exactly the same. There are lots of young women in service in the country that are just as good class as the midshipmen, and to prejudge any, without personal consideration, solely on account of their position, is inexcusable.—N. Y. Weekly Witness.

CLEARED HIS CLIENT.

Aaron Burr's Dramatic Accusation In a Murder Trial.

It is undoubtedly true that in former times in all parts of the country it was considered more important and more creditable to save a man's life or liberty than to get a verdict where property only was concerned. These days have passed, however, as far as New York is concerned, and in a lesser degree, possibly, in nearly all the other states, and despite the agitation on the subject they are never likely to return. It is interesting to turn back to the earliest days of the republic and the careers of two lawyers who would have been giants in any age or in any country and who were antagonistic in character and purpose—Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr. Both men accepted criminal as well as civil cases. One of the greatest efforts of Hamilton's life was his appearance for one Crosswell, charged with publishing a scandalous libel upon Thomas Jefferson. The court was divided in its verdict, but the prisoner was never punished.

Aaron Burr, that erratic genius who lacked a balance wheel, is said never to have lost a case in which he alone was counsel. It is also of record that he won a case in which by a queer trick of fate his associate counsel was Hamilton. It was a murder case. The actions and manner of the principal witness against the prisoner seemed to Burr exceedingly suspicious, and it is said that both Burr and Hamilton were undecided in their own minds which was the guilty party—the witness or the prisoner. Hamilton's summing up was perfunctory. Burr began to address the jury when it was nearly dark. The witness for the prosecution was leaning against a pillar. His face was pallid and covered with perspiration. He listened intently to the lawyer. Suddenly Burr seized a large candelabrum, and, throwing the light on the face of the witness, shouted, "Behold the murderer, gentlemen!" The witness turned and rushed from the courtroom and the prisoner was acquitted.—F. P. Ward in Harper's Weekly.

A BUNGLING CENSOR.

The Brilliant Genius That Used to Mangle Plays In Poland.

In 1869 there was a very strict censorship throughout Poland over all plays given in the theaters. It was, of course, very annoying to the actors and sometimes quite ridiculous. Mme. Modjeska in her "Memories and Impressions" says that during the winter of 1869 she was playing in Warsaw and that her actors had a great deal of fun every time a play came from the censor's office.

Every noble sentiment was forbidden. Even some words were found disloyal, among others the word "slave." In one of the melodramas it was cut out and replaced by the word "negro," and the sentence, which ran "He was a slave to his passions," was changed to "He was a negro to his passions."

On another occasion the actor taking the part of a Roman Catholic priest had to say, "I love my country and my people, and I shall never leave them." The words "country" and "people" were changed to "wife and children."

In another play the words "He walked arm in arm with the emperor and whispered in his ear" were changed to "He walked three steps behind the emperor and whispered in his ear."

"These and like blunders became standing jokes among the actors and give an idea of the censorship at the time of my engagement in Warsaw. I am sure that our censor was overzealous in his services to the government and too ignorant of the language to see his absurd mistakes."

Fastening Battery Wires.

There are two ways of doing almost everything, and this is especially true of fastening battery and coil terminal wires. One way is wrong, and the other is to twist the bare end of the wire around the terminal as the hands of the clock move and then tighten up the nut. The reason for this is because the screw thread is right handed; therefore the tendency of the tightening nut will be to twist the wire around the terminal tighter than it was. Should the wire be twisted the other way the nut would tend to untwist it and it would slip under the nut and very likely get a very poor hold.—Boston Herald.

Snubbed the Czar.

Paderewski once dared to affront the czar, with the result that he soon received a note commanding him to leave St. Petersburg, where he had been booked for a number of concerts, within twenty-four hours. The czar had sent for him and paid him a neat compliment, but is said to have received the chilly response, "Sire, I am a Pole."

No Chance to Be Cheap.

"Why do you delay proposing to that girl?"

"I'm saving up to buy an engagement ring."

"Something especially expensive?"

"It'll have to be. I can't fool her. Her father runs a jewelry store."—Exchange.

Not as Bad as That.

"Is your master in a somnolent condition?"

"No, sir, he was pretty violent, but now he's asleep."—Baltimore American.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910, by Anna Katharine Rohlfs

Clifton drew himself up in his turn, astonishment battling with renewed distrust.

"Either he or you, Ranelagh!" he exclaimed firmly. "There is no third person. This you must realize."

Was Arthur in the clubhouse when I first stepped into it? It was just possible. I had been led to prevaricate as to the moment I entered the lower gateway, and he may have done the same as to the hour he left by the upper hall window. Whatever his denials on this or any subject, I was convinced that he knew as well as I that Carmel had been in the building with her sister and was involved more or less personally in the crime committed there. Might it not be simply as his accessory after the fact? If only I could believe this!

But she had gone in disguise to the Whispering Pines, and she had returned home in the same suspicious fashion.

The wearing of her brother Arthur's hat and coat over her own womanly garments was no freak. There had been purpose in it—a purpose which demanded secrecy. That Adelaide should have accompanied her under these circumstances was a mystery. But then the whole affair was a mystery, totally out of keeping in all its details with the characters of these women, save—and what a fearful exception I here make—the awful end, which, alas, bespoke the fiery rush and impulse to destroy which marked Carmel's unbridled rages.

Of a less emotional attack she would be as incapable as any other good woman. Poison she would never use. It's presence there was due to another's forethought, another's determination. But the poison had not killed. Both glasses had been emptied, but—ah, those glasses! What explanation had the police now for those two emptied glasses? They had hitherto supposed me to be the second person who had joined Adelaide in this totally uncharacteristic drinking.

Knowing nothing of Carmel having been on the scene, they must ascribe this act either to Arthur or to me, and when they came to dwell upon this point more particularly they must see the improbability of her drinking with him under any circumstances. Then their thoughts would recur to me, and I should find myself again a suspect. The monstrous suggestion that Arthur had brought the liquor there himself, had poured it out and forced her to drink it, poison and all, out of revenge for her action at the dinner table a short time before, did not occur to me then, but if it had there were the three glasses—he would not bring three, nor would Adelaide, nor, as I saw it, would Carmel.

Chaos—however one looked at it, chaos! Only one fact was clear—that Carmel knew the whole story and might communicate the same if ever her brain cleared and she could be brought to reveal the mysteries of that hour.

Did I really desire such a consummation? Only God could tell. I only know that the fear and expectation of such an outcome made my anguish for the next two weeks.

Would she live? Would she die? The question was on every tongue. The crisis of her disease was approaching, and the next twenty-four hours would decide her fate, and in consequence my own, if not her brother Arthur's. As I contemplated the suspense of these twenty-four hours I revolted madly for the first time against the restrictions of my prison. I wanted air, movement, the rush into danger, which my horse or my automobile might afford—anything which would drag my thoughts from that sick room and the anticipated stir of that lovely form into conscious life and suffering.

Clifton told me no one was allowed in the sick room but the nurse and the doctor. Even Arthur was denied admission and was wearing himself out in his own room, as I was wearing myself out here, in restless inactivity. He expected her to sink and never to recover consciousness and was loud in his expressions of rebellion against the men who dared to keep him from her bedside when her life was trembling in the balance. But the nurse had hopes, and so had the doctor. As for Carmel's looks, they were greatly changed, but beautiful still in spite of the cruel scar left by her fall against the burning bars of her sister's grate. No delirium disturbed the rigid immobility in which she now lay. I could await her awakening with quiet confidence in the justice of God.

Thus Clifton, in his ignorance.

The day was a bleak one, and the evening hours were no better. The hands on my watch crawled. When the door finally opened it came as a shock. I knew that it was Clifton who entered, but I could not meet his eye.

I dug my nails into both my palms and waited for his first word. When it came I felt my spirits go down, down. I had thought them at their lowest ebb before. He hesitated and I started up:

"Tell me," I cried—"Carmel is dead!"

"Not dead," said he, "but silly. Her testimony is no more to be relied upon than that of any other wandering mind."

CHAPTER XV.

"BREAK IN THE GLASS!"

It was some time before I learned the particulars of Carmel's awakening. It had occurred at sunset. With the exception of the doctor and possibly the nurse, only those interested in her as a witness in the most perplexing case on the police annals were grouped in silent watchfulness about the room of mystery.

It came suddenly, as all great changes come. One moment her lids were down, her face calm, her whole figure quiet in its statue-like repose; the next her big violet eyes had flashed open upon the world, and lips and limbs were moving feebly but certainly in their suddenly recovered freedom. She murmured, half petulantly:

"Why do you look at me so? Oh, I remember, I remember! What's the matter? I cannot move as I used to do. I feel—I feel"—

"You have been ill," came soothingly from the doctor. "You have been in bed many days. Now you are better and will soon be well. This is your nurse." He said nothing of the others, who were so placed behind screens as to be invisible to her.

She continued to gaze first at one then at the other. As she did so the flush faded and gave way to an anxious, troubled expression—not just the expression anticipated by those who believed that with returning consciousness would come returning memory of the mysterious scene which had taken place between herself and her sister or between her sister and her brother prior to Adelaide's departure for the Whispering Pines.

"You have the same kind look for me as always," were her next words as her glance finally settled on the doctor. "But hers—bring me the mirror!" she cried. "Let me see with my own eyes what I have now to expect from every one who looks at me. I want to know before Lila comes in. Why, isn't she here? Is she with—with"— Then in the shrill tones which will not be denied she demanded again, "The mirror!" Nurse Unwin brought it. Carmel was still for a long time, during which the nurse carried off the glass.

"I—I don't like it," Carmel acknowledged quaintly to the doctor as he leaned over her with compassionate words. "I shall have to get acquainted with myself all over again. And so I have been ill! I shouldn't have thought a little burn like that would make me ill. How Adelaide must have worried!"

"Adelaide is—is not well herself. It distressed her to have been out when you fell. Don't you remember that she went out that night?"

"Did she? She was right. Adelaide must have every pleasure. She has earned her good times. I must be the one to stay home now and look after things and learn to be useful. I don't expect anything different. Call Adelaide and let me tell her how—how satisfied I am."

"But she's ill. She cannot come. Wait till tomorrow, dear child. Rest is what you need now. Take these few drops and go to sleep again."

"I can't take it," she protested. "I forget now why, but I can't take anything more from a glass. I've promised not to, I think. Take it away. It makes me feel queer. Where is Adelaide?"

Her memory was defective. She could not seem to take in what the doctor told her. But he tried her again. Once more he spoke of illness as the cause of Adelaide's absence. Her attention wandered while he spoke of it.

"How it did hurt!" she cried. "But I didn't think much about it. I thought only of"— Next moment her voice rose in a shriek, thin, but impetuous, and imbued with a note of excited feeling which made every person there start. "There should be two!" she cried. "Two! Why is there only one?"

This sounded like raving. The doctor's face took on a look of concern, and the nurse stirred uneasily.

"One is not enough! That is why Adelaide is not satisfied. Why does she not come and love and comfort me, as I expected her to? Tell her it is not too late yet, not too late yet, not too late"—

The doctor's hand was on her forehead.

"Rest," came in Dr. Carpenter's most soothing tones—"rest, my little Carmel; forget everything and rest." He thought he knew the significance of her revolt from the glass he had offered her. She remembered the scene at the Cumberland dinner table on that fatal night and shrank from anything that reminded her of it. Ordering the medicine put in a cup, he offered it to her again, and she drank it without question. As she quieted under its influence the disappointed listeners, not tiptoeing carefully from the room, heard her murmur in final appeal:

"Cannot Adelaide spare one minute from—from her company downstairs to wish me health and kiss me good night?"

Was it weakness or a settled inability to remember anything but that which filled her own mind?

It proved to be a settled inability to take in any new ideas or even to remember much beyond the completion of that dinner. As the days passed and news of her condition came to me from time to time I found that she had not only forgotten what had passed between herself and the rest of the family previous to their departure for the clubhouse, but all that had afterward occurred at the Whispering Pines, even to her own presence there and the ride home. She could not even retain in her mind for any appreciable length of time the idea of Adelaide's death. Even after Dr. Carpenter, with infinite precautions, revealed to her the truth—not that Adelaide had been murdered, but that Adelaide had passed away during the period of her own illness—Carmel gave but one cry of grief, then immediately burst forth in her old complaint that Adelaide neglected her. She had lost her happiness and hope and Adelaide would not spare her an hour.

This expression when I heard of it convinced me, as I believe it did some others, that her act of self denial in not humoring my whim and flying from home and duty that night had made a stronger impression on her mind than all that came after.

She never asked for Arthur. This may have grieved him; but, according to my faithful friend and attorney, it appeared to have the contrary effect and to bring him positive relief. What it was borne in on him, as it was soon to be borne in on all, that her mind was not what it was he grew noticeably more cheerful and less suspicious in his manner.

With this new shock of Carmel's inability to explain her own part in the tragedy and thus release my testimony and make me a man again in my own eyes I lost the sustaining power which had previously held me up. I became apathetic, no longer counting the hours and thankful when they passed. Arthur had not been arrested, but he understood or allowed others to see that he understood the reason for the surveillance under which he was now strictly kept.

Of the inquest, which was held in due course, I shall not say much. Only one new fact was elicited by its means, and that of interest solely as making clear how there came to be evidences of poison in Adelaide's stomach without the quantity being great enough for more than a temporary disturbance.

Maggie, the second girl, had something to say about this when the vial which had held the poison was handed about for inspection. She had handled that vial many times on the shelf where it was kept. Once she had dropped it, and, the cork coming out, some of the contents had escaped. Frightened at the mishap, she had filled the vial up with water and put it, thus diluted, back on the shelf. No one had noticed the difference, and she had forgotten all about the matter until now. From her description there must have been very little of the dangerous drug left in the vial and the jury rendered the noncommittal verdict:

I had expected this. The evidence pointing as it did in two opposing directions, presented a problem which a coroner's jury could hardly be expected to solve. I was allowed one sweet half hour of freedom; then I was detained to await the action of the grand jury, and so was Arthur.

When I was informed of this latter fact I made a solemn vow to myself. It was this: If it falls to my lot to be indicted for this murderous offense I will continue to keep my own counsel. But if I escape and a true bill should be found against Arthur then will I follow my better instinct and reveal what I have hitherto kept concealed, even if the torment of the betrayal drives me to self destruction afterward, for I no longer cherished the smallest doubt that to Carmel's sudden rage, and to that alone, the death of Adelaide was due.

My reason for this change from troubled to absolute conviction can be easily explained. It dated from the inquest and will best appear in the relation of an interview I held with my attorney, Charles Clifton, very soon after my second incarceration.

We had discussed the situation till there seemed to be nothing left to discuss. I understand him, and he thought he understood me. He believed Arthur guilty and credited me with the same convictions. Thus only could he explain my inconceivable reticence on certain points he was very well assured I could make clear if I would. That he was not the only man who had drawn these same conclusions from my attitude both before and during the inquest troubled me greatly and deeply disturbed my conscience.

I introduced the topic thus:

"You remember the detached sentences taken down by the nurse during the period of Carmel's unconsciousness. They were regarded as senseless ravings, and such they doubtless were, but there was one of them which attracted my attention and of which I should like an explanation. I wish I had that woman's little book here. I should like to read for myself those wandering utterances."

"You can," was the unexpected and welcome reply. "I took them all down in shorthand as they fell from Dr. Perry's lips. I have not had time since to transcribe them but I can read some of them to you if you will give me an idea as to which ones you want."

"Read the first—what she said on the day of the funeral. I do not think the rest matter very much."

Clifton took a paper from her [illegible] and after only a short delay read out these words, among others:

"December the 5th.—At 3:40 p. m., as the services neared their close, a violent change took place in her appearance, and she uttered in shrill tones those astonishing words which horrified all below and made us feel that she had a clairvoyant knowledge of the closing of the casket then taking place.

" 'Break it open, break it open, and see if her heart is there!' "

"Pause there," I said. "That is what I mean. It was not the only time she uttered that cry. If you will glance farther down you will come across a second exclamation of the like character."

"Yes; here it is. It was while the ubiquitous Sweetwater was mousing about the room."

"Read the very words he heard. I have a reason, Clifton. Humor me for this once."

"Certainly—no trouble. She cried this time: 'Break it open! Break the glass and look in. Her heart should be there—her heart—her heart!' Horrible, but you insisted, Ranelagh."

"I thought I heard that word glass," I muttered, more to myself than to him. Then, with a choking fear of giving away my thought, but unable to resist the opportunity of settling my own fears, I asked, "Was there glass in the casket lid?"

"No; there never is."

"But she may have thought there was," I suggested hastily. Then before he could reply, "What do you think the nurse meant by a violent change in her patient?"

"Why, she roused up, I suppose—moved or made some wild or feverish gesture."

"That is what I should like to know. Is the detective, Sweetwater, still in town?"

"I believe so; came up for the inquest, but goes back tonight."

"See him, Clifton. Ask him to relate this scene. He was present, you know. Get him to talk about it. You can, and without rousing his suspicion, keen as they all say he is. And when he talks listen and remember what he says. But don't ask questions. Do this for me, Clifton. Some day I may be able to explain my request, but not now."

"I'm at your service," he replied, but he looked hurt at being thus set to work in the dark, and I dared say nothing to ease the situation. He came in again toward evening, and this was what he told me:

"I have seen Sweetwater and was more fortunate in my interview than I expected. He talked freely and in the course of the conversation described the very occurrence in which you are so interested. Carmel had been lying quietly previous to this outbreak, but suddenly started into feverish life and, raising herself up in her bed, pointed straight before her and uttered the words we have repeated. That's all there was to it, and I don't see, for my part, what you have gained by a repetition of the same or why you lay so much stress upon her gesture. What she said was the thing, though even that is immaterial from a legal point of view, which is the only view of any importance to you or to me at this juncture."

I knew her room. I had been taken in there once by Adelaide, as a sequence to a long conversation about Carmel, shortly after her first return from school. Adelaide wished to show me the cabinet on the wall, the cabinet at which Carmel undoubtedly pointed, if her bed stood as it stood then. It was not quite full at that time. It did not contain Adelaide's heart among the other broken toys which Carmel had destroyed with her own hand and foot in her moments of frenzied passion. Adelaide had kept them all, locked behind glass and in full view of the child's eyes night and day, that the shame of those past destructive moments might guard her from their repetition and help her to understand her temper and herself.

I could not doubt her guilt after this. Whatever peace her forgetfulness had brought, whatever innocent longing after Adelaide, the wild cry of those first few hours, ere yet the impressions of her awful experience had succumbed to disease, revealed her secret and showed the workings of her conscience. It had not been understood by others; it had passed as an awesome episode.

TENNIS CONTESTS

America's Crack Players to Participate in Three Days' Tourney.

ON COUNTRY CLUB COURTS.

Men and Women Experts to Figure in Big Competitions on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 18, 19, 20.

The tennis committee of the Plainfield Country Club, of which S. Wallis Merrihew is the chairman, has arranged for a big three-day invitation lawn tennis tournament at the club next week, when some of the most prominent players in the country will be the guests of the club. This will probably be the most important event in tennis ever held in this city. The committee began securing players nearly two months ago and it has decided to hold two events—men's doubles and mixed doubles. The dates are May 18, 19 and 20, and it is expected that there will be eight teams in each event.

The very successful exhibition match between Alexander and Hackett and Gardner and Leonard last spread the fame of the Plainfield Country Club among out-of-town players and led to a desire for a larger tournament this spring. Inquiry among the leading racket wielders made it plain that entries of a high class could be obtained without trouble, and plans were immediately set on foot to usher in the competition season with a gala event that would eclipse in importance anything ever seen in Plainfield. The teams in the men's doubles will be selected from such players as Harold H. Hackett (four times national champion in doubles), Raymond D. Little, Karl H. Behr, T. R. Pell, G. F. Touchard, C. R. Gardner, W. B. Cragin, Jr., F. C. Inman, L. E. Mahan, W. M. Hall, C. G. Shafer and H. A. Plummer.

Equally noteworthy is the array of talent among the women players. Those who will compete include Miss Marie Wagner, Mrs. Frederick Schmitz, Miss Elizabeth Moore, Miss Clara Kuttroff, Miss Edna Wildey, Miss Adelaide Browning, and Miss Barbara Fleming.

APPOINT US TREASURER

This Company has arranged facilities that enables it to act as Treasurer of Clubs, Fraternal Orders, Societies, Churches, etc., for which services only a nominal charge will be made. The advantage of appointing an institution like the State Trust Company in such a capacity will be readily appreciated by every one. We will be glad to discuss this matter with any one desiring such facilities.

RIDGEWOOD'S NINE HERE ON SATURDAY

Manager Ernest Dorflinger, of the Plainfield Baseball Club has scheduled a game for Saturday with the strong Ridgewood Athletic Club, one of the fastest semi-professional aggregations in the east, and a fine game is anticipated by the local fans. The contest will be played at Crescent Oval. The local team is going very fast at present, having got a good start with two victories and no defeats and Manager Dorflinger is sure that his nine will score another victory on Saturday.

Harry A. Harrer, manager for the Ridgewoods, has written to Manager Dorflinger, telling his that he expects to leave Plainfield with the score on his side. Dahlinger, of the visiting team, caught for the Commercial High School last year, his team winning the championship. Davis had a try-out with Newark, and Vanderlip was with Jersey City in 1910 and was ordered to report this year again. He did not do so, because he had a better job. The lineup of the visitors will be as follows:

Wadsworth, 3b; Devine, 1b; Schuessler, 2b; Dahlinger, c; McCann, cf; Miller, 3b; Davis, p-lf; Brander, rf; Vanderlip, lf-p; extra, Bohn, p; Enchion, c. The Plainfield team will lineup as follows: Driscoll, 1b; B. Martin, 2b; Harter, ss; Ramsberger, 3b; Nelson, c; Montross,p; Fritts, lf; Cosgrove, rf; Schott,cf.

The Sunday-school of the First Baptist church will hold an entertainment and social in the lecture room of the church, Thursday evening, May 18.

FAVOR COMMISSION GOVERNMENT FOR CITY

The Chamber of Commerce, which has taken a deep interest in the plan of government by commission, having through its representatives, kept in touch with State legislation, conferences and public hearings at the State House while bills were pending, it seems, is convinced that the new form of government would be of great advantage to Plainfield. Last evening, President George L. Babcock, of the Chamber of Commerce, entertained a number of citizens at his home, the conference being for the purpose of discussing and considering the new plan of government.

Former Mayors Alexander Gilbert and Charles J. Fisk led the discussion and their opinions and suggestions were listened to with marked interest and attention. Mr. Fisk carefully reviewed the act of the Legislature granting the right of the adoption of this plan and in a comprehensive manner explained the principle features.

Mr. Gilbert advised the conference to consider this matter with great care and approved of a plan which might educate the community as to the importance of the emasure. His remarks were approved by those present. R. Henry Depew, who has made a thorough study of the plan, took part in the discussion, approving of the idea, as did also William M. Stillman, Dr. Richard Moldenke, Alexander Milne, Charles H. Frost and several others.

It was the opinion of those present that no hasty action should be taken in forcing the new plan of government upon this city, but that the matter be fairly and broadly discussed and the people taken into confidence as to the merits of the proposed new system and a campaign of education was advised.

The conference decided to appoint a committee of five representative citizens for the purpose of inquiring into all of the efatures of the plan and embrace them in a report which is to be submitted to the Chamber of Commerce when completed.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORKERS PLAN FOR AN INSTITUTE.

The Graded Sunday-school Association will hold a Sunday-school Institute in the First Presbyterian church, on the afternoon and evening of Monday, May 22, attractive programs having been prepared for the affair. In the afternoon, the Junior department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school, under the direction of Superintendent A. M. Harris, will have an important part in the program, as will also the Primary department of the Park Avenue Baptist church school, under the direction of Miss Myra Runyon.

In the evening Louis Koehler, State secretary of the Sunday-school Association, will make the principal address, and there will be special music. A basket supper will be served in the chapel between the afternoon and evening sessions.

Trenton, May 11.—The Civil Service Commission has announced the names of nine candidates who passed the examinations held in Newark and Trenton, April 6, for the position of first-grade male stenographer in the State, Essex county and Newark service. In order of merit they are: Nathaniel Sofman and Edward Delaney, Newark; James E. Lauenstein, Greystone Park; Robert Queen, Newark; Elmer E. Higgins, Rahway; Robert S. Sigley, Richard A. Porter, Ralph Newton and Chas. W. G. Breed, Trenton; John W. A. Elmess, Newark.

Auto and Carriage Collide.

A carriage driven by F. D. Warren, of Hillside avenue, was run into yesterday by an automobile driven by George Hartfeelder, of North Plainfield, at the corner of East Third street and Watchung avenue. The collision resulted in the knocking down of Mr. Warren's horse and the breaking of the harness and shafts of the carriage. The automobile suffered no damage neither was anyone hurt.

Will Observe "Mothers' Day."

"Mothers' Day' will be observed by the Sunday school of the First Baptist church, next Sunday afternoon with an appropriate program of responsive readings, hymns, recitations and special music. The white carnation is "Mothers Day" flower, and this flower will have an important part in the observance of the day, under the direction of James E. Church, superintendent.

It is Now "The City Building."

David T. Kenney, owner of the building on North avenue, formerly known as the "Smalley Building," has changed its name to "The City Building" for the reason that it is practically occupied by all of the city offices. In the opinion of the owner the new name will be less confusing and will meet with general approbation.

BOY SAVES HIMSELF BY PRESENCE OF MIND

Frank Green, of West Third street, one of the brightest messenger boys attached to the Western Union office, narrowly escaped serious injury in an automobile bicycle accident on West Front street, last evening, almost exactly similar to the one on South avenue Tuesday, that may result fatally. Only the fact that the machine was running slowly and the driver applied his brake promptly saved the lad from being run over. As it was his knee was wrenched, his right hand cut and his wheel badly wrecked.

Green was riding west on Front street and near Giraud avenue attempted to cross to the left in front of an auto said to be driven by Frank Rinehart, of Dunellen. The bicycle slipped on a wet car track and the rider was thrown directly in the path of the auto. With great presence of mind he rolled forward and when the machine stopped the front was directly over him. The front wheels struck the bicycle and put it out of commission. When the lad first went down, two women in the car believed he would surely be killed and emitted piercing screams. Green was assisted to his feet by witnesses of the accident and was able to go home alone.

PLAN ADDITIONS

Two Wings to be Added to High School Building Costing $35,000.

NEED OF MORE CLASS ROOMS.

Education Board Aims to Relieve Congested Condition at School—No Action for the Present On Proposed Primary School.

At a special meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education last night it was decided to ask for an appropriation of $35,000 to defray the expenses of erecting two wings to the present High School building. Incidentally the question of securing the new school site at the corner of Kensington and Prospect avenues was indefinitely postponed.

According to Superintendent Maxson, certain classes of the High School have become so congested that more room is needed before the opening of the school in the fall. As the matter now stands the Science, Manual Training and Commercial classes are overcrowded and pupils must sit two at a desk instead of one. Some consideration was given the subject last night, in fact it was thoroughly canvassed by the members present.

When the High School was built at a cost of $150,000 the architects made provisions for just such an emergency and it is the opinion of the board that now is the time to make the additon. While it appears to some of the members that another school ought to be built there are those who believe that the addition to the present High School building will relieve pressing conditions more promptly.

During the past few months the board has been receiving protests against the erection of a new school building at the proposed site on Kensington avenue. A committee of citizens have voiced their objections in the open meetings of the board and several other sites have been proposed. However, this matter has been postponed until after the summer acations at least, and it is believed that after the re-assembling of the board in the fall some new site will have been selected.

SESAME CLUB HOLDS ANNUAL ENTERTAINMENT.

The Sesame Club gave its closing entertainment at the home of Mrs. LeRoy Gates, on First place. The house was most attractively decorated with spring flowers. The guests were received by Mrs. Tenant, the president, and Mrs. Gates. It has been the custom of the club to read a Shakespeareon play at its last meeting, and since the program during the past year has been Roman, "Julius Ceasar" was chosen.

The several characters of the play were taken by the club members; but the chief feature was Mark Anthony's speech, splendidly given by Mrs. Stuart H. Simons. Music, arranged by Miss Kate Biglow, was given between the acts of the play. Several vocal selections were given by Mrs. Duncan Taylor and Mrs. Vesey, and piano selections by Mrs. Harry Johnson and Miss Biglow.

BOROUGH WOMEN FINED FOR DISORDERLY CONDUCT.

Mrs. Hannah Meadows and her sister, Mrs. John Keiderling, who were arrested Wednesday afternoon for disorderly conduct, were arraigned before Recorder Dolliver this morning. Mrs. Meadows, who led an attack on Marshal Keller, the arresting officer, was decidedly flippant in court and had to be called to order several times. She was fined $5 and told a few facts beside. Mrs. Keiderling was fined $2.

Edward Vail, who came to court yesterday morning with a bun on to see that the women got fair play, and was arrested on his refusal to go home, was arraigned before the recorder and released on suspended sentence.

HYDRANTS TO BE INSPECTED BY COMMISSIONER GAVETT.

Street Commissioner Gavett in company with a representative of the Plainfield-Union Water Company, will make a trip about the city inspecting every hydrant with a view to putting each one in order.

This action is taken following a complaint made by Chief Doane to Commissioner Gavett that the men operating the street sprinkling carts have got the hydrants out of order, which might cause considerable trouble in case of fire. Each hydrant will be put in order and then the drivers of sprinkling carts given explicit instructions how to operate them.

KING'S DAUGHTERS GET TWO $5,000 LEGACIES

The City Union of The King's Daughters, yesterday, received from Joseph P. Tate, executor for the estate of Mrs. M. E. Edgerton, two checks of $5,000 each, one for the camp work on the mountain, and the other for The Day Nursery work. This was in accordance with the bequests of Mrs. Edgerton and the King's Daughters are natually pleased for the money is greatly needed.

The payment of the full amounts was somewhat of a surprise to the members of the organization, for it was expected that a certain percentage would be deducted as an inheritance tax.

The bequest of $5,000 for The Day Nursery work made it possible for the King's Daughters to acquire a fine property on West Front street, opposite Liberty, which is better adapted in every way for carrying on this work, while the other $5,000 will be a great help in conducting the summer camp work.

The nurse committee from the King's Daughters held a monthly business meeting yesterday, when only routine matters were considered. The work was reported to be progressing satisfactorily.

HUNT CLUB'S RACES TOMORROW AFTERNOON

The club has arranged to have the 12 o'clock express from New York stop here, affording those from the city an excellent opportunity to reach here in time for the races. Stages will also meet all trolleys on Park avenue for the convenience of those who have no other means of reaching the driving park. The following officials will act at the meet:

Stewards—A. Henry Higginson, Charles Pfizer, William M. Kerr, Windsor T. White, Robert Glendenning; judges—Robert A. Fairbairn, E. S. Hooley, F. W. Jones, Jr.; starter—J. M. A large force of men has been engaged in putting the park and the track in fine condition for the meet and everything points to a successful meet.

BIG ROW LANDED FIVE MEN IN POLICE COURT.

There was a stormy scene at the corner of Fifth street and Watchung avenue, yesterday afternoon, when John Ferstick and his brother, Isaac Ferstick; Solomon Eskerson, the latter's son, Morris, and Alexander Menzicvitz got into a row over some unfinished work and it is alleged that the young men, Ferstick brothers, used some profane language to the elder Eskerson. When arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, however all pleaded not guilty to the charge of disorderly guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct preferred by Patrolman Messler and Roundsman Maurice Higgins.

At the request of Francis J. Blatz, ccunsel for the Ferstick boys, the trial was set down for Friday, May 26. Eskerson and his son and Menzicvitz were held in $25 bonds each for their appearance on that day. Samuel S. Swackhamer represented the elder Eskerson.

TOWNSHIP'S PROBLEM TO HOUSE OFFICALS

The question of providing adequate quarters for all the township offices, including the collector, assessor, justice of the peace, police, as well as fire department, was discussed at a meeting of the North Plainfield Township committee at Marvin's grocery store, yesterday afternoon. W. deLaR. Anderson, of the committee, made a proposition that quarters at Texier's Mill, the meeting place of the improvement society, be leased at a rental of $6 a month, but Albert Brokaw, also a committeeman, opposed the plan, suggesting that the committee erect a suitable building at the township's expense.

Mr. Anderson producing figures to show that according to his plan the annual sxpense would be $12, or $256 cheaper than the scheme proposed by Mr. Brokaw. Both Mr. Brokaw and Alexander Archibald opposed Mr. Anderson and the project was held up for the present.

During the regular order of business, June 4 was fixed as the date for the election on the change of lighting districts, and the dog license ordinance was passed on third reading. Steps were taken to establish a police department and to appropriate a nominal sum for its maintainance, which will enable the township to get the benefit of the money taken in as fines, instead of paying the same to the county and State authorities.

Harvey Shotwell Moore, aged 91 years, one of the oldest residents of this city, died at Muhlenberg Hospital last night, following an acute illness of a few days, which at his advancing years made recovery impossible. Despite his age, Mr. Moore was remarkably active. One of his favorite amusements was checkers and he was playing a game with Stephen Staats, of West Second street, when taken ill on Tuesday. Mr. Staats noticed that Mr. Moore frequently dropped the checkers in his hand and the latter finally said that he felt too ill to continue the game. A physician was summoned and Mr. Moore was removed to the hospital.

Mr. Moore was born at Rahway and until twenty years ago, when he came to this city, always lived there. For many years he was engaged in the cattle business with Jacob Long, and was very successful. His wife died about sixteen years ago. He was a Friend and prior to living here was a member of the Rahway meeting. He afterwards joined the Plainfield meeting and was a regular attendant at the services until he became too feeble. For many years he boarded with Mrs. Aretta H. Manning, at Fourth street and Madison avenue. Later he removed to the home of Stephen Staats on West Second street. He was the father of the late William Harvey Moore, who was superintendent of the local electric light plant prior to its absorption by the P. S. C.

Surviving him is one brother, Philip Moore, aged 86 years, of Olympia, State of Washington, who is State librarian and a man of high literary attainments, and also a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mary Moore, and a granddaughter, Miss Caroline Moore.

The funeral will be held at the Friends meeting-house on Watchung avenue tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Complained to Health Board.

J. A. Staats, manager and a director for the Watchung Spring Water Company, appeared before the Board of Health of North Plainfield Township, yesterday afternoon, and made a complaint regarding the dumping of cesspool refuse on the property of Brooks Carson in the borough. The board received the complaint and the secretary was instructed to notify Mr. Carson that if the practice continued he would be liable to arrest and a fine.

Fining Them Now.

Vicento Paullo, in court this morning, was arraigned, Patrolman McGinley charging him with riding his bicycle on the sidewalk on Spooner avenue. Paullo contributed $3 to the city treasury in the shape of a fine.

PLAINS' BAPTIST BOYS GATHER AT A SUPPER

Under the auspices of the Junior Boys' Bible class of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, a supper and entertainment was held at the church last night. It was the first affair of the kind held and the boys were so much pleased that it will probably be repeated at some future time. Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor, was the toastmaster, and there were short addresses by Mr. Mathiews, Edward Hatfield, president of the class; Keith Saunders, secretary; Edward Meyer, treasurer; Martin A. Korff on "The Success of the Bible Class," and Captain H. B. Saunders on "How to Secure New Members."

The rooms were attractively decorated with dog wood and daffodils by the women of the church, who also had charge of the arrangements for the supper. The committee comprised Mrs. Franklin K. Mathiews, Mrs. T. H. Paff, Miss Gertrude Smalley. Other members present besides those mentioned were Frank Lee, George Clark, Max Saunders, Harry Paff, Walter Demarest, Fred Saunders and Fred Comb. After the supper the evening was spent in enjoying a vocal and instrumental program.

ELKS REPEAT THEIR BIG MINSTREL SHOW

Another large and enthusiastic audience greeted the Elks' minstrel troupe on the occasion of its second performance of the season at the Plainfield theatre, last night. The show moved with the same smoothness and precision as marked the opening, all of the ends, soloists and olio artists again scoring hits. John Cose came across with new verses to his topical song that produced prolonged applause.

The laughable sketch, "I's Your Friend," presented by Harry Blimm and Edwin Bennett, was even better than on Wednesday night. Blimm's representation of the stolid darky unable to comprehend the style of etiquette advanced by Bennett, a dapper gentleman of color, takes the lead in amateur efforts of the past few years. They were encored repeatedly.

A delegation from the Morristown Lodge of Elks was in attendance last night, and was so pleased with the Elks quartet in its closing sketch, "A Night at the Club," that the members were engaged for the same act at the Morristown show next week. A party of Plainfielders will accompany them over.

At the conclusion of last night's show the troupe adjourned to Timbo's restaurant, where they enjoyed a supper and general good time until 2 o'clock this morning. A large part of the program was gone over and brief addresses were given by the principals and minstrel committee.

MOUNT OLIVE PUPILS ARE SEEN IN A PLAY.

At the Mt. Olive Baptist church last evening several of the Sunday school pupils presented a play entitled "A Truant Officer in the Sunday School." Agnes Alexander, Helen Pollard, Mary and Helen Vaughn, daughters of the pastor, Rev. N. W. Vaughn, took part. Preceding the playlet solos, quartet and choruses amused the 300 people present.

The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Junior Missionary Band and netted $40. The proceeds will be devoted to the building fund of the new church which will be begun within three weeks.

THE WEATHER.

Generally fair tonight and Saturday, warmer tonight.

Miss Minnie Imbierowic, Miss Mamie Graham, George Hess and Dr Merring, of Long Island City, and former Battalion Chief and Mrs. Purcy, of New York, formed a theatre party that attended the Elks minstrel show, last night. They were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward Steurwald, of East Second street. Mr. and Mrs. Purroy are now living at their summer home at Long Branch and came from there by auto.

AUTO VICTIM DEAD

AUTOMOBILIST NOT TO BLAME.

He Appears Before Judge Atwater and Is Released On $2,000 Bail On Charge of Manslaughter.

Because of the death of Santi Conti in Muhlenberg Hospital this morning as a result of injuries sustained by being hit by an automobile driven by him, A. L. C. Marsh was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning and held for the action of the grand jury. Mr. Marsh was taken to Elizabeth and was arraigned before Judge Atwater on a charge of manslaughter.

When arraigned Mr. Marsh pleaded not guilty through his counsel, former Senator Reed. Judge Atwater fixed bail at $2,000, which was furnished by Harry W. Marshall.

Senator Charles A. Reed appeared in court to represent Mr. Marsh and waived examination and when the automobile carried the party in which Chief Kiely was prominent Mr. Marsh looked ready to drop. It was said this morning that he felt so keenly the result of the unfortunate accident that Mr. Marsh had been unable to sleep or eat.

So far as has been learned Mr. Marsh was driving his automobile along South avenue on Tuesday afternoon between the Rushmore Dynamo Works and the Scott Press Works; directly in front of him he noticed a bicycle rider who evidently had no control over his wheel. In trying to avoid the young man, Conti, Mr. Marsh drove his car into the curb, but unfortunately struck Conti before striking the sidewalk. Conti was picked up unconscious and was hurried to Muhlenberg Hospital in the police patrol wagon. On examination it was found that his left leg was broken in two places and that his right thigh was fractured.

Yesterday afternoon symptoms developed which led the doctors to believe that Conti had been injured internally and later the young man began to grow weak. He died this morning at 1:30 o'clock and Mr. Marsh was immediately placed in custody.

Mayor George W. V. Moy, Harry W. Marshall and Hugh A. Todd accompanied the accused automobilist to Elizabeth.

Conti's funeral will take place on Monday morning. The body is now lying at Cole's undertaking establishment on West Second street and an autopsy was held at 2 o'clock this afternoon by Doctor W. H. Anthony.

GRAVE CHARGE AGAINST AN ITALIAN COBBLER.

Counsellor Robert Newton Crane demanded a hearing this morning in the charge brought against his client, Philip Ciocco, of 500 West Fourth street, against whom Patrolman Cornelius McCarthy and Mrs. Elizabeth Ennis made a serious charge this morning. The hearing was set down for tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Ennis' daughter, Elizabeth, is but eleven years old.

Patrolman McCarthy said this morning that he had been suuspicious of Ciocco for some time and had determined to watch him and yesterday his suspicions were confirmed by the developments which followed in the man's store. WILSON, 1912, BUTTONS OUT

Campaign buttons have been brought to Washington bearing the device: "Woodrow Wilson for President, 1912." Members of the New Jersey delegation are wearing them and they are being asked for in other places.

Josephus Daniels, Democratic national committeeman for North Carolina, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, left for home, carrying several of them and it will not be long before they are displayed on coat lapels in all parts of the country.

When Dr. Wilson speaks in Raleigh, May 31, before the University of North Carolina, there will be "Wilson for President" buttons on many a coat, and the demand will undoubtedly spread rapidly. Wednesday Senator James E. Martine received a letter from President Liller, of Indianapolis, of the National League of Democratic Clubs, enclosing a number of the buttons, which were not to be distributed for the present. But it was finally decided that one should be pinned to the lapel of a district messenger boy, and he was sent to his office. He returned for another, and his companion soon was wearing one. This was late in the afternoon, but political Washington, argus-eyed, grabbed the fact, and it sought its way to the front as one of the important political incidents of the day's news.

William W. St. John, secretary to Senator Martine, soon was deluged with applications, and the buttons on hand were not even seed enough to sow the crop demanded by ardent followers of the New Jersey Chief Executive. It was regarded as significant that the buttons were sent voluntarily by the president of the Democratic National Club League.

COMMISSION GOV'T BLESSES HOUSTON

What Has Been Done and How in Six Years of New Form of Municipal Administration.

Houston, Texas, May 12.—With the dedication this year of a new $400,000 municipal auditorium of steel and concrete, built out of the general revenue of the city without one cent of graft; the voting of $1,250,000 bonds for use in deepening and straightening the Houston Ship Channel and the simultaneous issue of $500,000 bonds for the construction of the Main street concrete viaduct, bringing in closer communication the South and North ends of the city, the people of Houston are appreciating the great benefits made possible through the inauguration five and a half years ago of the commission form of government and its successful administration through the trials of the change, and the supreme test it stood when it took hold of city affairs in 1905, shouldering a floating indebtedness of $400,000.

Today the commission form of municipal government in Houston has stood the test supreme. Without it and with the old aldermanic system again in sway, Houston would step backward from the front of the line of progress, she is today leading in the South. The commission form is the old democratic idea of fairness in a "government by, of and for the people," and is administered without the "recall," but contains the progressive referendum issue, which makes it incumbent upon the commissioners to call a special election on any matter if the election is petitioned for by 500 qualified voters.

The commission form of government is a Texas product which today has spread throughout the United States and Canada with one foreign city considering the Houston plan. Berlin, Germany, is studying the Houston form and a special commissioner may be sent to personally look into the system.

To the student of the commission form of government the history of its origin will be of interest. The 8th day of September, 1900, both Houston and Galveston, among other cities operating under a charter, were fair types of the average badly managed American city; not that either was controlled by bad men for such is not true, but each was the victim of a vicious and obsolete system of government. The 9th day of the same month the city of Galveston was in ruins. Six thousand of her people had been swept into eternity and property was destroyed to the extent of $18,000,000. Thousands of her dead lay unburied midst the ruins. The city government was paralyzed and temporary relief was scught in the State militia.

But the soldiers were soon replaced by a civil government in the hands of a commission appointed by the governor of the State. Fortunately for Galveston and the world her commissioners were business men and the very best type of her citizenship. They assumed control, fortunately, too, free from those restrictions that paralyze the average city government. Having no political debts to pay and no political enemies to punish they proceeded to reclaim a city in ruins by the application of those simple business principles that had brought success to their private affairs. The results were soon apparent in every direction, Galveston rose from her watery grave to walk in the newness of life.

The rehabilitation of Galveston marked the destiny of Houston. Houston studied the merits of the form of government at Galveston and decided to change her government. Today Houston is a clean, thriving honestly and capably governed city of 105,000 people with prospects of future achievements little less than dazzling.

Under the charter secured from the Legislature of Texas the commission plan was founded in Houston on a basis of a mayor and four commissioners. The election occurred June 27, 1905. The mayor and commissioners were elected by the qualified voters, each commissioner representing the whole city instead of a ward and not one section at the expense of the other. Other heads of departments were appointed by the mayor, the controller being the only office to be confirmed by the council. Assistants and employes were selected by the heads of departments and are subject to dismissal whenever their services are not satisfactory, just as in a private concern. Heads

DES MOINES' MAYOR ON COMMISSION GOV'T

John McVicker, Mayor of Des Moines, which is governed by the commission plan, has consented to speak in Elizabeth on Thursday night, May 25. The lecture will be held under the auspices of the Board of Trade and Proctor's Broad Street theatre has been given over by Manager Frederick Thomsen for the purpose. Mayor McVicker is one of the most expert talkers on commission government, a fact which will no doubt make his lecture of interest to residents of Elizabeth. He was mayor of Des Moines before the commission plan was adopted and when he ran for re-election he received an overwhelming vote.

Besides Mayor McVicker there will be other speakers among whom will be Charles Zeublin, formerly professor of sociology in Chicago University, who will speak on the "New Civic Spirit." The latter lecture will be held under the auspices of the Charity Organization Society.

New Brunswick is to have a Commission Government League. That much has been determined upon at the meeting of the Board of Trade, and it has been decided to popularize the movement in every way

'FIRST AID' CLASSES ENJOY SOCIABLE

The members of the afternoon and evening "First Aid" classes of the Y. W. C. A. enjoyed a social affair, last night, as a conclusion to the lectures and examinations in progress through the winter. It was very enjoyable in many ways.

The feature of the entertainment part of the gathering was a farcical skit, "First Aid to the Injured." It was decidedly funny and brought out in a humorous way some of the things the class had learned. Those taking part in it were the Misses Elsie Burke, Grace Burke, Beresford Letcher, Anne Waldo and Florence Prior.

At the conclusion of the skit, Dr. Clara Krans presented diplomas from the National Red Cross Society to forty-eight members of the two classes who had taken examinations. Dr. Krans was in turn presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers by Miss Margaret McCutchen in behalf of the class. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of Miss Elsie Burke, Miss Mabel Trenbath and Miss Florence Burt.

ENTERTAINMENT AS PLAYGROUND BENEFIT

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church gave a good entertainment at the church, last night, for the benefit of the playgrounds to be established on Park avenue, near Randolph road, for the use of the church members. The program included a number of selections by a male quartet comprising Dr. O. B. Whitford, Paul Whitford, Charles P. Titsworth and Roy Titsworth, while Roland Davis gave several recitations. Other features were a pound auction and a Japanese tea room.

After the entertainment ice cream cones and candy were sold. The general committee in charge of the affair comprised Charles Neagle, chairman; Miss Isabelle Randolph, Roland Davis, Miss Helen Rogers and Roy Titsworth. About $20 was netted for the playground fund. It is proposed to open the playgrounds in about a month. Tennis courts, swings, etc., will be provided for young and old.

Salvation Army Meeting.

A special service will be held at the Salvation Army on Sunday evening. George Fitzgerald, formerly an operatic singer, will sing special Gospel solos and give the story of his conversion. Mr. Fitzgerald has travelled with some of the leading evangelists as a soloist, and a profitable time is looked forward to on his visit to the local corps.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fleming, Rev. W. H. Neilson and Miss C. J. Reed, of this city, are registered at The Chalfonte, Atlantic City.

NEW REAL ESTATE OFFICE—Will open up my new office on Monday morning at No. 155 North avenue, ground floor. Have already purchased a good size book for the purpose of listing every property in Plainfield. My object is to fill it full of the conditions of your property, including the size of mortgage on same; then to leave the book to my grandchildren to read. I am the man who has been working in a four-dollar capacity to fight nervous prostration for the last four years and in those conditions have earned the title of selling and exchanging more property than any two agents in Plainfield. Now I am better and am ready for business. If you are coming to see me let me tell you something. Don't come near me if you expect me to handle your house, if it is sprinkled with signs or one sign which reads for sale by any broker, unless you want to sell out for 50 cents on the $1.00, for I want you to known that my feeling for you is the same as yours is for me, where you want to include me under any old broker. And let me tell you that these old signs are what make Plainfield real estate sell for less money than it does in any city or town along the Central, notwithstanding it has the name of "City Beautiful." Your any old broker means that some of them should be selling peanuts, instead of offering your property or spoiling the sale of it. Have sold seven properties in the last two weeks. D. Foster Updike, the real estate broker who works on the plan "that my time is yours." My office is not as it will be when the store front is changed, but will answer the purpose for a short time. 4 29 12 of departments may be dismissed by the mayor, while the commissioners may be impeached as well as the mayor by a majority vote of all commissioners elected.

Thus the administration of a city is placed on a business basis. As in the directorate of a corporation, its officers can be removed by a majority vote, while all department heads are responsible to the chief and the various employes responsible to the department head and the mayor.

Under the Houston charter the mayor receives $4,000 per year and the commissioners $2,400 each per annum, all devoting their entire time to the city service.

Inaugurated in July, 1905, the present government found a floating debt of over $400,000 and an empty treasury. The city virtually had no credit. There was not a single merchant who desired to transact any business with the local government. Gloomy as the prospect was the authorities went about their task with a determination to better conditions. Useless and expensive officers were abolished and some consolidated. A national bank was made treasurer of the city, allowing a salary of only $50 per month for clerk hire and the bank to pay interest on all balances to the credit of the city.

The city attorney was instructed to institute and file suits for delinquent taxes. This caused to flow into the city treasury nearly $100,000 in eight months from this source alone. By the strictest economy the administration redeemed in the first eight months of the term $306,202.47 of the old floating debt, besides paying the monthly bills promptly, as well as the salaries of the employes.

By this time the merchants of the city were anxious to do business with the local city government, and credit was restored at home and abroad. In the five and a half years of commission rule the city of Houston has wiped out all floating debts and has given to the taxpayers out of the treasury, without the issuance of a single bond, the following permanent improvements:

City attorney, law library	$ 974.10
Assessor and collector, block book system	10,000.00
City hall, furniture and fixtures	1,123.67
Police department	4,096.03
Fire department, buildings and equipment	66,150.45
Electrical department	26,551.21
Health department	6,168.26
Parks	52,007.53
Streets and bridges	65,714.10
Asphalt plant	3,000.00
Auditorium	332,276.02
Ship channel	98,027.40
Sewers	85,212.13
Paving streets	179,261.96
Water department, extension of mains and improvements	247,932.02
Wharves and slips	33,109.89
School buildings	340,323.65
Total improvements	$1,865,757.17
Extraordinary expenses:
Storrie certificates	$ 73,300.00
Refund paving certificates	120,308.70
Sinking fund	120,220.00
Making a grand total	$2,179,585.87

While these improvements were going on the tax rate has been reduced 30 cents on the $100.

During the five and a half years of the life of the commission form in Houston no Commissioner has ever made a speech during a Council session or addressed the Council. The business of the city is conducted daily like that of any business concern, heads of departments meeting and consulting the mayor, the head of the corporation, and committees, made up of the heads of departments, transacting business daily. When the commissioners meet in public session each Monday afternoon it is merely to legalize and make record of their wekly business transactions. The length of the public meetings ranges from five to fifteen minutes.

In the inauguration of the commision form wards throughout the city were abolished. Four commissioners and the mayor took the places of the twelve ward aldermen and the mayor. These four commissioners with the mayor constitute the legislative department of the city government. The executive power is vested in the mayor, but by ordinance for the administration of the city's affairs, a large portion of the executive or administrative power is subdivided into different departments and a committee placed over each department and one of the four commissioners nominated by the mayor is what is known as the active chairman. The mayor and four commisioners are members of each committee. The active chairman practically has control of the affairs of his department, unless his views upon the matter are overruled by the whole committee,; but by the organization of the committees the active chairman does his work to a certain extent under the supervisory direction of the mayor, who is in the last analysis the head of each committee and the person in whom the executive power of a municipal government ultimately rests.

In brief the benefits accruing under the commission form of government may be summarized as follows:

Has enabled the present administration, without a bond issue, to erect three excellent brick school buildings at a cost of $125,000; to build six miles of paving; to expend $60,000 for public parks and to appropriate $50,000 for the Houston Ship Channel, exclusive of the recent $1,250,000 voted by the people of Houston.

Made possible the erection of a $400,000 municipal auditorium out of the general revenues of the city without one cent of graft. The auditorium seats 7,000 persons and is the finest convention hall in the South.

Has cleaned out the gambling houses; abolished variety theatres; discontinued the racing pool rooms, and closed the saloons after 12 o'clock midnight and all day Sunday.

There has been adopted a system of blockbooks for the tax department, which enables the board of appraisers to locate the owner of every tract of land in the city and to properly address same and collect the assessment and if necessary by suit.

Makes possible the appropriation anually of a sum exceeding $500.00 out of the general revenues for public improvements.

Purchased the city water plant, increased the cost of operation and within one year showed earnings of $10,575.35, without increasing the cost of consumption to the consumer.

Departments operating at losses under the old aldermanic form showed profitable return under the new form. For instance one department in 1902 cost $15,986.60 in operating, while the revenues were $15,172, showing a net loss of $814. For the year ending 1907 the same department was operated at a cost of $11,074.81 while the gross earnings were $16,692.75 showing a net earning of $5,601.19. This latter year was under the commision form of government.

Matters for adjustment are taken up with the mayor direct, a department head is called in and the matter settled within an hour. Before it necessitated a petition to a council, the discussion on the floor, reference to a committee and final action again in the council chamber.

With the exception of the commissioners and controller, every employ may be discharged at a moment's notice by the mayor. What is the result? A harmonious, systematic corps of employes performing their duties. Each and everyone working for the interest of the city, for they know if they do not, or lag there is someone else who will fill their places and do their duty.

Politics is obliterated from the public schools. The school board is nominated by the mayor and confirmed by the council. They in turn select a school superintendent. The teachers are selected for their fitness. No commissioner can even suggest the name of a teacher to the board.

No franchise is granted for a term longer than 30 years. If at any time within 30 days of its passage a petition signed by 500 voters is presented then such a franchise must be submitted to a vote of the people. All franchises are read at three meetings of the council.

The charter reserves the right to the city to regulate the rates of all public service corporations.

Salaries of teachers, firemen and policemen have been increased.

In five years of the commission form the assessed valuation of property in the city of Houston has increased from $37,000,000 to $62,000,000, over one half of which is in buildings.

In five years the city has increased in population 40 per cent. Miles of pavements and sewers (both sanitary and storm) have been constructed.

The street railway company, telephone company and other public service corporations pay 1 per cent. of their annual income into the city treasury.

The progress of Houston within five years is an inspiration for municipal government study. It is a transition in two years from a government threatened with a receivership to one on a cash basis with a half million to spend annually in improvements out of the general reveune.

Allen Cuzen, of South Africa, is on his way to Plainfield to visit Mr. and Mrs. James Cuzen, of West Front street. He holds the position of magistrate in South Africa.

How to Have a Warm House

Then—in the morning before business and in the evening before retiring, step down and turn the BOYNTON clinkerless, ash-cutting grate. This clears the fire perfectly. Now put in a little coal; set the dampers for the degree of heat you wish, and leave the to do the rest. The BOYNTON is the most reliable house-heater known. It consumes less coal and gives more heat for the coal consumed, than any other heater on the market.

The BOYNTON "Square Pot" never holds dead fire. BOYNTON Boilers are now equipped with this same economical fire box and quick clearing grate. See your dealer about BOYNTON "Square Pot" furnaces and boilers.

Too Late for Details.

The editor of an enterprising journal in a mining town recently called at the home of the bride's parents the day after the wedding. He wanted to tell his readers about the event and wished to give the young couple a rousing "send off" as well. The bride's mother met him at the door.

"Good morning, Mrs. Brown," smiled the editor. "I have called to get some of the details of the wedding."

"Oh, pshaw! that's too bad!" replied the matron in dismay. "They're all gone. You ought to have come last night. They ate up every scrap."—Metropolitan Magazine.

In addition to many other large contributions for entertainment, the coming season, the Pitman Cottagers' Association has appropriated $250 for a Fourth of July celebration.

Alleging that John Ellie "tore the hair off his head and face," Ferdinand Rauer, of Haledon, has instituted suit for the recovery of $500 damages in the local District Court. The two men had a quarrel a few days ago. The case will be tried before Judge Klenert next Tuesday.

Workmen on the State road connecting Vineland with the Gloucester County State road struck for an increase of twenty-five cents per day and were refused. Other men replaced them. The next lot of men wanted fifty cents in advance at the end of the first day's labor. The contractor thinks he is up against it.

Rolled by the fender of a trolley car near his home in Camden, George E. Shott, eight years old, of 1310 South Fourth street, was believed to have been seriously injured, but at the office of Dr. Haines Wednesday night it was stated that no bones had been broken. The accident was caused by the boy stepping out of the way of one car and into another.

The crew of the tug William Cramp, of Philadelphia, Wednesday picked up in the Delaware River, opposite Burlington, the body of Charles Rittman, twenty-four years old, of Frankford. He is in the employ of Joel Lowenthal, installing gasoline lighting fixtures, and Tuesday was at work at Boonton, piping a large garage there. While at work on a staging, near the ceiling, the planks gave way, and he fell to the floor. A local physician was summoned and the broken right arm cared for. Wednesday, after he had been brought to this city, he was still suffering so much from his injuries that he was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in an ambulance in charge of Dr. Frank Wade. In addition to his broken arm the patient has a bad cut over one eye and severe bruises.

SOMERVILLE.

Rev. William Robeson, pastor of St. Thomas' A. M. E. church, on Davenport street, left Wednesday for the annual conference at Asbury Park. The official board has requested the bishop to return Mr. Robeson to Somerville for another year.

BOROUGH HIGH BOYS SPANKED CITY HIGH

Defeat was the portion of the Plainfield High School baseball team yesterday afternoon when they crossed bats with the Borough High School nine on Crescent Oval. The final score was 8 to 2 and the two runs on the short end of the score were practically a gift through an error of Bodin who threw the pellet over Townley's head in an attempt to stop Hanrahan at third. But then the borough lads were in no danger. Bailey held them safe at all stages of the game. Stein handled Bailey's curves in a masterly fashion and kept base runners close to the bags. Terry pitched a good game and had he received proper support the score would have been much closer.

APPOINT US TREASURER

This Company has arranged facilities that enables it to act as Treasurer of Clubs, Fraternal Orders, Societies, Churches, etc., for which services only a nominal charge will be made. The advantage of appointing an institution like the State Trust Company in such a capacity will be readily appreciated by every one. For it not only insures careful and systematic attention to the finances of an organization but it makes the Treasurer accessible on every business day.
We will be glad to discuss this matter with any one desiring such facilities.

ADDRESSES CHAMBER ON MODEL TENEMENTS

Many women were in the audience which heard Henry Atterbury Smith explain the new system of health promoting tenement houses at the special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night. Mr. Smith is the architect for the Vanderbilt flats now being built on East Seventy-seventh street in New York. Mayor Moy introduced the speaker, and later William Jeffery announced the lecture on "Wonderland of the Telephone," to be given by Manager P. H. Burns, of the local telephone office, next Thursday night in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Smith said in part:

"The Chamber of Commerce of the City of Plainfield is doing a pioneer work in calling to the people's attention the fact that some measure should be taken toward directing proper housing facilities. There is no doubt that it is better to live in small, individual houses and that the influence of the Chamber of Commerce should be towards preventing congestion, but the multiple house has come to stay. People realize the advantages in domestic economy in living closely together. A building, which houses many families under one roof, is a more desirable investment for the speculator, and so it is highly necessary that some means should be considered to direct this tendency into proper channels. There is no doubt that the Charity Organization Society and the Anti-Tuberculosis League feel strongly that tenements should be discouraged in Plainfield, and this position is right.

"Local architects, who have given this matter study—or who will give it study if you encourage them—will doubtless evolve some plan for the various types of buildings suited to Plainfield as closely as is the open stair tenement suited to the demands of New York. Champlin L. Riley formed the Open Stair Tenement Company as an educational movement. That company is practically on object lesson: it is for the purpose of showing the speculative builder the fact that a healthful type of house can be more profitably built, operated and sold than the ordinary type to which the builder and his forefathers have been accustomed. You can readily see that even the loan-broker does not like to support a new thing; there is a risk in it, and so you cannot expect the speculative builder to make a pioneer move, but should the Chamber of Commerce influence some of your citizens to build a typical house economically for sale, so that the speculative builder can observe the whole transaction, it will not be long before he will embrace the better plan.

"Although the Open Stair Tenement Company has been in existence but a very short time and although its first two buildings are only nearing completion, yet the speculative builder has visited the buildings and is postponing some of his enterprises awaiting the result. The Stevens' Estate of Hoboken is the most prominent example of the influence of the original company. Mr. Stevens also observed that, although a corporation such as the Hoboken Land and Improvement Company could afford to build better and accept a lower rate of income than their neighbors, yet he realized that it was more important as an object lesson to make their buildings a high-paying business transaction so that the businessman—meaning the speculative builder—would be attracted.

"Should the Chamber of Commerce make this initial move, the City of Plainfield will soon derive benefit, but care should be taken that any building that is proposed be of high-paying qualities, easy to maintain as well as being healthful, otherwise the matter will be looked upon as many of the model tenements of New York, classed as a rule as a rich man's fad."

High Temperatures for May.

Weather Prophet John Neagle has furnished the following statistics of temperatures of 90 degrees and over for may since 1889, which will be read with interest by those who keep records of temperatures. The figures follow: May 10, 1889, 91 degrees; May 23, 1893, 91 degrees; May 2, 1894, 90 degrees; May 31, 1895, 97 degrees; May 10-11, 1896, 95 degrees; May 15, 1900, 94 degrees; May 23, 1902, 90 degrees; May 20, 1903, 93 degrees; May 13, 1906, 90 degrees; May 11, 1911, 91 degrees. At 1:45 this afternoon the temperature was 90 degrees.

Violated Auto Ordinance.

Joseph Ryno, of Watchung avenue, was arrested by the borough police last night for a violation of the auto ordinance in having no rear lights on his machine. He will be arraigned tonight.

CHAPTER XVI.

AT 10 INSTEAD OF 12.

"I DON'T care a rush what you do to me. If you don't believe your own officer who swore he saw Ranelagh's hands upon my sister's throat, then this world is all a jumble and it makes very little difference to me whether I'm alive or dead."

When these words of Arthur Cumberland were repeated to me I echoed them in my inmost soul. I, too, cared very little whether I lived or died.

The grand jury reeled off its cases and finally took up ours. To the last I hoped—sincerely, I think—that I should be the man to suffer indictment. But I hoped in vain. A true bill was brought against Arthur, and his trial was set for Jan. 18.

The first use I made of my liberty was to visit Adelaide's grave. In that sacred place I could best review my past and gather strength for the future. The future! Was it under my control? Did Arthur's fate hang upon my word? I believed so. But had I strength to speak that word? I had expected to; I had seen my duty clearly enough before the sitting of the grand jury. But now that Arthur was indicted, now that it was an accepted fact that he would have to stand trial instead of myself, I was conscious of such a recoil from my contemplated action that I lost all confidence in myself and my stoical adherence to what I considered the claims of justice.

I trusted Arthur; I distrusted Carmel. But she had claims to consideration which he lacked. She was a woman. Her fall would mean infinitely more to her than any disgrace to him. Even he had seemed to recognize this. Miserable and half hearted as his life had been, he had shown himself man enough not to implicate his young sister in the crime laid to his charge. What, then, was I that I should presume to disregard his lead in the difficult maze in which we were both lost? Yet because of the self restraint he manifested he had my sympathy, and I resolved to stand his friend if I saw the case really going against him. Till then I would consider the helpless girl, tongue tied by her condition and injured enough already by my misplaced love and its direful consequences.

The only change I now allowed myself was an occasional midnight stroll up Husted street. This was as near as I dared approach Carmel's windows. I feared some watchful police spy. Perhaps I feared my own hardly to be restrained longings.

This was before Carmel left with her nurse for Lakewood. After that event I turned my head no more in taking my midnight stroll. I was not told the day or hour of her departure, happily, perhaps, for us both, for I could never have kept away from the station. I heard later that she was deliberately driven past the Whispering Pines, though the other road was more direct and less free, if anything, from possible spectators. They thought, no doubt, that a sight of the place might reawaken whatever memories remained of the last desperate scene preceding her brother and sister's departure for this out of the way spot. They little knew how cruel was the test or what a storm of realization might have overwhelmed her mind as her eye fell on those accursed walls, peering from their bower of snow laden pines. But I did, and I never rested till I learned how she had borne herself in her slow drive by the two guarded gateways—merrily, it seems, and with no sign of the remembrances I feared.

One sentence, and one only, reached my ears of all she said before she disappeared from town.

"If Adelaide were only going too! But I suppose I shall meet her and Mr. Ranelagh somewhere before my return. She must be very happy, but not so peaceful as I am. She will see that when we meet. I can hardly wait for the day."

One incident more before I enter upon the serious business of the trial. I started one night for my walk at 10 o'clock instead of 12. I went the old way, and the old longing recurring at the one charmed spot on the road. I cast a quick look at the desolated house which, short as it was, roused feelings which kept my head lowered for the remainder of my walk north and to the very moment when, on my return, the same chimneys and overhanging roofs came again into view through the wintry branches. Then habit lifted my head and I paused to look again, when the low sound of a human voice, suppressed into a moan or sob, caused me to glance about for the woman or child who had uttered this note of sorrow. No one was in sight, but as I started to move on I heard my name uttered in choked tones from behind the hedge separating the Fulton grounds from the city sidewalk.

Had the voice issued from this isolated point of darkness? I went back to see. A pitiful figure was crouching there, a frail, agitated little being.

"Ella Fulton!" I exclaimed. "You wish to speak to me?"

CALF CHOLERA.

A Disease to Be Guarded Against Mainly by Scrupulous Cleanliness and Proper Feed.

When a calf comes into the world weak, puny and listless and dies in a few hours scouring, bawling and blatting and has sunken eyes and bloated belly soon after death, the disease by stockmen is called calf cholera. Many calves so affected are really living abortions. They have just enough life at birth to exist a few hours and show the symptoms described, and such calves are usually the offspring of cows that during pregnancy have been incompletely nourished upon timothy or swale hay or coarse fodder, without an adequate supply of other foods to balance the ration, or similar calves may come from fat, flabby, corn stuffed, beef bred cows.

The trouble may be prevented by proper feeding of the pregnant cow, but there is no cure. A majority of such cases, however, are due to germ infection. Cows affected with contagious abortion may produce affected calves; the afterbirth and navel cord are invaded by the germs in such cases, and the calf is improperly nourished in the womb. In other instances calf cholera is due to filth germs entering the calf's system by way of the raw navel cord stump at birth or by the mouth when the calf nurses from a manure contaminated udder.

Prevent infective cases by providing a clean, fresh bedded, disinfected, whitewashed, sunlighted, ventilated pen for the newborn calf and immediately wet its navel with a 1-500 solution of corrosive sublimate and repeat the application twice daily until the cord dries up, drops off and no spot remains; also wash the hind parts of the cow and her udder with a 2 per cent solution of coal tar disinfectant before the calf is allowed to suck for the first time and repeat the washing twice daily for at least a week. Isolate affected calves. Bury or burn the dead.

RAISING ORPHAN LAMBS.

Another Ewe or Even a Heifer Should Be Made to Adopt the Motherless One.

Orphan lambs are difficult to raise. One ought, if possible, to get them to sucking another ewe if the mother is lost. This is nearly always possible with a little patience. If one can shut the ewe and lamb together for a few days, her head confined between stakes so that she cannot hurt the wee one, helping the lamb from time to time to get its meals at first, the ewe will own it in nearly every instance.

Motherless, but Not Without Friends.

If the lamb must be brought up by hand then use care not to overfeed at first. Have the milk from a cow not too long in milk. Some successful lamb raisers dilute it half with water. Feed the milk warm at regular intervals. Splendid lambs have been raised by simply letting them suck a Jersey heifer, which after a time adopted them and loved them.

Bear in mind that it is far cheaper to have the ewe or cow raise the lamb than to feed it by hand, owing to the labor cost.

Rough Handling of Live Stock.

Packers claim they sustain considerable losses in the aggregate through skin bruised meats due to rough handling of meat animals in transit or by the packer. It is claimed that this is due chiefly to rough handling at the various stockyards, unloading, yarding and reloading. Some have even called attention to the Humane society to the evil, but nothing is accomplished from this source. Packers are contemplating some action to protect their own interests.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Keep the stalls carefully cleaned so that the animals will be comfortable. You cannot be too particular about the comfort of your farm animals.

Soiling crops are very convenient for the work animals early in the summer. For this purpose oats, barley and rye answer fairly well. The health and condition of the work animals demand a certain amount of green food.

No time should be lost in sowing spring oats, for early feeding oats have many things in their favor. They do not require cultivation, and the land may be planted in a summer crop, such as cowpeas, peanuts June corn, etc.

Sorghum is highly recommended as a soiling crop for hogs, horses, mules and cows. It should be planted late in the spring, but it is none too early to prepare the land. Select a convenient piece of land that is rich in plant food and get it in a good state of cultivation before planting time.

WATER CUPS TO GO

Law Effective July 4 Will Prohibit Their Use in Public Places.

FINE $25 FOR EACH OFFENSE.

Must Be Removed from Station, Stores, Shops, Factories, and All Other Places Where in General Use Now.

The use of the common drinking cup in public places in Plainfield, will be a thing of the past after July 4, according to the provisions of the new law enacted by the Legislature, and persons violating the act will be liable to a fine of $25 for each offense. There are a number of places in this city where the law will be effective, such as railroad stations, stores, shops, factories, etc. After July 4, paper cups in slot machines, or some other approved method will have to be adopted not only here but all over the State.

The new law is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey:

1. The use of the common drinking cup an undoubted source of communication of infectious diseases, is hereby prohibited in all public places within the commonwealth, and the State Board of Health shall have full authority to establish such reasonable rules and regulations to make this prohibition effective as in their judgment seems wise and proper.

2. Whoever fails to observe the provisions of this act, or the rules and regulations in relation thereto, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each offense.

3. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

The State Board of Health is preparing the rules and regulations which the law provides it shall have authority to adopt, and they will be announced in a short time. They will designate just what constitutes a public place and will give general regulations for the new protection to public health.

Common drinking cups have been in use in this city at some of the street fountains, in the railroad stations, the public schools and elsewhere. Some of the banks have also during the summer season had ice water coolers installed in their lobbies with drinking cups that were for the common use of all their patrons.

The State Board of Health has consulted with the Attorney General as to just what constitutes a public place within the meaning of this law and his decision will be incorporated in the rules to be adopted.

In some of the schools "bubblers" have been installed for drinking, so that in those cases cups are not needed. These "bubblers," in which the water gushes up by pushing a lever or a ring, have also been installed in some railroad stations and other places in the state. After July 4, this method, that of the paper cups in slot machines, or some other method will have to be adopted all over the State.

Massachusetts and several western States have a law similar to the one just adopted for this State.

CHAUNCEY OLCOTT IN "BARRY OF BALLYMORE."

A number of splendid songs have been written by Chauncey Olcott for his new play, "Barry of Ballymore," which will be presented in this city at the Plainfield theatre Thursday, June1, under the direction of Augustus Pitou and with a splendid company of players organized by that able manager. Mr. Olcott's songs have always been one of the leading and most attractive features of his performances and in the present case he has taken up the dashing spirit of the period in which the play has been laid and has composed some melodies which will compare with the best he has ever written and that is saying a great deal. The gift of melody was bestowed on this fortunate son of song in an eminent degree and his compositions have attained a popularity rarely reached by any writer in this day. The royalties accruing from the sale of these songs is said to have been enough to make the composer rich had he no income from any other source.

Special Musical Service.

The choir of Grace M. E. church, under the direction of the organist, Miss Alice Carroll, will give the last special musical service before the summer vacation, tomorrow evening, on the occasion of the anniversary of the Epworth League. The numbers will include "The Lord is My Light," Lansing, and "Lovely Appear," and "Unfold Ye Portals," from "The Redemption."

SOCCER LEAGUE CUP AWARDED TO WINNER

The Inter-City Amateur Soccer League met at Muray's, Newark, last night, when the "Murray Challenge" cup and twelve medals were presented to the Eureke A. A., of Kearney, winners of the league series; also twelve silver medals to the Thomas A. C., which finished second. Michael H. Murray, the president of the league, presented the cup, while T. W. Cahill, the vice-president, presented the medals.

Robert Baillie, who has been sectary of the league since its organization, wha also presented with a gold medal for his untiring efforts for the good of the league. Messrs. Bartholmew and Taggert, made this presentation. Mr. Baillie made a suitable response. The rest of the evening was spent in a social way. Messrs. Hugh Hosie and Robert Baillie represented the Plainfield Association Football Club and were accompanied by a delegation of ten members of the club.

TODD PRESIDENT OF CREDIT ASSOCIATION

A credit and protective organization, to be known as the "Central Jersey Credit Association," has been formed at a meeting of Union county merchants dealing in biulding materials, such as lumber, concrete building blocks, hardware, etc., at a meeting in the Miller building, Elizabeth. H. A. Todd, of Boice, Runyon & Company, this city, was elected president. Other officers are: Vice-president, Frederick W. Vechte, of the Bachman-Veghte Company, Roselle; secretary and treasurer, former Assemblyman Augustus W. Schwartz, of Elizabeth.

Representatives were present from twenty-five firms in Union county, and it is expected that there will be thirty in the organization by the time the next meeting is held on the night of May 18, in the Miller building, Elizabeth. Merchants from Plainfield, Westfield, Cranford, Roselle, Aldene, Linden, Elizabeth and Lyons Farms were represented.

Eventually the association will include the counties of Somerset and Middlesex, according to the plans now under consideration. A similar organization exists at the present time in Hudson and Essex counties, and of this several Union county firms are members. The benefits derived, however, have been so slight that the members from this section came to the conclusion that better results could be obtained if an association were formed here.

When the meeting was called to order last night Edwin A. Taylor, of the Mulford Lumber Company, Elizabeth, was selected as temporary chairman, and Mr. Schwartz as temporary secretary. After the purpose of the meeting had been outlined, permanent organization was effected and the officers heretofore mentioned were elected.

A committee of three consisting of Edwin A. Taylor, of the Mulford Lumber Company; D. P. McGovern, of the Enterprise Coal and Supply Company, and A. D. Tuttle, of the firm of Tuttle Brothers, Westfield, was appointed to present a report of plan and scope at the next meeting.

Funeral of L. C. J. Randolph.

The funeral of Lewis C. J. Randolph was held yesterday afternoon at the late residence on West Front street, and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Mr. Randolph was a member, officiated. There were a great many beautiful floral tributes. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the bearers were Albert and Frank Randolph, nephews of Mr. Randolph; George Harris, George Evans, Herman Weber and Walter Manning.

D. C. Smalley Injured.

David C. Smalley, of North avenue, while working about a building on his property, back of the railroad station, yesterday afternoon, jammed his hand against a concrete wall severely injuring it. Dr. W. Kempton Browning, who happened to be with Mr. Smalley, promptly gave "first aid" and no serious consequences are feared. Mr. Smalley at the time of the accident was knocking over a piece of old wall with a joist and in pulling back, his hand was caught between the joist and another wall.

Bishop Kinsman to Confirm.

Bishop Kinsman, of Delaware, will confirm a class of twenty-five at Grace church, at 4:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and in the evening he will confirm a class at St. Stephen's church.

GERAN LAW MIXUP

Borough Council Can't Enact Re-Districting Measure Within Required Time.

NO 'SAFE AND SANE' FOURTH.

Alexander Milne Holds a Brief for "the Small Boy" in Opposing Prohibition of Fireworks.

The Borough Council met in special session last night, for the purpose of transacting several important matters of business but instead the members found themselves in a quandary as to how to proceed. Legal restrictions limits their scope of action and the express purpose for which they assembled could not be undertaken but an hour was spent in discussing the situation. In the end, all that was done was the passing of a resolution to purchase 500 feet of fire hose from the Gutta-Percha Rubber Company, at eighty-five cents a foot. Several manufacourers competed for the order but the Gutta-Percha concern samples and prices were considered the best.;

The primary cause for the special meeting call was to enact the borough re-districting ordinance, passed on its first and second readings last Friday. The Geran law stipulates this should be done before May 15 and last night's session was intended to get the ordinance through. Councilman Milne, who introduced the measure originally, addressed his colleagues to the effect that an ordinance could not be passed at a special meeting, according to legal advice given him. This would make it impossible to comply with the Geran time limit as the next regular meeting comes in June.

"It seems to me," said Mr. Milne, 'that the people who drew up the Geran law were ignorant of the legal conditions governing cities and borough throughout the State."

"I should say so," continued Mayor Smalley, "its a fool law introduced by Woodrow Wilson who is trying to make a hard row for the rest of us."

The Mayor added that he had also consulted counsel and had been advised that the passing of a resolution indorsing the ordinance as it stood, would meet the Geran requirements until the matter could be taken care of at the regular meeting. Mr. Milne said he failed to see where a resolution could cover an ordinance and the discussion was on. The Mayor had received his advice over the telephone and the question was raised as to whether he had heard it correctly. Some of the councilmen had been told about the resolution, only in another way but which gave an entirely different construction. In the end, the matter was passed up and the ordinance will not be passed until June. The same problem has been met all over the State and the Attorney General has been asked for a ruling. The borough will abide by his decision.

Another matter discussed last night, was the "safe and sane Fourth" petition presented by residents at last week's meeting. The Councilmen were almost unanimous in their belief that the present borough law covers all that should be prohibited in the way of dangerous celebrating on Independence Day and a new ordinance is not necessary. Mr. Milne stood as sponsor for the small boys, declaring that they should be allowed some freedom in observing the day and he, for one, did not propose to restrict them any further. Mayor Smalley shared his opinion and the "safe and sane Fourth" was passed an by default.

Miss Isabelle Harriott.

Miss Isabelle Harriott, daughter of Mrs. Jane M. Harriott and the late Randolph F. Harriott, died this morning at her home, 713 Watchung avenue, after a long illness. She had been a resident of this city for many years. The funeral will be held at the late residence, Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

LACE DEALER DEFENDS SUIT SUCCESSFULLY

It took the jury about three minutes to decide that Marcus Silbert, of W. Front street, does not owe Hertz Brothers, of Newark, $1,018 for laces alleged to have been shipped to the former last year. The jury listened to the appeal made by Walter Hetfield, Jr., in behalf of his client and practically declared by their verdict that there was a conspiracy between the Hertz brothers to defraud Silbert.

According to the testimony it would appear that Hertz Brothers had shipped laces to the amount claimed to Silbert, but as the latter never received the alleged consignment he refused to pay the bill, hence the suit.

Silbert was defended by Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., in association with Judge William Newcorn. The charge of conspiracy as alleged by Mr. Hetfield seemed to have been impressive and the prompt verdict of the jury bore out the belief that Silbert was not attempting to defraud his creditors.

SOMERVILLE STORES TO CLOSE TOMORROW

Mayor Charles C. Kenyon, of Somerville, has given notice that beginning tomorrow he will enforce the laws against Sunday opening in that borough. This action was brought about because a number of the ice cream places kept open last Sunday.

An attempt was made about five years ago to compel all stores to keep closed, but Julius Lusardi, an ice cream dealer, refused to do so, and after his conviction refused to pay his fine, and the matter was compromised by his agreeing to keep his place in an orderly manner. Since then the borough of Somerville has been formed and last Sunday a number of the stores opened up for business.

GIVES MASON'S SIDE OF STRIKE CONTROVERSY

Although there has been a lull during the past few days, the local masons and hod-carriers are keeping up their fight for higher pay and are gaining ground. This morning Kerr & Son, of Elizabeth, who are building a factory in the East End, signed the agreement for the advanced scale and will re-engage all former employees. The firm is affiliated with the Master Builders' Association and their action means a great deal to the men. H. F. Gildersleeve, of Brooklyn, who is erecting several fine houses here, has also signed the agreement and three local master mechanics.

In speaking of the situation today, one of the masons said to a Daily Press reporter.

"So many misstatements have been made about our side of this strike that it is only fair to present the facts. In the first place, we are not asking for the New York rate. On the other side of the Hudson the day rate for masons is $5.60. In many places just outside the State line men are paid $6 a day and the 'corner" men those capable of doing expert work, get $7. In Newark, Jersey City and many other Jersey towns the regular rate has been $5.20 a day for a long time. When you stop to consider how much time a mason loses during the year his weekly pay often falls below that of an unskilled laborer who has a steady job. We are simply asking for a fair wage to balance what is received by others in the long run."

The speaker also raised the question as to why it is that out-of-town contractors like Kerr and Gildersleeve can pay the advance while local bosses, against whom they have to compete at increased expense for car fares and incidentals, cannot see their way clear to acceed. It was also asserted by other masons nearby that the open shop declaration of the bosses has not met with any great degree of success. A few men have responded to the out-of-town newspaper advertisements, it was said, but in the main they have been unskilled and only fairly competent to do the work required.

Cafe to Open Monday.

Manager Floersch, of the Queen City Hotel, said this morning that it was impossible to open the new cafe connected with the hotel until Monday morning. The new cafe presents some splendid improvements over the usual bar. It is handsomely decorated and a tile floor adds to the attractiveness of the place.

RACE MEET TODAY

Hunt Club Steeplechase Draws a Big Crowd to Driving Park.

SIX EVENTS ON THE CARD.

Pinkerton's "Booger Red" to Try for the Half-mile Record—Thirteen Entries for Oak Tree Purse.

The Watchung Hunt Club is holding its annual steeplechase meet at the driving park, this afternoon, with a record-breaking attendance of racegoers from this city and nearly every important point in the metropolitan district. The weather is ideal for the event and with a full list of entries in each of the six races, an exceptionally fine program is being offered to the supporting public.

Perhaps, an event of the greatest interest will be the attempt of "Booger Red," Allan Pinkerton's entry, to break the half-mile record. "Booger Red" was to have made an attempt for the record at Belmont Park, this week, but the owner decided to postpone the trial. The horse is considered to be one of the fastest for a half-mile stretch in this part of the country.

The races started promptly at 2 o'clock the first one being for the Oak Tree purse for three-year-old and upwards. There were thirteen entries and all started. Other races will include those on the flat, hurdles and the famous "Melrose Scramble" for horses the bona-fide property of farmers over whose land the club hunts during the season.

This afternoon luncheon was served to the members of the club, and the club also gave a big dinner for the farmers and their families. This evening the club will entertain the officials at the hunt club house where a musical program will also be enjoyed.

Retired from Service.

Jeremiah F. Garretson, who has been in the employ of the New Jersey Central, as baggage agent at the North Avenue Station, for forty years, by order of his physician, has retired from the service of the company, with the good will of all the officials of the road and with the respect of the citizens whom he has served during that time. He has always been a courteous official and there are a great many of his friends who will regret that he has severed his connection with the road. Mr. Garretson has been in poor health and he will now endeavor to regain his strength by taking a much-needed rest.

Two Small Fires.

The borough fire department was called out twice yesterday afternoon for small fires. The first alarm was by telephone and was for burning leaves on the Buttfield property, which threatened a barn. The second was from box 151 at 3:50 and was for a slight blaze in the lattice work at the north end of the Park Club building. It caught from a pile of burning rubbish. Both fires were put out with extinguishers. The damage at the Park Club will probably amount to $15.

A New Undertaking Business.

James J. Higgins, the Elizabeth undertaker, has leased the corner store of the Monarch Investing Company at Fourth street and Park avenue and will open a branch of his business there on or shortly after June 1. It will probably be in charge of his brother, Charles Higgins. The store is at present occupied by Robert Murray, the auctioneer, who is making plans to move elsewhere.

Owl Club Dance.

The Owl Social Club gave its fifth annual dance in Saengerbund Hall last night and it was pronounced to be the most successful of the dances given by the club. The committee of arrangements consisted of Edward Mattell, chairman; Jacob Schlick, George Mead, Leslie Sornberger and Georg Schlick. Leslie Sornberger was floor manager.

Italian Society Dramatics.

There will be a dramatic performance tonight in Saengerbund Hall given by the Venga Company, an Italian society of this city. The title of the play is "Il Ritorno del Galoto," and will be given by a cast of nine local people. It is the first attempt to give a work of this character in Plainfield. The work will be given in Italian.

Funeral of Mrs. Rennemann.

The funeral service of Mrs. Lena Rennemann, who died yesterday, will be held at the late residence, 33 Codington avenue, Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

MISS HEGEMAN WEDS AT HOLY CROSS JUNE 2

Mr. and Mrs Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., of Plainfield and New York, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Virginia Hegeman, to Baron Tibor Podmaniczky, of Hungary. The ceremony will take place at the Church of the Holy Cross, Friday afternoon, June 2, at 4 o'clock, and it will be a brilliant affair, witnessed by many prominent guests both from at home and abroad.

A reception will follow at "Dalrashea," 21 Rockview avenue, to which a large number of people have been invited.

The Baron was formerly an officer in the Hungarian army, but is now retired and is studying medicine in the University of Freiburg, Germanv. He is prominent in this country, as well as in his native land. Miss Hegeman has also been prominent in society in New York and this city, as well as in many foreign cities where she has been a frequent visitor.

FRIENDS COME TO BORNMANN'S AID

The Somerset Court convened yesterday at Somerville for the purpose of passing sentence on John D. Bornmann, a political leader and the custodian of the chool funds of Warren Township, indicted for embezzling $3,500 of the funds entrusted to his care, but Judge Clarence E. Case finally deferred sentence for one week at the request of former Congressman Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville, and Judge William A. Coddington, who, as counsel for Bornmann, are fighting to save him from serving a term in State prison.

Two days ago Bornmann pleaded non vult to an indictment containing 244 counts of embezzlement and his counsel are now maneuvering for delay with the hope of proving to the satisfaction of the court that Bornmann is not guilty of all the counts and in the meantime Bornmann's friends are negotiating with the Warren Township School Board to make good the custodian's shortage with the hope of placing him in a better light before the court sentence is passed. The Board of Education has already agreed to a settlement which is to be negotiated through its counsel, former Prosecutor John F. Roger.

Bornmann's downfall is due to his practice of loaning public money intrusted to his care to his political friends in order to save his former friends from the exposure that would be brought about if he stood trial, he pleaded non vult and his magnanimity has caused those who participated in a division of the school funds to come to his financial aid. Bornmann, who was formerly a man of public affairs in Warren Township and one of the leaders of the Coddington faction, was a pathetic figure yesterday afternoon as he left the courtroom for another week's freedom with his wife and infant child by his side.

Played Ball in Street.

Four small boys were arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza, in the city court, this morning, charged with playing ball in the street. The complaint was made by William Ryan, of West Sixth street, who said that the ball was thrown into his yard and nearly broke a window in his home. The ball was confiscated by Ryan, but later Judge DeMeza ordered its return to the boys, Vincent and Leo Hanrahan and Richard and Francis Lawton, after lecturing them on the danger of playing in the streets.

HONOR H. H. POND

AT THEIR ANNUAL CONVENTION.

Frank Bergen Scores Public Utilities Act Passed by the Recent Legislature at the Banquet.

Senator Walter E. Edge welcomed the New Jersey Bankers' Association yesterday on their convening their their eight annual meeting at the Hotel Chelsea, Atlantic City. There are about 200 bankers here.

A banquet took place last night and among the speakers were Judge William H. Spear, Circuit Court of New Jersey; Dr. Austin Scott, of Rutgers College, and Frank Bergen, general counsel for the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey.

Responding to the cordial words of welcome from Senator Edge, President Adrian Lyon, of Perth Amboy, said that the association had never met anywhere else and things had been made so pleasant for them here that he hoped they would never go anywhere else to hold their sessions.

There were several addresses in the afternoon. Chief among which was that on "Banking and Currency Reform," by Congressman Edward B. Vreeland, of New York, vice-president of the National Monetary Commission. He said that the greatest question before the American public after that of international peace was banking and currency reform. He said Senator Aldrich would introduce next year a bill in Congress that would seek to accomplish a reform by the establishment of a national reserve association which would be non-partisan in character, free from political or financial control. Its dividends would be liimted to five per cent., and profits over that would go to the national government for retiring the green backs and other purposes. It would seek to have a reserve deposit of $30,000,000 and that he believed would be a means to end any possibility of financial panic such as had characterized the banking and business interests of the country periodically.

Among other speakers were Banking Commissioner Vivian M. Lewis, Assemblyman Elmer H. Geran, who spoke by request in explanation of the Geran election bill; A. A. Benton, who spoke on "The New Jersey Group System of Bank Examinations," and E. T. Perrine, former deputy comptroller of New York.

Frank Bergen, in his speech on "The Sherman" Act," incidentally scored the public utilities act passed at the last Legislature.

H. H. Pond, the popular secretary and treasurer of The Plainfield Trust Company, was elected President of the Association for the ensuing year this morning.

Since its organization in 1903 when Mr. Pond was elected a member of the executive committee, an office which he still holds, he has been closely identified with the activities of the State Association, serving for two years in the capacity of treasurer and for one in that of vice-president, and the honor which has now been conferred upon him is but another evidence of the esteem in which he is held by his fellow bankers. It is, moreover, an assurance to the people of New Jersey of a conservative administrative policy on the part of the New Jersey Bankers' Association under Mr. Pond's guidance for he will doubtless set the standard of integrity and sound business judgment which have been the factors in his successful career.

Mr. Pond assumed the position of secretary and treasurer of The Plainfield Trust Company last May.

NEWS OF THE WORLD FOR THE BUSY MAN

Stocks were dull and heavy in New York yesterday.

The Pope was unable to give public audience yesterday, but his physicians did not fear for his health.

Congress.—The Senate did not meet, and the House, after a brief session, adjourned until Tuesday.

King George and Queen Mary, acclaimed by a London multitude, opened the Festival of Empire, an exposition of imperial resources.

Queen Mother Alexandra has taken up her residence at Sandringham Palace, to remain until after the coronation; she was reported in excellent health.

President Taft instructed Ambassador Wilson to deny in the most positive terms "foolish stories" that the United States intended to intervene in Mexico.

In the Camorrist trial, Alfano, alleged leader of the criminal band, and Abbatemaggio, the informer accused each other of being the real slayer of Cuocolo.

The British steamer Westmoreland crashed into and sank the Spanish steamer Debayo off Dover, England; the Spanish captain and three sailors were drowned.

Professor C. W. Beebe, curator of ornithology of the New York Zoological Society, arrived in San Francisco after a seventeen months' study of the pheasant in Asia Minor.

It was said the Brooklyn Rapid Transit was likely to recede to some extent in its subway offer to the next conference with the Board of Estimate committee, on Monday.

All the passengers were rescued when the Ward Line steamship Merida sank off the coast of Virgina five hours after being rammed by the Admiral Farragut, a fruit steamer.

A. J. Balfour made an aeroplane flight with Grahame-White at the exhibition before the Parliamentary defence committee in London; J. Armstrong Drexel was injured by a fall.

Jacob M. Dickinson resigned as Secretary of War, and President Taft appointed Henry L. Stimson, recently Republican candidate for Governor of New York, to his place in the Cabinet.

Federal Judge Carpenter, in a decision at Chicago, overruled the demurrer of the defendants in the "Beef Trust" case, upholding the constitutionality of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Addressing the conference on the reform of criminal law and procedure at Columbia, Magistrate Corrigan favored the appointment of a Police Commissioner by the Board of Estimate for a definite and lengthy term of years.

O. H. Cheney and Clark Williams issued statements defending their actions while at the head of the New York State Department of Banks, contradicting parts of Andrew Carnegie's evidence regarding the Carnegie Trust Company, and explaining their long silence as respect to the grand jury.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

The success of Wm. A. Brady's all-star revival of "The Lights O'London," the famous Union Square Theatre success of thirty years ago, at the Lyric, is the theatrical sensation of the day. Night after night the capacious theatre is crowded with spectators, who weep with the heroine, applaud the hero, laugh with the broadly-drawn comedy characters, and hiss the villian. The play, although essentially different from the dramas with which Broadway is familiar, has an intensely interesting story and the development of the plot has an absorbing interest possessed by few modern plays. Much of the success of the performance is, of course, due to the very remarkable cast which Manager Brady has provided for the play. The star players include Holbrook Blinn, William Courtenay, Thos. A Dise, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Richman, Lawrence D'Orsay, Thomas Q. Seabrooke, Frank Hatch, Doris Keane, Marguerite Clark, Jeffreys Lewis and Leonore Harris.

The Hippodrome is now in its last week. The date of closing for the big playhouse will be May 20th and the last twenty-four performances began last Monday matinee. The three big spectacular shows "The International Cup," "The Ballet of Niagara" and "Marching Through Georgia" as well as the circus composed of 12 great acts make up a bill such as cannot be found elsewhere on any stage. "Marching Through Georgie" may be described as a panoramic pageant of plantation days in the South. Its features of especial interest are the great cotton plantation scene, the building of the Pontoon Bridge and the march of Serman's Army to the Sea. Those who have not already seen the great triple spectacle including the wonderful "Indian Ballet of Niagara" and the magnificent Niagara Falls' scene, will take advantage of the few opportunities left.

Miss Daisy Opdyke, of New Germantown, has been spending a few days here with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hall, of Readington, have returned home after a visit with friends here.

OREGON STAGE DRIVER IN MOUNTAIN RUNAWAY.

"Jack" Louden, one of the last of the old-timer stage drivers, was fatally injured Thursday at Hazo Hill, fifteen miles from Grant's pass, Oregon, while driving a four-horse team which had become frightened. Knowing that he was approaching a high cliff and sharp curve, Louden drew his revolver and shot one of the leaders dead. This failed to stop the team, however, which dragged the dead horse several yards over the embankment. Louden was thrown down the precipice and his skull fractured.

Two passengers jumped from the stage and escaped with slight injuries.

MASONS FLOCK TO GREET TAFT

Masons from various Eastern and Southern States are headed for Newark today, merchants are dressing their buildings with flags and bunting and a committee of St. John's Lodge, F. and A. M., is completing details of the 150th anniversary of the lodge—all preliminary to the visit of President Taft as the guest of the Masons this evening.

Hundreds who wanted to take advantage of the opportunity to see and hear the President have been disappointed, for W. W. Blanchard, in charge of the distribution of the admission cards, announced Thursday that the capacity of the Kruegar Auditorium, where the President will speak, as it is, will be taxed to its utmost.

For those who will not be able to gain admission to the Presidential gathering there will be a reception earlier in the day at the New Auditorium, where visiting Masons will be entertained. The lodge was opened by Arthur Mudd, the master, at 1 o'clock this afternoon, and was closed an hour later. At 2 o'clock the reception was thrown open to the general public.

The President and his party arrived at the Market Street Station Depot of the Pennsylvania Railroad at 5:32 o'clock. A committee of the lodge headed by former Governor Franklin Murphy, was there to meet the visitors. The Frst Troop Cavalry was drawn up in front of the station and escorted the President to the home of Mr. Murphy.

FRANK ROBBINS ALL FEATURE CIRCUS COMING TO TOWN.

With every spangle glistening, and every performer, human and animal, full of life and enthusiasm, the Frank A. Robbins Circus will visit Plainfield on Tuesday, May 16, to give two performances.

Of course it is the same old show. Who would want to see a circus that is not. Everyone who has tried to make a circus anything else has ended in dismal failure, and Mr. Robbins, with his years of experience in the show business, has learned that the only way to succeed with a circus is to give a regular old fashioned show. But with all this there is a difference. The show this year has all of the good old features, and not a few new ones. There is the Japanese who does stunts with his umbrellas; the broad backed, fine looking ring horses, with the lady riders who dance gracefully on their backs; the iron jawed woman who whirls dizzily hanging by her teeth, and the hundred and one things the children, and the grown ups too, never tire of seeing.

In the morning of show day there will be a street parade. This will not be a string of closed up decorated cages, but will have a large number of open dens of animals, decorated floats, bands of music, riders, elephants and camels. The parade will leave the show lot at ten o'clock.

Mrs. Frederick S. Green, of the borough, is rapidly improving from a serious operation performed at the hospital.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Of the nine rural routes which will go out of Bridgeton, June 1, the one colored carrier is the only one who will use an automobile.

The South Jersey Farmers' Exchange since the first of the year has sold forty-six cars of seed potatoes, eighty-three cars of feed and 4,438 tons of fertilizer.

John Timberman, of Glasboro, who has just been granted a commission as justice of the peace, is the only Prohibitionist in South Jersey holding office.

To save a foot Miss Grace Collins, of 1725 Filmore street, Camden, submitted to the amputation of one of her toes. Dye from a stocking infected a blister and caused blood poisoning.

Knocked down at Seventh and Market streets, Camden, Thursday evening by a motorcycle, ridden by Policeman Kay, Costa Gligor, twenty-five years old, of 749 Pennsylvania avenue, sustained numerous bruises and lacerations of the body.

The George M. McCarthy Association, of which Commissioner McCarthy, of the State Board for the Equalization of Taxes, is the head, will hold a vaudeville show and dance at the clubhouse, 227 Ocean avenue, Jersey City, Monday evening, May 15.

The caving in of several tons of earth Thursday came near costing an aged man his life while he was at work digging the cellar for the new theatre on South Broad street, Trenton. The man, who escaped with only a few bruises about the legs and body was Alexander King, sixty years old, of 1103 Williams street.

Contributions received by Mayor Bird W. Spencer, Thursday, from the Paterson Fire Department and Heyden Chemical Company, for the account of the Passaic Firemen's Pension Fund, bring the total to nearly $1,900. This fund was started when Lieutenant James A. Delaney, of Engine No. 1, was killed a month ago, leaving a wife and six children, who had been dependent on him.

Opening a front cellar window at midnight, a thief gained admission to the home of William Copeland, at 510 York street, Burlington, Thursday, in the absence of the family, and ransacked the house in a search for cash. With $21, the savings of Copeland's children, the intruder departed by the way he entered, while neighbors wondered at the excitement of a big watch dog tied in the yard.

Hearing that Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, had accepted some sort of a challenge sent by a student of the Camden High School, Chief Gravenor had five policemen at the school during the noon recess Thursday. Upward of 300 students waited in vain for something to happen. Nothing occurred, and when the crowd dispersed in disgust the perspiring cops wended their way back to headquarters.

At the annual convention of the 33d degree Masons, colored held in Philadelphia yesterday, W. J. Douglass, of this city, represented the Plainfield branch of the fraternity. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

The employees of a Front street store hel dtheir first dance last night in Sebring's Hall, on West Front street. The dance was well attended and netted quite a sum for the coming outing. Frank B. The committee having the affair in charge was composed of the Misses Elizabeth King, Viola Stutz and Nellie Cregar.

After the dance a meeting of the members of the store was held and it was decided to select a date on which all the employees could take a trip to Somerville by stage and afterwards enjoy a dinner at some hotel to be selected later. On the return they will stop at the Sebring Homestead and pay a visit to Duke's farm where special arrangements have been made to entertain the guests.

No Princeton Offer.

Dr. David Jayne Hill, ambassador to Germany, who sailed Thursday from New York, by the Hamburg-American liner, Amerika, boarded her looking in fine physical condition. He will not return for some time.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, will give his monthly five-mintue sermon to boys and girls tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock. The vested choir will lead in the singing and the annual offering for the church building society will be taken.

Mr. Davis was at one time employed in the local office of the Public Service electrical department but now holds an important position with a Panama railroad.

GRAND JURY FINDINGS ARE WATCHED FOR NOW.

According to rumors in circulation about the Grand Jury's probe of the grade crossing accident at Elizabeth avenue, Elizabeth, on April 16, the jury is making a thorough investigation not only of this accident and the one that resulted in the death of the Lemkie boy, but is also taking up the whole grade crossing problem. There is no doubt but that the body will have an interesting report to make when it completes its work.

It has been a long time since a Union County Grand Jury probed such important matters as it is understood the present inquest is looking into. The jurors went to the scene of the Elizabeth avenue tragedy today and looked carefully over the situation. Many persons have been subpoenaed and prominent officials have been asked for information.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict holding the railroad company responsible. Whether or not the Grand Jury will go further than this is not known, but there is every indication that forceful action will be taken.

FOR SPECIAL ELECTION.

Mayor Moy has drawn a petition for an election to be held according to the provisions of the Commission Government statute. The election will take place within three weeks of the filing of the petition with the city clerk. It is necessary to obtain the signatures of 20 per cent. of the voters to the petition.

Protest Against Blockade.

The borough authorities have made a protest against the action of the Public Service Corporation in blocking Somerset street when new trolley rails are being placed. Only one side of the thoroughfare is available for heavy traffic and at times this part is cluttered up. A protest has been sent to the company's road master and Mayor Smalley said last night if more trouble was given the borough would take a hand in a summary way.

FRED THOMPSON DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Frederick N. Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Thompson, of East Front street, and at the home of his parents at 1:30 this morning. He had been ill for a long time with a pulmonary trouble. The young man was twenty-two years old and was in the U. S. Navy until his illness began. The government sent him to Colorado in the hope of affording him relief but he failed rapidly and returned to Plainfield. He was at one time a member of Company K. One brother, William Thompson, survives him.

The funeral will be held at his parents' home Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

TRAIN LOSES ITS WHISTLE.

It occurred one day last week and the passengers on the Big. Sandy train are smiling yet when they think of the oddest incident that has happened on that branch of the C. & O. in years. The train bound for Ashland lost its whistle while still many miles up the valley and was forced to stop and back up almost the entire distance looking for that whistle, which was eventually found miles away from where it was missed. The loss delayed the train five hours. It was due in at Catlettsburg at 5 o'clock in the evening but didn't reach that point until 10 o'clock that night. Trains have been known to lose their switchmen, their cabooses and sometimes a whole cut of cars, but never before has a Big Sandy train been known to lose its whistle. Under the law a train may not operate without a whistle, and it was this fact that caused the conductor of his train to run back over many miles of track to locate the lost object.—Pikerville, Ky., Advocate.

Iced Apple.

Peel and core one dozen good flavored apples. Boil them gently in one pint of water and a half pound of sugar. Add the half of a grated lemon rind. When done, remove and set away to cool. Peel, core and chop fine one dozen apples and add with a pound of sugar to the syrup and, cooking slowly, reduce to a marmalade. Put a layer of the marmalade on the dish, then a layer of the stewed whole apples, and proceed in this way until the dish is a pyramid shape. When cold cover it with a rich meringue and set in a hot oven a minute to take a delicate brown. Chill it and serve with whipped cream.

The Boy's Outfit.

Severity must mark the outfit for a small boy. In the morning a Russian-blouse suit of natural-colored linen, worn with a wide patent leather belt, is practical. To complete this dress should be brown boots and stockings. Low shoes and socks are fashionable for all children, leather leggings being worn out-of-doors until the weather is really warm. This fashion should not be kept up after the boy has grown big, any more than he should be forced to keep to his knickerbockers when he is taal enough to wear long trousers.—Harper's Bazar.

Archibald Hacquer, formerly a local newspaperman, has resigned his position with the Philadelphia Bulletin and returned to Plainfield to reside temporarily.

Most people know that there are all kinds of pianos from bad to best. Those about to purchase who have friends that own a

HALLET & DAVIS

Piano are fortunate, as they have an opportunity to judge what real piano value is.

Ask a Hallet & Davis owner, there are over 75,000 in America, if he ever found a piano he liked as well as his Hallet & Davis, and then ask what the price of his piano is and be agreeably surprised.

No question that the Hallet & Davis piano is as high grade a piano as is possible to make, but many wonder how it is possible to sell them at so moderate a price.

Here are the important reasons: 1st. The enormous annual output; 2nd. Ample capital, allowing the purchase of supplies in largest quantities; 3rd. 75 years experience which has taught the right way to build pianos; 4th. The company owns the finest piano factory in the world, equipped with the newest machinery throughout; 5th. The highest business efficiency is secured by the personnel of the officers of the company, who represent generations of piano builders.

The style B Hallet & Davis sells for $365, other upright styles up to $500. Why pay more, when you can buy nothing better? Why pay less, when for this amount of money you can buy the best? Don't buy a piano with your eyes shut. Remember a good piano will last a life time.

Come in and see the new styles or write for our booklet about pianos which should be in the hands of every piano buyer

MISSIONARY CONDITION IN 'THE FAR EAST'

Tomorrow evening in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Rev. Edward C. Moore, will speak on "New Missionary Conditions in the Far East." Mr. Moore has been a member of the American Board of Foreign Missions for many years and recently made an extensive trip through the missionary field in the eastern countries where missions are being conducted by the Presbyterian church.

Rev. Mr. Moore has presented the subject of missions so forcibly that it will become the matter of a special course of study at Harvard University during the coming year. His views of economic and mission conditions in these foreign countries have received wide-spread attention. He has acceded to the request of many members of the Crescent Avenue congregation to speak on the subject on Sunday evening at 7:45 o'clock.

LOSES HIS POSITION, AND TRIES SUICIDE

William W. Tucker attempted to commit suicide late yesterday afternoon by sending a .32 caliber bullet into his head as he lay in a bathtub at his home, 2 Pine street, Cranford.

Three physicians were summoned to attend him and the doctors ordered him removed to the Elizabeth General Hospital to which institution he was removed by ambulance. The chances of his recovery are slight.

Mr. Tucker was for ten years connected with one of the leading wholesale dry goods firms in New York and lost his position on January 1. It is believed he worried about securing another position and that this led to his rash act. His wife is known as Miss Sophie Tucker, the actress, who played the part of a maid, to Miss Mabel Barriston, in the 'Blue Mouse." She recently completed an engagement with "Lulu's Husband," and is home. The couple have no children.

FORTY YEARS in BASEBALL

A History of the Great National Game

CHAPTER I.

I Begin to Play Ball.

When I began to play ball—I have a fairy good memory, but I am not going to mention the date—it would have been considered foolish for any follower of the game to sit down and write its history, especially if he had the nerve to begin every other sentence with a great big "I." Perhaps the situation hasn't changed a great deal as to the use of the personal pronoun, but in respect to the game it is mighty different; ball has made history since that day and it's time somebody woke up and tackled it.

I'll say right here, though, that I shouldn't have attempted the feat in the form of an autobiography had it not been for just one thing—it has been my fate to be so mixed up with the development of baseball in America for the past 40 years or more that it wouldn't be an easy trick to disentangle me. That is why I am writing this story as if the hero of it all were Adrian Constantine Anson.

Funny combination, that name—ain't it? Makes you think of some of the old Roman emperors in the school histories. One day when there was no game I got a volume out of the public library and hunted up both my namesakes. To be frank with you, neither one of them made a hit with me. I am told that my mother had another name all ready for me, but my father—usually the easiest proposition in the Anson family—got up and rooted for Adrian Constantine until everybody was glad to let him win. I never knew exactly how it was that father was so set on that combination until I read a newspaper account to the effect that the old gentleman was so in love with the state of Michigan that he named me after the two towns of that state in which he had lived. The writer of that article took occasion to congratulate me that the combination hadn't happened to be Ypsilanti Kalamazoo, and I couldn't help agreeing with him. There may have been something in the story, for one of my two brothers was named Sturgis, which suggests another Michigan town.

I don't know that I should bother with the matter of pedigree—although most of the autobiographers I have come across seem to make a big feature of such things—if it wasn't for the fact that ever since I began to figure in the papers in connection with baseball some of them have been trying to make a Swede out of me. Now I want to say right here that I have nothing against the Swedes; those I have come up against size up mighty well in the shuffle. They have done a big stunt in the development of the middle northwest and if I happened to be one of them I shouldn't have kicked over the fact.

It's kind of risky business, though, this pedigree question. I found that out one day when I called on the editor of a Philadelphia newspaper to ask him how he happened to call me a Swede in print.

"Well, captain, ain't you?" he asked, looking me square in the face.

I told him that, so far as I knew, there wasn't drop of Swedish blood in my carcass; that my ancestors way back as far as anybody had cared to go were English, and that some member of my family that cared a darn sight more about such things than I did had traced our genealogy back as far as Lord Anson, an English landed proprietor of considerable note.

If you think that settled it, you have another guess coming. "My dear Captain Anson," he said, with a sort of pitying smile, "I do not see from your own account that you have disproved your Swedish ancestry. On the contrary, I should say that you have strengthened its probability. The old Scandinavian stock is so securely engrafted on the English ancestral tree that it would be exceedingly rash to disclaim it."

Just the same, what that sporting editor said doesn't alter the fact that the Ansons came from England and so did the Rices, my mother's family. And eventually our branch of the family got as far west as central Iowa.

In 1852 central Iowa was pretty close to the frontier. What is now the thriving little city of Marshalltown existed only in the imagination of my father, who laid it off into town lots and proceeded to boom it to the best of his ability. It was mighty slow work for a long time, but finally the crowd headed that way. I was right at the head of the procession, being the first white child born in the new city, and in a log cabin at that. I shall always regard that as one of the biggest honors ever coming my way.

By the time I was big enough to sit on a bench in the little red schoolhouse that was Marshalltown's only seat of learning in those early days the fortunes of the Anson family were at the high water mark. Father sold off a number of plots and business sites and we moved out of our log cabin into a fair-sized house in the new metropolis of Marshall county. With the money that he got from the sale of town lots father built a planing mill and later a hotel, the Anson house, and for a time we prospered for fair. Later, things took a turn for the worse and for a while we seemed to be on the wrong side of prosperity.

But don't you believe for a minute that hard luck put the damper on the high spirits of the Anson family. Father was not built that way, nor was either of his three sons, especially the one he had dubbed Adrian Constantine. I suppose it must have been due in part to the good health we enjoyed; but in my case the neighbors gave the credit to the gentleman of whom we speak only when we are a little excited.

I certainly was an active specimen of the rough and tumble variety of kid, and from the first day I found myself at the little red schoolhouse I made up my mind that going to school did not appeal to me, and the longer I went the stronger my conviction that I was not cut out for a scholar. I was ready to admit that learning was a fine thing for some folks, but I didn't include myself among the latter bunch, and I found the enforced confinement about the most disagreeable thing I was up against. For that reason I always appreciated the holidays, and I added many to my calendar that were not observed by anybody else.

Did I ever play ball in those days? Well, rather. If there was any species of ball game that I didn't play it was because it was so new that it hadn't reached that part of Iowa. As I look back it seems to me that pretty nearly everything I got interested in had to do with ball in some shape or other. Of course, the game of baseball as it is played nowadays hadn't been developed, but there were several other games played with ball and bat, and with ball alone, that were good enough to occupy a good deal of my attention. One of these, called "anty-over" in our part of the country, I considered mighty good sport. Any number of boys—we never asked the girls to join us unless we couldn't raise a quorum among ourselves—could play it, the more the merrier. Two leaders were appointed and they proceeded to choose sides. The teams then stationed themselves one on each side of some building, and the player with the ball tossed it over the roof, at the same time yelling at the top of his voice, "Anty-over!" If the ball was caught by any player on the opposite side as it came rolling down the shingles, it became the catcher's privilege to sneak around the corner of the building and sock some man belonging to the other side. If he succeeded in doing this to the satisfaction of everybody—excepting, of course, the fellow who got the ball in the neck or some other sensitive spot—the man hit had to change sides. I don't know whether or not this game is still among the living, but if it isn't there's a good thing gone out of the world. There was lots of exercise in it and plenty of excitement. When the expected "Anty-over!" didn't come and there was a suspicious silence everybody on the other side held his breath in anticipation of a possible socking.

Then there was the old cat family of ball—one old cat, two old cat, etc. I used to regard two old cat as a mighty scientific game in those days, and the only fault it had in my eyes was that the girls would play it in spite of the risk of being dubbed tomboys. I did my share in discouraging them, but rather than not play ball I was sometimes driven to let a girl or two into the game. As soon as another boy put in his appearance, though, she had to go. Although I have modified my views somewhat, in those days I was a firm believer in the physical inferiority of the other sex.

Sock ball—"soak ball" we used to call it—had its turn a little later, and it made a big hit with us. It was a good, strenuous outdoor pastimes and, although the socking that was the main feature of it used to decorate our hides with more or less black and blue spots, I never heard of any one being killed outright. At first the ball used by us was a comparatively soft one, homemade always, and covered with sections cut from an old bootleg. In time we seemed to hanker after something harder, and I hit on the scheme of winding the yarn of which the inside of the ball was made over a chunk of lead. A sock of that ball never failed to make an impression.

CHAPTER II.

I Am Initiated Into Baseball.

At the time when was a school lad I knew nothing at all about baseball. The game was in its infancy and had not yet reached Marshalltown. After a while rumors of a new game of ball that was making quite a stir in the eastern part of the country began to find their way into our remote neighborhood, but we didn't stop playing sock ball long enough to pay much attention to them.

We were getting lots of outdoor exercise and muscular training from our rough game, a very good preparation for what was coming. Our town was growing rapidly and new arrivals from the east brought the news that baseball was becoming epidemic east of the Allegheny mountains and had already passed over into Ohio and Michigan. It seemed likely that it would break out in Iowa before long, but I was loyal to the old favorite until the very last.

One day I spied a crowd of boys and men in a vacant lot that belonged to my father and I didn't lose any time in joining the assemblage. A colony of New York state families had arrived in town a few days before that and some of the boys were playing a game of baseball, such a novelty in Marshalltown that the crowd had gathered to watch it. It was probably as crude a game of baseball as has ever been played in America, but it struck us sock ball players all in a heap, especially me. Bad as it was, I grasped its possibilities right then and there and made up my mind that thereafter for me sock ball was out of the running.

When I got home I found that father and my brother Sturgis, who was two years my senior and mighty handy with the ball, had also been witnesses of the game and were about as enthusiastic over it as myself. In fact, this awkward squad from New York state had inoculated the whole town—in less than a month the baseball craze broke out like spring measles in an orphan asylum. I don't mind telling you that I got the biggest dose of all, a dose from which I have never recovered, and probably never shall.

It didn't take the Anson family long to pick up what there was to be learned about the game of baseball as it was played at that time. For my part, I made it my chief business by day, and it was the subject of my dreams when I slept. Father and Sturgis were almost as devoted to it as myself, but after a while the old gentleman "came back" long enough to realize that I was loading up my system with baseball to the exclusion of everything else. Although he had not absorbed enough book lore in his early day to fit him for a college professor, he vowed he wouldn't have his sons grow up to be a couple of numskulls, and he called us in one day to have a serious talk.

"I don't believe you boys can figure long division," he began as a cheerful introduction.

"I can," declared Sturgis promptly. "It's no trick at all for me."

"How about you, Adrian?" he continued, fixing me with a look that I knew meant business.

I squirmed a little, but it was no use. I knew perfectly well that I couldn't do an example in long division to save my hide, and I also knew better than to put up any claim that I couldn't make good.

So it was decreed that we should start right in and prepare ourselves to enter the State university. It was not a job to my liking, but I saw no way to escape it. I got out my books and soon found that my taste hadn't developed any since I laid them down. All that summer I put up a mild bluff over the book problem, but I took mighty good care that the baseball feature of my education shouldn't be neglected.

At the entrance examinations that fall the Anson boys were conspicuous only for what they didn't know. If the fellows who got up those question papers had been hired especially to select a list of subjects that had never come within the range of the Anson family they couldn't have done a better job. As a result we escaped going to the State university by a big margin.

I don't mind telling you that we were tickled to death over the outcome, but our rejoicing was soon turned into fresh trouble. Father made up his mind that we should have some sort of an education even if the State university didn't take kindly to the scheme. So he sent us to Notre Dame university, at South Bend, Ind., an institution that had a reputation of being able to instruct boys when all other attempts had failed. When we were made acquainted with the plan we felt that everything was over with us; we had heard of Notre Dame and the methods in vogue there, and we believed that no Anson could thrive under such treatment. If we had been starting for the reformatory on that day when we bade goodby to Marshalltown and baseball, we couldn't have been more depressed.

Contrary to our expectations, we found the Indiana school very much to our liking. About the first thing that was asked us on our arrival was whether we played ball, and when my brother, who acted as the Anson spokesman, confessed to a mild fondness for the sport, we were given the glad hand all around and taken into full fellowship with the other boys. After a day or two we were given a chance to show what we could do, and our performance was so good that we soon became two of the most popular boys in the school. Naturally we began to think we had made a great mistake in our opinion of Notre Dame.

We really put in a very happy winter at school. There were lakes in the vicinity and the skating was mighty fine. We were expected to do a reasonable amount of studying, but we were encouraged to take as much outdoor exercise as we could get, and I always filled the bill nobly in that respect. I don't mind telling you that I didn't astonish anybody with my scholarship that winter, but I stood A No. 1 with the fellows, especially those who liked play better than books. Both Sturgis and myself were given places on the university nine, and we certainly got good marks for our work in that direction, even if those we received in our classes were not quite satisfactory.

When we returned home the following June Marshalltown was in a fever of excitement over baseball. Father seemed to be the moving spirit in the craze, and he actually appeared to be more delighted with the progress we had made as members of the Juanitas at Notre Dame than with the flattering report of our attention to business which the good fathers had sent after us. At that time Sturgis played a slightly better game than myself, being more speedy between bases and also showing better judgment. Later, however, he strained one of the tendons of his right arm and never afterword recovered good enough use of it to excel in baseball. It was a great blow to him, and to all of us, for that matter, but he bore it manfully and turned his attention to other things.

That left a clear field for me, and I don't mind telling you that I jumped right in and took possession. Father was so gratified over the fact that his sons had actually gone to school an entire year without being expelled or even suspended that he permitted me to take my fill of sports, and I didn't need very hard urging. I didn't realize it then, but I know now that the old gentleman was tickled to death to have some one with whom he could work off a little of the enthusiasm for sport that was his in spite of his age. He was always ready for a game of almost any kind, and I seldom, if ever, knew him to let business interfere.

And right here, now that I have a chance, I want to say that the founder of Marshalltown was an athlete of no ordinary ability. He was a crack shot, a mighty handy man with the ball for those days and a billiard player who was regarded as remarkable by those who came in contact with him. I had learned to play billiards when quite a small boy, having free access to the old-fashioned table in the Anson house whenever it was not otherwise occupied. After a while I got so proficient that not only could I beat the old gentleman nine times out of ten, but could play a better game than any of the traveling men who stopped at the Anson house. In fact, every form of sport came to me naturally; I seemed to inherit it. Father was a sport if ever there was one, and as honest as he was enthusiastic. He was the squarest sport I ever saw, and anything that savored of crookedness met his stern disapproval.

CHAPTER III.

I Win My First Baseball Triumph.

Although I succeeded after returning from college in impressing father with the belief that in his baseball loving son he had an heir who was really worth while, most of the good citizens of Marshalltown did not agree with him. If the vote had been taken I should probably have been branded as a pretty poor excuse of a boy, with never a serious thought for anything except the new game. Of course I had lots of friends—such boys always do have—but they were all of the kind that liked sport better than the regulation business life.

I didn't "pass unnoticed by" anyhow. I was continually doing something to promote gossip, making some grand stand play that kept the Anson family in the public eye. One of my efforts in this direction—one which came very near resulting in a riot—was the direct result of my devotion to baseball. Father had given the land for a public square in the center of the town, and it had been beautified with trees and a good deal of shrubbery. It was really beginning to be a very fair park and the people were taking a good deal of pride in it when, one day, I conceived the idea that it would make a first class ball ground. The more I thought of it the more attractive the scheme became, and I finally resolved to carry it out without asking the advice of any one.

I had never shown a decided fondness for the ax, but one morning I rose at early daybreak and went to work at those trees with a "move on" that would have astonished the good folks who believed that the only kind of hard labor I would tackle was baseball. By the time people were stirring I had cleared a space in that carefully tended public resort big enough to play ball in, and the evidences of my vandalism were scattered all over the plot.

Did I hear anything drop? I don't mind telling you that I did. If the citizens of that law-abiding town had followed their earliest impulses I should probably have been lynched. I don't think I have ever been the object of so much indignant criticism, even on the ball field. It seemed to me that about every man, woman and child in town rose up and called me—just the opposite of blessed. Even the universal craze for the game which had seized the place was forgotten in the spasm of outraged civic virtue that confronted me.

And just about that time a fresh possibility—one that I had neglected to consider carefully—stood out before me in a threatening attitude. How would the old gentleman over in the hotel on the opposite side of the square, the public-spirited citizen who had donated the land to the town, take it? It struck me all in a heap that there might be something doing in that direction. So it was with fear and trembling that I sneaked back to the Anson house.

To my great surprise and relief the old gentleman did not take sides with the town people. Instead of that he actually commended me for what I had done, declaring that the ground couldn't be put to better use. Then he proposed that we take the team right over and dedicate the new ball ground with a good stiff practice.

Even before Sturgis and I went to Notre Dame the Marshalltown baseball team had made quite a reputation throughout the state. At Waterloo, where a tournament was held in 1867, our players had beaten everything that stood up against them. At Belle Plaine, the following year, they put in an appearance to contest for a silk flag offered by the ladies of that town, and such was their fame that the other clubs refused to enter the contest unless they were allowed the odds of six putout as against the regular three. Even with this handicap the Marshalltown boys bore off the flag in triumph. When they got home the whole town turned out to receive them. There was certainly a hot time in the old town that night. I shall never forget the feeling of envy that filled my youthful breast when I saw how those fellows were treated while I, who was only a member of the junior nine, couldn't come in for a slice of it.

Just before we went to Notre Dame Sturgis and I were promoted to the first nine, and it was a proud day for us when we took our places with the team. With father playing third base, my brother at centerfield and myself on second base, the Anson family was fairly well represented on that pioneer organization, and as the team held the state championship for several years it is only fair to infer that the Ansons did their share of the good work.

While we were at Notre Dame—I'm not saying that our absence had anything to do with it, although lots of other folks did say so—that Marshalltown team struck a hoodoo. I shall never forget how hot I was when the news came to us at school that the Des Moines team had gone to Marshalltown and captured that flag, which we had all come to regard as our own exclusive property. I am not saying that I studied very hard on any day, but I don't mind telling you that I quit altogether when that tough news came, and so did Sturgis. From that time until the close of the year we spent all our recreation periods, and any other time we could manage to appropriate, in hard practice. Our chief aim in life at that moment was to snatch that trophy from the hands of the enemy.

About the first thing I did after I reached home was to start in to reorganize the home team. Everybody was feeling mighty glum over the fall down of the club, but I put on a cheerful front and soon succeeded in reviving some of the old symptoms. Father took off his coat and jumped right in with a whoop, and it wasn't long before we had things humming. I didn't wait for anybody to ask me to assume the direction of the business; I waded right in on my own responsibility, and no one seemed to object. When I recall the arbitrary manner in which I run that ball business it makes me smile; no czar or sultan could have been more absolute. How those mature citizens submitted to be dictated to by a mere boy like myself is more that I can understand. I guess my nerve must have hypnotized them.

When I thought it was time to turn the trick we challenged the Des Moines team for the trophy, and it was arranged that we should go to the capital and try to capture it. When we went to the railroad station to take the train almost the entire population of the town turned out to see us off and I realized the big responsibility the Anson family had shouldered so cheerfully. It made me shudder to think what would happen should we be obliged to return without that trophy. For just a moment I weakened; I wondered if I hadn't been just a little bit fresh in putting myself into such a position.

Only a moment, however; my nerve came back as quickly as it went, and with it an extra supply that made me feel the victory was already ours. "Get ready for a big blowout tonight!" I called out as the train pulled out. At that moment the possibility of defeat never occurred to me. That trophy was already won and once again in the possession of its legitimate owners.

Fortunately for me, it turned out that way. We carried that conquering hero front right into the heart of the hostile hosts that awaited us. On our arrival at the capital we found almost as much excitement as we had left behind us. Our preparation to retake the trophy had been no secret, and the Des Moines team knew that the battle would be a hot one. Never was a game more fiercely contested. Excitement ran so high that we were on the point of being mobbed several times. I don't mind telling you that the Anson family came in for a lion's share of the popular criticism. Father was at his best that day and really played a game that would have qualified him for membership on a league team. He and I were on the bases and Sturgis was in the field doing splendid work. It was a great day for the Anson boys, including dad.

We won, too. When we returned to the old town that night, with grimy faces and throats semi-paralyzed by constant yelling, the proprietor of the Anson house carried that coveted silken trophy pinned safely to his shirt front. At first sight of that symbol of our victory the Marshalltown public went into spasms of delight. We were welcomed as heartily and as vociferously as if we had saved the town from some ruthless invader. If there had been any keys to offer us I am sure we should have had the freedom of the city. As it was, we had the best the town afforded and everything was wide open and free as heaven's breezes. I don't mind telling you that it was a great night for the Anson family. And I truly believe that I was forgiven then and there by the most obdurate for turning the town park into a baseball grounds.

CHAPTER IV.

I Enter the Professional Ranks.

I am not saying that I should probably have chosen some other life work if the professional Forest City Baseball club of Rockford, Ill., had not happened to stop over at Marshalltown while on one of its exhibition tours through Iowa after the close of the regular season, but the fact remains that it was due to that circumstance that I made my entry into the professional game at the time I did. How the Forest Citys happened to come to Marshalltown is another story. I have seen several amusing versions of it in the newspapers, but it has always struck me that the story told by A. G. Spalding, who was the pitcher for the Forest Citys at the time, is the most romantic. It may lack substance, but it is so picturesque that I will give it.

"Back in the early seventies," says Spalding, "I was playing with the Forest Citys of Rockford, Ill., which was that season one of the strongest teams in the country. One day during the summer we received a letter from a man who signed himself Anson. It was written at Marshalltown, Ia., and its object was to secure a visit from the Forest Citys to Marshalltown. Mr. Anson modestly stated in his letter that they had a baseball team at that place whose members were of the firm and unanimous opinion that they could under the most favorable circumstances play the Forest Citys several close games. If we would fix upon a few dates in the near future Mr. Anson's club would insure us a warm welcome to Marshalltown and a lively time while we tarried within their hospitable gates.

"The result was an acceptance and the naming of a date for the following week. When the time came our team, accompanied by half a dozen Chicago drummers, ran over to Marshalltown to have some fun with the country team.

"As soon as we got to the hotel the Chicago drummers began to look around for some bets on the game. Somewhat to their surprise, they had no trouble to find numerous men and citizens of Marshalltown ready to back their club at odds. The favorite bet was even money that we would not beat the home team two to one.

"By the time the game began our players and the Chicago drummers had covered about all the spare money there was in the town, and excitement ran high. Business was practically suspended for the afternoon and everybody went to the ball ground to see the great contest.

"One-third of the home nine was composed of the Ansons. The old man played first base, one son played third and his other son guarded second base. And I assure you they made a formidable infield.

"Before the first inning was over Anson pere almost scared me senseless. I was pitching and the old man was the first man to face me. The ball was new and rather hard to handle. The first ball delivered went dangerously close to Pa Anson's head. He dodged and then gave me a look which sent the blood to my heart in a rush. The look unnerved me, for the second ball pitched hit him with a 'dull, sickening thud' in the vicinity of the short ribs.

"It doubled him up for a moment and then he made a dash toward me with his bat in hand. I am satisfied now that I would have fled at his awful approach had my strength not been paralyzed by the terror of the situation. As it was, my inability to budge probably saved me. Holding his bat in one hand and shaking the other fist under my nose Mr. Anson shoulted, 'Young fellow, did you do that on purpose?'

"I assured him on my honor that it was an accident, and after receiving an abject apology he returned to the plate muttering and shaking his head. Throughout all the game thereafter I kept the ball well away from his gigantic person.

"Well, we beat them, I think by the score of 17 to 3. The Ansons had lost all the spare cash they could raise. The town was filled with gloom that night, for the Ansons were mighty in that community and the citizens mourned with the Ansons over their loss."

Now I shouldn't give so much space to this story were it for the fact that the author of it is so largely in the public eye, has shown himself to be such a many-sided man and is so inseparably connected with the rise and progress of the game in this country. Famous as a baseball player, successful as a dealer in sporting goods, a winner in the political field—all that is going some; but when the final glory of literary genius is added—there's a total for you! Of course it adds a lot to the interest of the story to know that my father always declared it to be pure fiction, but that doesn't lessen the author's reputation as an artist.

When the Rockford club came to town on the never-to-be-forgotten occasion a lot of Chicago sports showed up, and they wanted to wager their simoleons that we would be beaten by a score of from 8 to 20 to 1. They found a good many takers among the town folks, who had a lot of confidence in our ability to hold the Forest Citys' score down to a low figure. The whole town turned loose to see the game, and the home team felt considerably elated when, at the end of the ninth inning, the score stood at 18 to 3 in the enemy's favor.

The visitors and their following were disgusted with the good showing we made, and they wanted to arrange for another game next day, offering to cancel a game already scheduled. At that second game they beat us by a score of 35 to 5, and my father always declared that they did it by recovering the liveliest kind of a "Bounding Rock" ball with a "Ryan dead ball" cover. I didn't see them do it, but I do remember that the stitching on that ball was different from anything I had ever seen. It was a mighty clever trick if they really did it.

Anyway, they made the discovery that we could play ball. That same fall, when Rockford was organizing a new professional team, father received a bid for the whole Anson family. Of course he could not leave his business even to become a professional ball player, and he needed Sturgis to help him; so I was the only available Anson, and I signed with the Forest Citys at a salary of $66 a month, which in those days was regarded as fairly good pay for a ball player, especially one who was only eighteen and a novice. Two other members of the team I had organized, Sager and Haskins, were also engaged to play on the Rockford team, and I looked at that as a tribute to the Anson baseball judgment.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910, by Anna Katharine Rohlfs

"Hush!" she prayed, with a frightened gesture toward the house. "No one knows I am here. Mamma thinks me in bed, and papa, who is out, may come home any minute. Oh, Mr. Ranelagh, I'm in such misery, and no one but you can give me any help. I have watched you go by night after night, and I have wanted to call out and beg you to come in and see me or let me go and meet you somewhere, and I have not dared, it was so late. Tonight you have come earlier, and I have slipped out and—oh, Elwood, you won't think badly of me? It's all about Arthur, and I shall die if some one does not help me and tell me how I can reach him with a message."

She was a girl of puny physique and nervous manner—the last sort of person you would expect Arthur Cumberland to admire or even to have patience with and the very last sort who could be expected to endure his rough ways or find anything congenial to herself in his dissipated and purposeless life. But the freaks of youthful passion are endless, and it was evident that they loved each other sincerely.

Reassuringly pressing her hand, I was startled to find a small piece of paper clutched convulsively within it.

"For Arthur," she explained under her breath. "I thought you might find some way of getting to him. Father and mother are so prejudiced. They have never liked him, and now they believe the very worst. They would lock me up if they knew I was speaking to you about him. Mother is very stern and says that all this nonsense between Arthur and myself must stop, that we must never, no matter whether he is cleared or—or"— Silence, then a little gasp.

I hardly blamed the mother.

"I—I love Arthur. I don't think him guilty, and I would gladly stand by him if they would let me. I want him to know this. I want him to get such comfort as he can out of my belief and my desire to serve him. I want to sacrifice myself, but I can't, I can't!" she moaned. "You don't know how mother frightens me. When she looks at me the words falter on my tongue and I feel as if it would be easier to die than to acknowledge what is in my heart."

I could believe her. Mrs Fulton was a strong woman, whom many men shrank from encountering needlessly.

"Yet your mother is your very best friend," I ventured gently.

"Not in this, not in this," she objected. "I must get a word to Arthur—I must."

I saw that she had some deeper reason than appeared for desiring communication with him. I was debating how best to meet the situation and set her right as to my ability to serve her without breaking down her spirit too seriously when I felt her feverish hand pressing her little note into my unwilling palm.

"DON'T READ IT."

"Don't read it," she whispered, innocent of all offense and only anxious to secure my good offices. "It's for Arthur. I've used the thinnest paper, so that you can secrete it in something he will be sure to get. Don't disappoint me. I was sorry for you, too, and glad when they let you out. Both of you are old playmates of mine, but Arthur"—

I had to tell her. I had to dash its small hopes to the ground.

"Forgive me, Ella," I said, "but I cannot carry him this message or even get it to him secretly. I am watched myself. There is a man who sees him constantly and may be induced to assure Arthur of your belief and continued interest in him. That man is his lawyer, Mr. Moffat. Any one will tell you how to reach him."

"No, no," she disclaimed hurriedly, breathlessly. "My last hope was in you. You wouldn't think the worse of me for—for what I've done, or let mother know. I couldn't tell a stranger even if he went right to Arthur with it." Then, stepping up to my side, she whispered in my ear, "There is something I could say which might"—

I stopped her. Right or wrong, I stopped her. She possessed evidence, or thought she did, which might help to clear Arthur. Evidence of what? Evidence which would implicate Carmel? The very thought unnerved me.

"I had rather not be the recipient of this confidence if it is all important or at all in the line of testimony. Remember the man I mentioned. He will be glad to hear of anything helpful to his client."

Her distress mounted to passion.

"It's—it's something that will destroy my mother's confidence in me. I disobeyed her. I did what she would never have let me do if she had known. I—I used to meet Arthur in the driveway back by the barns. I had a key made to the little side door so that I could do it. I used to meet him late. I would get up out of bed when mother was asleep and dress myself and sit at the window until I heard him come up the street. Then I would steal down and catch him on his way to the stables. I—I had a good reason for this, Elwood. He knew I would be there, and it brought him home earlier and not quite so—so full of liquor. If he was very bad he would come up the other way, and I would sit waiting and crying till 3 o'clock struck, then creep into my bed and try to sleep. Nights and nights I have done this. Nothing else in life seemed so important, for it did hold him back a little, but not so much as if he had loved me more. He loved me some, but he couldn't have loved me very much or he would have sent me some word or seen me, if but for a minute, since Adelaide's death. And he hasn't—he hasn't—and that makes it harder for me to acknowledge the watch I kept on him and how I know he never went through our grounds for the second time that night. He went once, about 9, but not later. I am certain of this, for I was looking out for him till 3 in the morning. If he came back and then returned afterward to town it was through his own street, and that takes so long he would never have been able to get to the place they said he did at the time they have agreed upon. I know that he needs some one to come out boldly in his cause, and I want to be that some one, and I will be, too, whatever happens to me, if—if I must," she faintly added.

I was dumb, but not from lack of interest or from unsympathetic feeling for this brave hearted girl. The significance of the situation was what held me speechless. Here was help for Arthur without my braving all the horrors of Carmel's downfall by any impulsive act of my own. For a moment hope in one bursting and renewing flame soared high in my breast. I was willing to accept my release in this way. I was willing to shift the load from my own back to the delicate shoulders of this shrinking but ardent girl. Then reason returned if consideration halted, and I asked myself: "But is the help she offers of any practical worth? Would her timid declarations, trembling as she was between her awe of her parents and her desire to serve the man she loved, weigh in the balance against the evidence accumulated by the district attorney?"

It seemed doubtful. She would not be believed, and I should have to back up her statement with my own hitherto suppressed testimony—a woman to be sacrificed whichever course I took. Such native chivalry as remained to me urged me to spare this little friend of mine. Then Carmel's image rose before me, glorious, impassioned, driven by the fierce onrush of some mighty inherent force into violent deeds undreamed of by most women, but when thus undriven, gentle in manner, elevated in thought, refined as only a few rare characters are refined, and my heart stood still again with doubt and I could not say: "It is your duty to save him at all hazards. Brave your father, brave your mother, brave public opinion and possibly the wrecking of your whole future, but tell the truth and rid your days of doubt, your nights of remorse." I could not say this. So many things might happen to save Arthur, to save Carmel, to save the little woman before me. I would trust that future, temporize a bit and give such advice as would relieve us both from immediate fear without compromising Arthur's undoubted rights to justice.

Meanwhile something must be said at once. As soon as she looked my way again I spoke:

"Ella, this is no easy problem you have offered me. I can sympathize with you, possibly as no one else can, but I cannot reach Arthur either by word or by message. Your father is the man to appeal to in case interference becomes necessary and you must speak. You have not quite the same fear of him that you have of your mother. He's a just man. You may shock his fatherly susceptibilities, you may even lose some of his regard, but he will do the right thing by you and Arthur. Will you?"

"I will try. I could only tell father on my knees, but I will do it if—if I must. Now I must go. You have been good, only I asked too much." And with no other farewell she left me and disappeared up the walk.
